DAN'S ONLINE MOTORCYCLE REPAIR COURSE PDF

¶ Below is the Online Motorcycle Repair Course PDF. I will try to take you from knowing nothing about Motorcycle Repair to being able repair your own and others Motorcycles. How much you learn and how well you repair your motorcycle will depend on you. Remember what the Bible tells us... " And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;" (Colossians 3:23) In other words always do your very best. In reality, you are really working for God, and not man.

- This course is designed for three types of people.

1. People who want to do their own work.
2. People who want to know how the work is done, but do not want to do it themselves.
3. People who want to do it, for Pay, for other people.

- Click on the topics below to get started.
- Remember to Click on all blue underlined words or pictures to get the full story!
- If you print out the entire course it will take a lot of paper and ink for it is Thousands of pages long. Perhaps just print out what you need.

GETTING STARTED

1. Just Do It! Getting started for the very first time.
2. Shop Safety Avoiding the Pain.
3. Helmets Skidlids, and why you need one.
4. 2 & 4 Stroke Engine Basics How an Engine Works.
5. Motorcycle Glossary Some Very Basic Definitions for the Beginner.

6. Shop Manuals The Spec's for your Engine.
7. The Ultimate Shop Manual The Spec's for the Human Machine.
8. Online Manuals Free Shop and Parts Manuals Online.
9. A Career in Motorcycle Repair A different view, That's for sure.
10. Motorcycle Flate Rates What is that job of work worth?
11. Quick Troubleshooting Do These Things first!
12. Trouble Shooting a Used Bike Should I buy that thing or not?
13. Trouble Shooting a Bike that Will Not Start. Making that old dog run.
14. Definitions What does a Tune-Up or Top-End Job, consist of?
15. Troubleshooting Plan... Planning how to fix the problem.
16. Basic Tools For the beginner...Tools 101!
17. Advanced Tools The next step up, or what do I want for next Christmas.
18. Special Tools More New Tools.
19. Making Special Tools Save Money, Make your own Special Tools.
20. Making a Buzz Box Creating a Sacred Box of Buzz.
21. Impact Driver... Your first Special Tool.
22. Good Shop Practice... Go fast without really trying.
23. HomeWork Every School has homework... Here is yours!
24. HomeWork 2... Don't worry, this will be fun!

GENERAL STUFF

25. Engine Start Up Start'n her up.
26. New Engine Break-In Breaking it in without breaking it up.
27. Mysterious Two Stroke Seizure Getting stuck without trying!
28. HopUp Getting you more power.
29. Remove Your Seat "Fix My Bike ? ? ? I can't even get the seat off." Here's Tips on how to do it.
30. Exploded Seat Latches Blow those Seats Off.
31. Chemicals Some slippery stuff, that.
32. Cleaning Parts You can really clean up with this one.
33. Air Tools How to use Air Tools Right.
34. Hot & Cold How to make a part's Temperature work for you.
35. Worrying Removing that stuck, rusted, part.

Can I Do This?

"Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence.

Talent Will not.
Nothing is more common then unsuccessful men with talent.

Genius will not.
Unrewarded genius is almost a proverb.

Education will not.
The world is full of educated derelicts.

Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent."

There seems to be basically three main types of people who take the Motorcycle Repair Course.

1. People who don't want to really do the repair, but do want to know how.
2. People who want to do the work on their own bikes and save money.
3. People who want to earn some money repairing motorcycles.

The people who just want to know how to do it... and nothing else... can go back to the repair course. Those of you who really want to do it, read on.

People are always e-mailing me and asking about repair schools or courses. I hate to be negative and I don't want to bad mouth anyone, but I just don't think much of cheap ones ($800-$2,000). I have heard some good things about the expensive ones but you will be paying $15,000 to $25,000 for them. Ouch ! Is there another way ? I think there is, or at least a more logical path. No matter what you do, you will have to have tools, shop manuals, and you will have to actually do it. Look at the tool pages and get yourself a basic set. Now, you need a victim ! Ask around, tell your friends, look in the want ads and find a cheap bike. Take it home, get a shop manual for it, read through the Online Motorcycle Repair Course and start going through it. If it runs, give it a complete tune-up. If it doesn't run, start troubleshooting it. Figure out what is wrong and fix it. Make it run and run good.

This may end up costing you a little money, but that's OK. Now think about this. If you are considering paying $15,000 for a motorcycle course why not spend two or three hundred for a broken bike and another three or four hundred to fix it ? You need to know if you like doing this. If you don't, you still have the bike to ride or sell. If you do like fixing motorcycles, you are now in a much better position to decide if you really want to pony up a small fortune to learn more. If you find that this repair thing is OK, but you'd rather not do it all the time, you have fixed your bike, saved your bucks and can now ride. What could be better ?

I like to visit the sites that link to me and one of them thought I was a bit optimistic in thinking you could do all these repairs on your motorcycle. He liked my site and a link is a link, right ? However, I disagree with him. You can do it... if you want to.

When I first started working on bikes I knew absolutely nothing about it. How dumb was I ? Well, when I got my first bike, a Honda 55cc, they showed me the starting drill. Turn on the gas, turn on the key, put on the choke, and kick. He then turned the key and gas off. Well, somehow I thought part of the startup drill was to turn off the little lever on the carb which was the fuel on/off lever. The little 55 would go several miles before it ran the float bowel out of gas. Then I would turn it on again, start it up, wonder "Why did it die ? It's always doing that !", and then TURN OFF the gas again ! Well, I did this for a good month before I realized what I was doing. If I had known any less, the bike would not have run at all ! Just by reading this far, you know more than I did ! I wrote the "Online Motorcycle Repair Course" for this dumb kid who can barely figure out how to start his little bike. If I had had this information when I started twisting wrenches it would have saved me hundreds of hours of wasted labor, not to mention hundreds of dollars worth of ruined parts. Shoot, the spark plug page alone would have done that.

One young man e-mailed and said he just really wanted some kind of diploma from a school that said he knew what he was doing. Another man wrote and said he wanted to build custom bikes and sell them. He felt his future customers deserved a builder who had the best school training. I can understand their concerns. However, the quality of the job largely depends on the desire of the technician to do a good job and his willingness to spend the time to do the job right. Formal training is good, but desire to do a good job and experience is better. We assume you want to do a good job, right ? That's why you are here and that's why you are considering paying a lot of money for formal education on the subject, but there is no substitute for experience. You need to do it, and you need to do it a lot.

The way to get that experience is to get an engine and JUST DO IT ! Just getting started can be the hardest part of the whole job. For some reason everyone wants to do the job quickly and perfectly the first time, and they seem to think a formal class will do this for them. Sorry to say, it will not. Your first attempt, likely as not, will be a disaster. OK, so what ? Everyone has to start somewhere. The really important thing is to keep at it and to do a better job, each time you try, than the time before. Got that ? We want forward progress. Each job done better than the one before it.

It's best to buy a separate bike to work and learn on. That way you can jump on your main bike and go for a ride when things get frustrating, and they will get frustrating. Having a separate bike also allows you to spend as much time as is needed to do the job right. Another advantage is if you make a really big error, and you just might, the cost of the broken part is not so bad. This brings us to a very real fear all new mechanics have. What if I break a part ? OK, what if you do ? Will the world end ? I think not. If you use the right tools, in the right manner, take your time, and follow instructions, the risk of parts breakage is quite low.

If you just leap in, without thinking, in a big hurry, and without doing your home work, odds are you will break something. I'll give you an example I just read about. Two guys had Ducati motorcycles. They talked the mechanic into letting them watch while he adjusted their valves. With the valve mechanism all apart, the mechanic turned his back, to reach for a tool, and one of the guys walked up to his bike and turned the engine over. This bent his valves. Why did he do that. That was just a plain stupid thing to do. If you repeatedly do impulsive, stupid things, without thinking or caring, you will break parts. The cure ? Change your behavior.

So, bottom line, what do you do ? Easy !

1. Get a cheap little bike. Say a 50-250cc, four stroke single, or even a two stroke single.
2. Get some tools.
3. Get the correct shop manual and read it.
4. Read my online Motorcycle Course.
5. JUST DO IT !

If the bike runs. Start with a simple tune-up. Do it several times till you are comfortable doing the tune-up. Then do the brakes. Take them apart and put them back together. Do it several times too. Get comfortable with your tools and the bike. Now go a little deeper. Take the head and cylinder off and put them back on again. Use new gaskets. If you have the money rebuild it with a new, oversize piston, valves, cam chain, and all the rest. Do it right. Reread the shop manual. Go back over the Motorcycle Course. Start collecting any shop manuals you can get. Read through them and Hi-light the parts you find interesting. I like to take a blue felt Hi-lighter and Hi-light all the specs. But that's just me. If the bike is not running, read the trouble shooting page and figure out what's wrong and fix it. The main thing is to JUST DO IT.

If you want to stack the odds in your favor and have the money to do so, get a running bike to learn on. Then you will know it's what you did and not something else, if it will not start, when you finish your first repair. What's that you say ? It did start and now it won't ? So what ! I redid my first ever tune-up, on my main bike, on my one and only bike, on my running, one and only, I use it to get to school every day bike, three time before it would even start. It took another six or eight tries before it started to run good, and that was just for a lousy tune-up ! A four stroke, single cylinder would be best, because two stroke bikes are on their way out because of pollution concerns. If you can only find a two stroke ? That's OK. The important thing is to get started.

If it takes you try after try to learn how to do the job right, don't worry about it. This DOES NOT indicate you are stupid. Tests in both the United State's military and the Soviet Union's military showed that no matter how long it took personal to learn a specific task, once the task is learned, they could all do it every bit as well as personal that quickly learned the task. In other words, on matter how long it takes you to learn how to do a job, you can do it just as well as a person who learns to do it quickly. I'm not talking about how fast you do the job, but how fast it takes you to learn how to do it. So take your time when you learn. There is no hurry. Do it slow, do it right. The speed will come in it's own good time.

If you still seem to have trouble learning, it may be helpful to have someone read the Motorcycle Repair Course and/or shop manual to you. In the army, they always teach you the same way.

1. Tell you how to do it.
2. Show you how to do it.
3. Have you do it.

This has to do with the three ways people learn. Usually, you will learn things best by learning in one of these three ways. Some people learn best by reading about how to do something. Others learn best by hearing how it is to be done. Still others learn best by doing. Figure out which style fits you best. This will help out a lot.

Now if money is a problem, there are several ways around that. Although, if you were considering a formal $20,000 course, one would think a few hundred would not be a problem. Check this out. A guy e-mails me and says he wants to know how to take his rear wheel off but can't figure out how and he has no shop manual 'cause money's tight. Then he asks what aftermarket exhaust system will give him the most horsepower. He doesn't have money for a $30.00 shop manual, but does have money for a $300.00 exhaust system. Does this sound kinda stupid to you ? Well, I cater to stupid people too, (been there, done that !) so I wrote up a page on wheel removal. Anyway, Ask around. Tell people what you are trying to do. You'll be surprised how often a friend, neighbor or uncle will have a bike and will just give it to you, once they know it will not go to waste. Same goes for tools. Put out the word and, once people see you are serious about this, many of them will be happy to help you out. Remember this, once you get going in mechanics, try to return the favor to some younger mechanic wana-be.

Take your time and do your homework. Remember Second Timothy 2:15

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

This applies not only to the Bible, but to your shop manual as well.

SHOP SAFETY

¶ Working on motorcycles can be dangerous, but it doesn't have to be. Common sense can go a long way to turn a major problem into a minor one.

Minor cuts, if left untreated, can easily become infected and end up costing you a finger. Sandy, the shop foreman of an auto shop I once worked at, told the story of once almost loosing a finger to a very minor cut. It got infected and puffed up like a balloon. Doctors had to cut it open and drain everything out... Yuck! So after he told me this story, I took his advice and stopped work, washed my newly cut finger off, and put some disinfectant and a Band-Aid on it.

This is what I do when I get a cut. Immediately wash with soap and water. Then rinse it with a 3% solution of Hydrogen-Peroxide. Then put on some antiseptic cream and a Band-Aid. If you do this immediately, it usually does not hurt much. If you wait a while to do it, it WILL hurt. At night I leave the Band-Aid off so the wound will dry. If it gets a bit infected I squeeze the infected part with my fingers as hard as I can stand it. This sounds strange and it hurts like everything, but it seems to get rid of infected liquid in the wound and helps it heal. Put on more antiseptic cream. If it still stays infected, soak in a mixture of hot water and Epson salt. Make the water as hot as you can stand it. Again, more antiseptic cream. If it STILL stays infected, a trip to the Doctor is indicated.

Burns come, basically, in three flavors. First degree, like a sunburn. Second degree, which produces a blister, and third degree, which is a burn that goes deep, deep into the skin. A real crispy critter. Most of your burns will, hopefully, be first and second degree. Put Ice on them as soon as you can. This cuts the pain and helps keep the blisters small. With a third degree burn, you need to see a Doctor. A burn this bad may require a skin graft.

It's a good idea to keep a First Kit in your tool kit AND to use it. Even a minor cut or burn can really slow you down if you get it infected.

Other things you can include in your tool kit is baking soda, water, and a good working Fire Extinguisher.

If you get battery acid on you, the baking soda will neutralize it. Water will also wash acid off your warm, quivering, flesh. If you get acid on you and do nothing, the acid will give you a VERY bad chemical burn. If you have water and baking soda the problem, and the pain, disappears.

You will be working a lot with gasoline. Any spark, including static electricity will set it off. Plugging and unplugging electrical connections and performing electric starter tests can produce big sparks. If you light yourself off, things can be very painful indeed. A cheap fire extinguisher cure this problem and eliminates pain!

Engine backfires can also set a motorcycle air box, say like on a Honda Gold Wing, on fire. You might find that you can almost blow out the flames, but not quite. You might find that after ten or so really big puffs of air that you are hyperventilating and getting light headed and that you are wondering whether you can get to the fire extinguisher and back before your customers $4000.00 lead wing melts. You might, you might, yes, you might ! So you might want to put that fire extinguisher REAL close to the work at hand next time. Ah... trust me on this... You really NEED a good fire extinguisher and you NEED it close at hand!

Safety glasses will help keep inappropriate material out of your eyes. This you will find is a very good thing!

Yes, it's just a test ride around the block, but what if the countershaft sprocket comes off and locks up the rear wheel? Wear a helmet, leathers, gloves... just in case.

Put all oily rags and paper in a metal container and keep a lid on it. This will prevent spontaneous combustion.

Keep all gasoline in air tight containers which are made specifically for gasoline. This may seem simple, but far too many people are not scared of gasoline. I am terrified of the stuff. One cup of gasoline has the explosive power of two sticks of dynamite. If you leave a pan of it out uncovered the fumes can be ignited by any spark and you will not believe the fire it will start until you see it! Special gasoline containers made with steel or thick, gas proof, plastic, are needed. No milk jugs need apply!

Clean your parts with solvent and NOT with gasoline.

Lastly, start thinking about what you are doing. If you are really pushing hard on that screw driver, and it slips off the screw, where will it go ? Into the work bench, or into you hand? When you really pull on that wrench and it slips off the bolt. Where will your knuckles go? Into something hard and sharp? Try to think ahead. Pain hurts, so avoid it.

One more thing. Being a Macho Man or Women will NOT stop a piece of wire, from the wire brush wheel on your bench grinder, from ramming into your eye. Be a pansy, wear safety glasses, helmets, gloves, and use safety equipment.

Like I always say,

"If you don't, It's OK... I don't care, it's not my body, and it won't HURT me at all!"

2015 UPDATE

Hear, ye children, the instruction of a father,
and attend to know understanding.
For I give you good doctrine,
forsake ye not my law.
Proverbs 4:1-2

Well, maybe not so much because I'm not really changing anything. I got an E-mail the other day from a nice gentleman who told me I was all wrong and that I needed a link to the Mayo Clinic. Hydrogen-Peroxide is bad and will damage you. Ice on a 2nd degree burn will give you frost bite. He even offered to re-write the page correcting all the, umm, errors. I thanked him and turned him down. He was TOTALLY wrong on everything.

I have been a motorcycle mechanic for over Forty years. EVERYTHING I tell you comes from a lot of experience. Story time.

I first learned about Hydrogen-Peroxide from Medics in the army. In 1973 I was a Paratrooper in the 82nd Airborne and I was working as a lowly generator operator at a training camp called Recondo school. Recondo School taught patrolling, ambushes and generally how to kill people. It is the army you know, that is what we do.

My Generators provided power for the entire camp. We were way out in the field and beyond the power lines. My Generators need gasoline and we brought it out to the camp in 500 gallon, rubber, fuel bladders. These fuel bladders, when empty weighed around 300 to 400 pounds. Usually, I got students to load the empty bladders on to a 2 1/2 ton truck. 50 young paratroopers can easily pick up a 300 pound fuel bladder. The problem was that we were between classes and there were only myself and two other troopers to pick up that bladder and that was not easy. So I hooked the bladder to a 1/2" steel cable, ran the cable up and over a big tree branch and to the bumper hitch of a 2 1/2 ton truck. Pull the bladder off the ground about three feet, back another 2 1/2 ton truck up to it and push the fuel bladder onto the truck. What could possibly go wrong?

Well, we pulled the bladder off the ground, backed up the truck and tried to push it onto the truck bed. Naturally, it did not want to go in so I climbed up on to the truck bed and tried to pull the bladder into the truck. Being smart I grabbed the steel cable just above where it attached to the fuel bladder and a good two feet below the tree branch.

I told the driver with the cable to pull forward a foot. My driver thought I was talking to him and drove off. I fell off the back of the truck and still holding onto the cable jumped onto the fuel bladder like a squirrel running up a tree. At the same time the driver with the cable pulled forward two feet and firmly caught my hand between the cable and the tree.

OK, I climb up on the branch and there I sat. 2 1/2 ton truck on one side and a 300 pound fuel bladder on the other and the cable between the two slowly cutting my four fingers off with the branch as the cutting board. What fun! I'm yelling "Stop, Stop, Stop" at the top of my lungs so everyone stops and comes around and look at me. Then everyone starts laughing at me. Perhaps I looked comical, perched on a branch while a cable saws my fingers off.

I must confess I lost it. I was screaming and yelling and using very bad language. Then our Lieutenant came up to find out what all the noise was about. He looked, he saw, and then he laughed too. I called him and them every dirty name I could think of and then I called their mothers and wives and daughters and grandmothers and great grandmothers and I was working my way back up their combined family trees and I very discreetly said they all wore army boots. Now a private is not supposed to say that to an officer but I was slowly LOOSING MY FINGERS.

Then the Lieutenant stopped laughing, gave, a few orders and POP! I was free. I jumped down and took a good look at my fingers. What a mess. I thought I could see the white bone but the Medics told me later that what I saw was the ligaments going down each finger.

Now the Medics took over and poured Hydrogen-Peroxide all over the wound, clipped all the chunks of meat off and cleaned all the dirt out with a stiff bristled brush. All the while pouring Hydrogen-Peroxide over everything. They then put on lots of stuff called Bacitracin (The stuff that is used in today's Neosporin) and bandaged me up. It did not hurt at all because the wound was so fresh.

I was amazed at how fast the wound healed. It absolutely sold me on using Hydrogen-Peroxide to clean a wound and Bacitracin to help it heal. To say that this is bad? Well, you have left the path of wisdom. Can a Doctor do better? I would hope so. My Doctor charges $180 for a fifteen minute visit. I pay him cash so he gives me a discount of $30. Hydrogen-Peroxide costs two dollars a bottle and a tube of Neosporin about five dollars. If you think the stuff the Doc uses for a minor wound is worth paying $140 bucks extra then go for it. Just remember he gives the same guarantee I do which is none at all!

Same thing with ice for a second degree burn and let me tell you, I have had a lot of burns. Hot engines and exhaust pipes can really light you up. The Medicos keep changing their minds on ice for burns.

When I was in the Boy Scouts (early 1960s) I burned my hand on a hot griddle. The medical wisdom of the time said ice was bad so they just put some burn ointment on, Butesin Picrate I believe, and WOW did it hurt and I got a gigantic blister. Then all the Medicos said use ice and when everyone did the pain and the big blisters went away. Now ice has lost favor again. Why I don't know. I just know ice works.

I usually wrap the ice cube in a paper towel so I can hold on to it easily. Now just keep the ice on the burn till it stops hurting. If you remove the ice the pain will start again. Keep the ice on the burn until it stops hurting when you remove the ice, which will be about two hours or so. Now I just don't think there is anything better because cold from the ice restricts the blood vessels and stops a big blister from forming. I do not think any cream can do that. But if you do, get out another $150 bucks and have at it. Just don't try to take away my ice.

Same thing with all the things I tell you. I could go on and on. It all comes from lots and lots of personal experience and all of it comes with the exact same guarantee every Hospital and Doctor in our great nation gives. Which is none at all!

Like I always say,

"If you don't, It's OK... I don't care,
it's not my body, and it won't HURT me at all!"

MOTORCYCLE HELMETS

"A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself;
but the simple pass on, and are punished"

¶ Like it or not motorcycle riding does entail some risk... just like everything else. In every statistical report I have ever read, the figures are always the same. In all fatal accidents about 80% of the deaths were caused by head injuries. This is true of both motorcycles and, get this, CARS. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure this one out. Be prudent... foresee evil... hide yourself from it... wear a Helmet.

Now, I'm 100% against Mandatory Helmet Laws for adults, but if you ride and don't wear a helmet, you are doing a foolish thing. There are some who say the weight of the helmet can break your neck or that it hurts your peripheral vision. What a load of BS. If you are hit hard enough to break your neck it would have splattered your head without the helmet. Either way you are dead. For the other, just turn your head... Duh! Sorry if I offend. I have never suffered fools well and this is no exception.

If you don't want to wear a helmet, be a man (or woman!), and just say you prefer not to wear one and will live with the risk. Don't give a lot of BS that it's safer without one. If it was safer, racers would not be wearing them. Speaking of racers, I have a number of photographs of racers sliding on their helmets. The majority were able to pick up their bikes and keep going. I have NO pictures of anyone sliding on their heads, without a helmet, and living.

Several years ago a young man, about 18, came into my shop. I had a junkie, old, used helmet and he bought it, along with a flat face shield. About a week later he came back in to get another flat shield. Seems he fell off on a dirt road corner and ruined the other one. Said his head was still ringing. We tried to put it on but one of the side snaps just would not line up. We started looking at that helmet. There wasn't a scratch on it. It looked good. But if you looked at it just the right way it was real obvious. The whole side was caved in. It had saved his life. Think about it. Like the Bible says. Look ahead, see the danger, and prepare for it.

Here's another thought on safety. You will notice that almost all veteran riders wear leather. Truth be known, if you ride long enough, you're going to fall off. Just a fact of life... live with it. In the event of a spill, Leather gloves, jacket and pants, will make things much easier to take. Don't forget good leather shoes. Many is the time I've saved myself from a fall with a good dab with my foot. If you are wearing a thong sandal... ?

I see guys, all the time, riding around on 160 MPH bikes with nothing on but shorts and thongs. They might as well tattoo a big "I'm a CHERRY" on their backs. I hate looking like a newbe, but I guess these guys think it's cool. Raspberries on your hide are not cool. What are raspberries? Hit the pavement once without leather and you'll find out.

While you will want to wear the best helmet you can, anything is better than nothing.

I, in my foolish youth, once lived in good, ol' Southern California. Down there everyone splits lanes. No one ever seemed to get hurt. Now, they did get a lot of drivers mad at them but I got to admit, if you split lanes, it is not as dangerous as it looks. I never did it, call me a wimp, it just never looked like a good idea.

I just read a report from the University of California Berkeley. Seems it really is not as dangerous as I had thought. Who would have thunk it? If you would like to read the report in PDF Click Here.

HOW AN ENGINE WORKS
"THE BASICS"

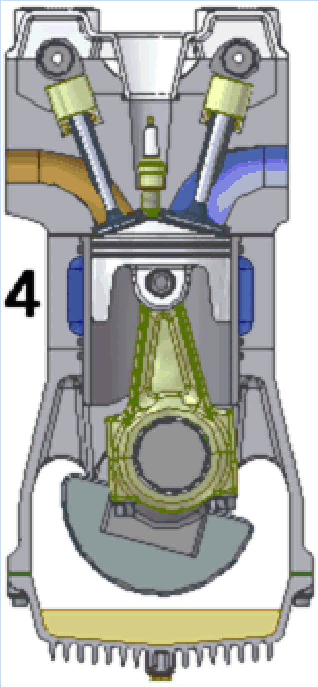
To start any engine, Two or Four stroke, you must have Three things.

One- A burnable mixture of something. It can be gasoline, starting fluid, carb cleaner, shoot, it could be spray deodorant! But it must be able to burn.

Two- It must be compressed, that is under compression by the piston.

Three- there must be a way to ignite the compressed mixture at the right time.

If all three things are present, the engine MUST run. It may not run long and it may not run good, but it will run. Always remember that! The reason I say that is because engines can do funny things. Sometimes things that shouldn't work... work. Other times, things that should work... don't. We need to remember that there is a reason why it works and why it doesn't work. If you did it all right then it MUST work! If it doesn't work...you did something wrong. When things don't work, remember these three things and go back and double check your work.



In an engine these things occur as part of a cycle. That cycle is basically this -

1. SUCK
2. SQUEEZE
3. BURN
4. BLOW

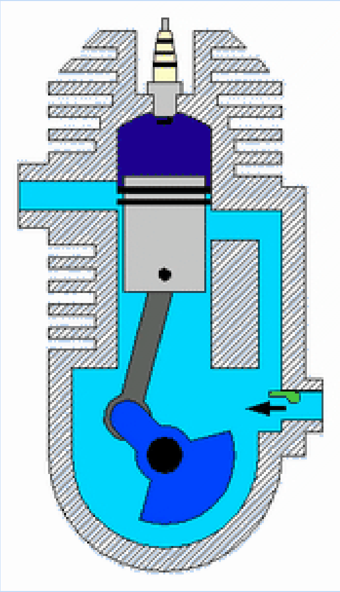
The fuel mixture must be brought into the cylinder -SUCK, compressed -SQUEEZE, ignited -BURN, and then expelled from the cylinder -BLOW. All reciprocating engines must go through these steps no matter what the design of the engine (two-stroke, four-stroke, whatever).



In a Four-Stroke engine the intake valve opens and the piston goes down, sucking the fuel mixture into the cylinder. The intake valve then closes as the piston comes back up squeezing the mixture. Spark now occurs and the burning gases expand, pushing the piston down with lots of power. As the piston comes up again, the exhaust valve opens and the burnt gases are blown out of the engine and the process starts over again.

This is all done in four strokes of the piston.
Piston down-Suck ...Piston up-Squeeze ... Piston down-Burn ... Piston up-Blow.
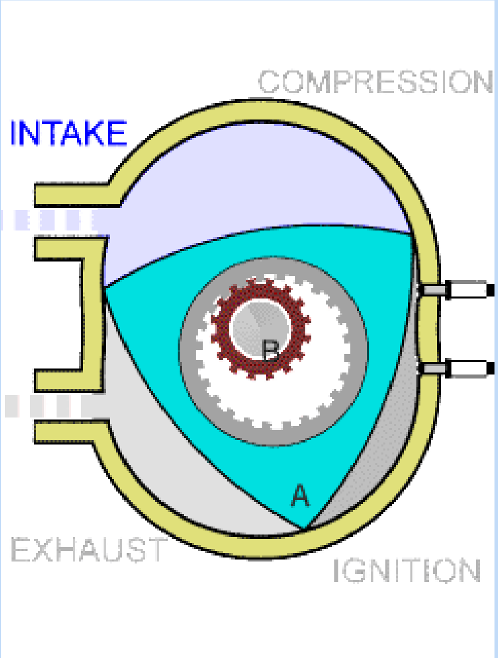
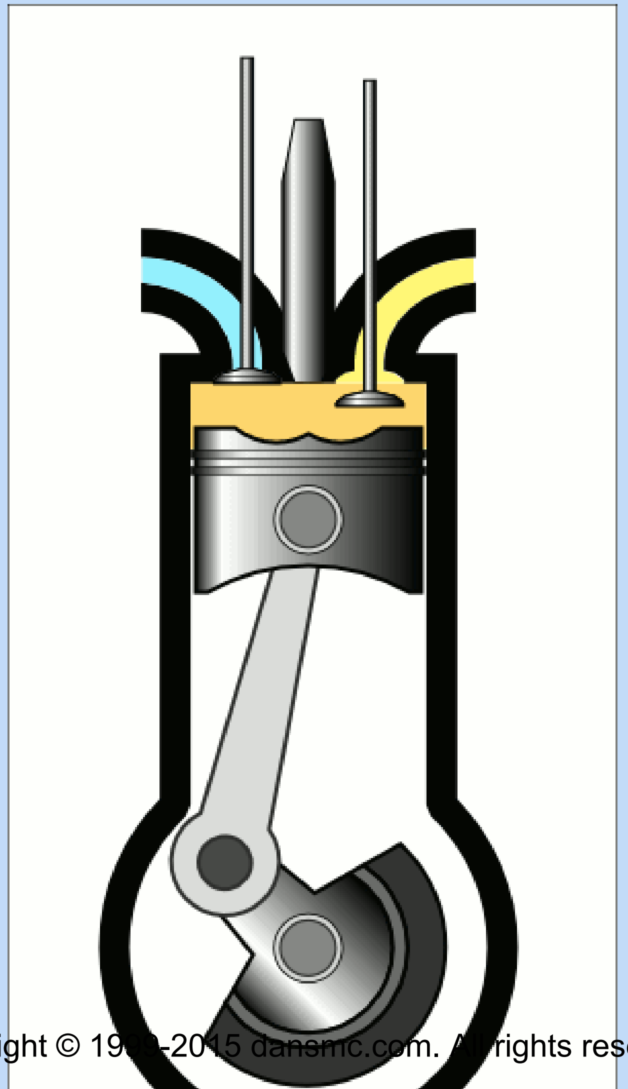
Four-Strokes.



In a Two-Stroke engine the piston goes down, compressing the fuel mixture under the piston and blowing it into the cylinder. As this mixture blows in it also blows the burnt exhaust gases out. The fuel mixture is blown into the cylinder through passages ( Ports ) in the cylinder walls. The piston comes up, covering the ports in the cylinder walls and compressing or squeezing the mixture. This also creates a vacuum in the crankcase under the piston, sucking the fuel mixture into the crankcase. The spark then ignites the mixture and the burning gases push the piston down, starting everything again.



This is all done in two strokes of the piston.
Piston down-Suck & Blow... Piston up-Squeeze & Burn
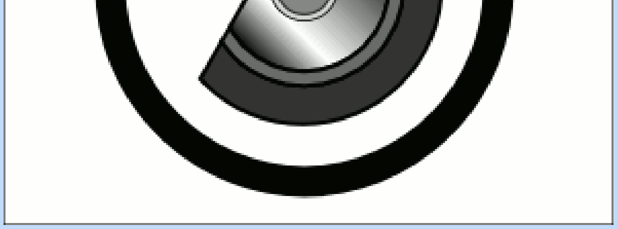
Two-Strokes.



The rotary engine was used on several makes of motorcycle. Suzuki, Hercules and Norton are the only manufacturers who made production Rotary Motorcycles. At least they are the only ones I know of. Not many were made and they all have been gone for many years.

Diesel engines operate just like four stroke engines. The only differences are these. Instead of a spark plug there is a fuel injector and there is very high compression, like about 18 to 1. The first stroke draws in only air. The second stroke compresses this air and just before top-dead-center of the compression stroke the fuel injector injects fuel. The compressed air is very hot and when the injector injects fuel it ignites and starts to burn. The burning fuel forces the piston down, third stroke, and on to the fourth, exhaust stroke. The process then starts anew.

Diesel engines are used currently (?) on only two production motorcycles that I am aware of. Kawasaki makes a KLR650-based diesel motorcycle for use with NATO and Royal Enfield made 325cc and 435cc single-cylinder diesel engine motorcycles. I have never seen one of these bikes up close. In fact, I am not even sure they are still in production so I would not worry too much about having to repair one.

That's all there is to it. There are other engine designs but they are not used much, if at all, in production motorcycles.

SHOP MANUALS

¶ The first thing you should buy for your motorcycle, even before gas and oil, is a Shop manual. Every thing you need to know about your motorcycle is in that Shop Manual. It will save you time... Lots of time, and it will save you money... Lots of money. EVERYTHING I tell you on this web site is meant to be used with a Shop Manual. You absolutely, positively MUST have a Shop Manual for the bike you are working on.

But Dan, you might say, Shop Manuals cost a lot of money, and reading them takes time. How does this help me? Ok, good question..... Once upon a time I had to put new wheel bearings in my motorcycle, a Norton it was.....front wheel..... 750 Atlas. Hey, I are a great mechenic right? Shoot, I don't need no book. ( DUH ! ) I work for almost an hour... no luck... they will not come out. Soooo, I get the Shop Manual out and I read how to do it. It then took LESS THEN ONE MINUTE to knock both bearings out. There's your time.

Now what about money? Well, every once in a while, usually on the crank or cluch end, there will be a LEFTHAND thread nut. If you ever snap one of those off it's new crank time, and that, my friend, will cost you a lot of money. What about piston clearance...Ring end gap...torque values for head bolts, all that good stuff can cost you money if you do it wrong. With a Shop Manual you'll do it right the first time.

Factory manuals are best. (most of the time, anyway) I really like Haynes manuals too, and Clymer manuals are good. If you are working on older bikes, and if you can find them, Glynns manuals are excellent. You can get shop manuals fron a lot of different places. The local dealer for your brand of motorcycle will have, or can order, a factory manual for your bike. Your local book store can get you any of the Clymer or Haynes manuals. The local Library will have some manuals on older bikes, as will a used book store. You can also find them at a motorcycle parts and accessories store, and on the Internet. In fact, over the years, I have down loaded over one hundered Gigabytes of Shop Manuals from the Internet. They are not hard to find, just look around.

Remember....

"YOU NEVER HAVE TIME TO DO IT RIGHT,BUT YOU ALWAYS HAVE TIME TO DO IT OVER !"

If You Don't, It's OK, I Don't Care.It's Not My Bike...It's Not My Money.

THE ULTIMATE SHOP MANUAL

A shop manual is a must when working on any engine. In it you will find the exact, right way to maintain and repair your engine. All the clearances, settings, and specifications are laid out clearly... all you have to do is follow them! It's great to have information from the people that designed and built your motorcycle. Use a factory shop manual and you will never go wrong.

Wouldn't it be great if we could get a shop manual for ourselves? A book written by the person who designed us, and made us? A manual on the human condition with all the specifications and settings to make us run (or live?) best?

Well, here's good news. There is such a manual... it is called the Bible.

"The Bible, but Dan",some people might say "it's just a book of fables, it's not real." But they would be wrong. People say things like that because they simply have not looked into the matter. No other book has been checked out as thoroughly as the Bible. What's that you say... you don't believe me? Good...excellent... you are on the right track. Check everything out for yourself. Demand the facts. Look for the truth. The Bible will not disappoint you.

The Bible is not just a good shop manual for how to live our lives. It's alot better than that. From the first verses in Genesis, to the last words in Revelations, it tells us about a God who loved us so much that He came to earth as a man to die for our sins so we would not have to. Then to top it off, he gave us eternal life! All we have to do is believe in Him. Who is he? He is the Lord Jesus Chirst.

In the book of Acts,(Acts 16:30), in the New Testament, a jailer asks ..." What must I do to be saved? "...and is answered...." believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you shall be saved..." It is that simple. We can't work our way to Heaven. Romans 3:23 tells us..." all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. " We cannot save ourselves, we need a savior and his name is Jesus. All other world leaders, religious leaders, prophets, seers, those who claim to know the way to God are dead. They offer no hope. But the tomb of Jesus is empty! He appeared to hundreds of witnesses. He alone can offer eternal life because He is alive today! The Bible tells us this gift of eternal life is free. Ephesians 2:8 tells us " For by grace are you saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. " All we have to do is believe in Jesus Christ. There is alot at stake here... think about it.

ONLINE PARTS & SHOP MANUALS

¶ In my surfing over the web I have run across a number of sites which have parts and/or shop manuals. Here is a list. I do not host most of these, they are just links to other web sites. If you find a web site with parts or shop manuals on it let me know so I can list it here for everyone.

I usually don't remove any links, once I put them up. I have had some dead links become active again after being gone for as much as a year. If you hit a dead link, try it again in a minute, hour, day or so, sometimes even a week or two or more.

Or, if you hit a dead link, right click and then click "Copy Shortcut". Now paste it into the "Wayback Machine". It may be achived there.

If you find something you like, download it as fast as you can. DO NOT think it will be there waiting for you tomorrow. It might not last another hour. Service Manuals links come and go like the wind. Grab it NOW.

Some of these are in Adobe Acrobat. To save these PDF files, right click on them then left click on "Save Target As...". You will need to get the Free Adobe Reader to read them.

You can get it Here.

Here is a FREE PDF Viewer/Printer that works great and is Much smaller than Adobe's Sumatra. Another PDF Viewer that works good and is portable.

Lastly, if you steal all my work here, as some have done, it is OK. But at least give me a link back. Remember... "What goes around comes around."

YOUR OWN SHOP?

"...It was a true report that I heard in my own land..."
1 Kings 10:6

¶ Every once in a while someone asks about a career in Motorcycle Mechanics or starting your own shop. I'm not real sure what to tell them. I have been a mechanic all my life. My mother told me that, as a baby, I would take the baby stroller apart, and anything else I could get my hands on. So I guess God meant me to be a mechanic. I've loved motorcycles ever since I first rode an old Honda 55... and stopped it by dragging my feet because I couldn't remember where the brakes were. However, I do not recommend Motorcycle Mechanics as a career. I do recommend it as a hobby.

Why? Well, for several reasons. Considering what you have to know and the number of tools you need, the pay is lousy. Unless you live way down south, you will only work half the year on motorcycles. Then they lay you off or you get to work on snowmobiles and snowthrowers... Yuck. Someone once said that working at what you love is like being on vacation all the time... NOT. If you twist wrenches all day you are NOT going to want to twist them at night, on your own stuff. You will want to do something else. (Like Computers!) You also develop a very mercenary attitude toward bikes. Nowadays, when I see a really great bike, I don't think "What a great bike to have and ride." I think "How much can I sell that toad for?" I read of a guy who collected baseball cards... just loved them. Everyone said he should open a shop and sell them. He did. 10 years later, he said that from the day he opened his shop till now, he had not added one single card to his personal collection. I know how he feels. Do you get the picture?

But, you are not going to listen to me, are you? OK, here are some tips. Maybe they will help you.

If you are just starting out, get an old bike, take my online course and have at it. Work on it, tune it up, rebuild it. Learn and get some experience. If you are real young, shoot even if you aren't, and really want to get started, go to your favorite shop and offer to work for $2.00 an hour or even for free. Be reliable and consistent. Work a few hours a day, several days a week. Whenever you can. Sweep their floor, clean their shop, wash their windows, run for parts or burgers... Make Yourself Handy. Do the stuff every shop needs done but don't have the time or money to do. Eat a lot of dirt. And like it, or at least act like you do. After awhile (may take weeks) they will see you are serious and start giving you little jobs and you will learn. If you start making them money you might even work your way into a real job. At the very least you will learn a lot. You will now have the experience to make an intelligent decision on any further motorcycle repair education.

If you absolutely must start your own shop, do it part time in the evenings and on weekends. DO NOT quit your day job. Get your feet wet in motorcycle repair first. Don't risk your job till you are sure you want to do this.

Do the best job you can and Charge for it. Charge maybe 20-30% under what the local shops charge. If you charge $20 per hour and the local shops charge $50, people will think your work is no good. Charge $35 or $40 and they will think they got a great deal.

Charge for the work you do. If the bike is filthy and the bolts rusted on, it will cost more than if the bike is clean and well cared for. Cleaning bikes takes time and drilling out rusted bolts takes time... it has to be done... it takes time... charge for it.

If you special order any part it must be paid for in full and is non-refundable. I've seen people order parts from 2-3 different shops and buy it from the one that gets it in first. The others? Tough luck for them. Sometimes they decide they don't want the part at all. Even if you return a part for credit you still have shipping (both ways) and a restocking fee.

Doing business costs a lot of money. Lights, rent, ads, shipping, special tools, shop manuals. It all adds up and someone has to pay for it. Because of this you must charge enough for parts. How much? Well, you're not going to like this but I mark things up 100%. If I buy it for a dollar I sell it for two. Sound like a lot? I once sold a sprocket for a 40% mark up. When I figured out shipping, phone calls, etc. and threw my time in for free. It turned out I LOST 25 cents on the deal. You don't stay in business very long doing that. At 100% markup, you will at least break even, no matter how bad the deal goes.

Keep good books. Not just for the IRS. If you are loosing money, you need to know.

Speaking of loosing money. You need to have enough savings to last at least a year. Even if the business makes no profit that first year.

Develop a really thick skin. You will not believe the things people say to you, without thinking about what they are saying. I like to think that they really don't know or understand what they just said. Just ignore it, forgive them and concentrate on doing the best job for that tworp, oops, I mean beloved customer, that you can. One time a customer called and wanted to bring in an outboard motor I couldn't get to it for several days and told him so. He asked if he could bring it in the next day. I said yes, but he would have to leave it. Next day he brought it in and I told him to leave it and I would get to it the next day. So he said "If I wanted it fixed tomorrow I would have brought it in tomorrow." I guess the guys in front of him don't count. He didn't bring it back, which suited me just fine. I was really busy. However, if he had I would have done the best job I could for him.

When you decide to open your shop remember what all the Realtors say "The three most important things in starting a business are Location, Location, and Location." In other words, find out where your customers are and get as close to them as possible. If you think that you can give honest, fair, high quality service and everyone will beat a path to your door... think again. People go for easy and cheap. Don't get mad or upset when some guy shows up, after spending $500.00 with someone else, wanting you to fix it because they couldn't. And could you do it cheap too, because I already spent most of my money.

Customers have selective hearing. They ask how much a clutch repair costs... you give a price... then they add a tune-up. They then expect the tune-up for free or really cheap because you already gave a price. Yea, I know... weird. You tell them not to "over rev the new rebuilt engine" and all they hear is "rev the engine". You must be very clear in your instructions and estimates. It is Ok to remind customers of the words "Good, Fast, and Cheap." He can pick only two! If it's good and fast, it won't be cheap. If it's fast and cheap, it won't be good. If it's good and cheap, it won't be fast.

Make sure the location for your shop is zoned for a Motorcycle Repair Shop. You will need a resale tax number from your state to collect sales tax. You might need a business license from your city. You will also need to get either a business phone or change your phone number to a business one. I find I get a lot of business from the Yellow Pages. Other types of ads don't seem to work very well... at least for me. Your area may be different. I found those magnetic signs you put on your car doors to be worthless. I never got any business from them. But, again, your area might be different.

Once you get the resale number and such, you can apply to different after market parts distributors and get accounts set up. For factory parts get a trade publication like "Dealer News" or "Motorcycle Product News" (User Name: "mpn", Password: "dealer") and look at the ads. There are a number of dealers who will sell you factory parts for cost plus 20% or so plus shipping. You must give them the part number. ~~so you will need to get a Micro-Fiche reader machine and the micro-fiche for the machine you are working on. It is best to get the whole set for each make you work on.~~ You will also find the ~~fiche~~ Online Computer handy for engine reassembly, especially for basket cases. ~~A FAX machine is very handy too.~~

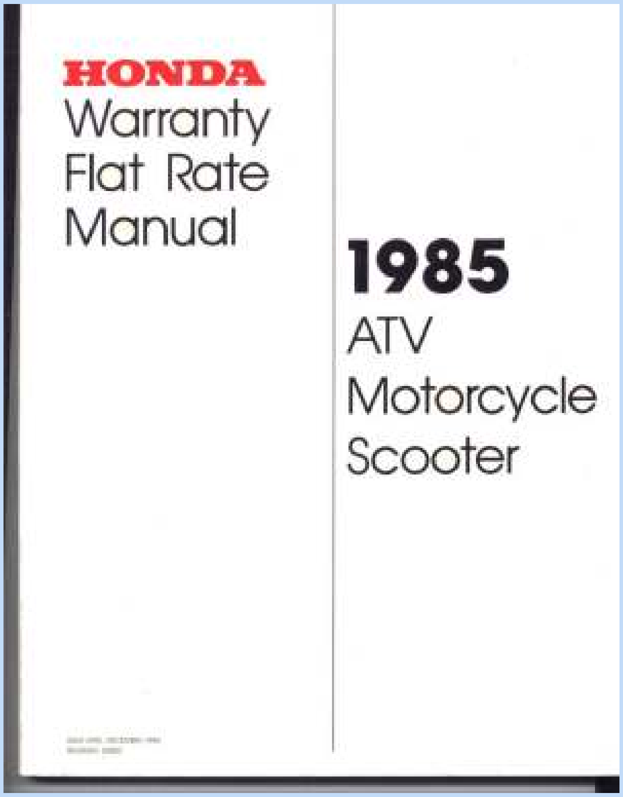
UPDATE! As I write this (2006) the manufacturers are doing away with Micro-Fiche and are going to an Internet based parts lookup system. You need computer skills and you need to be Online. If you don't have a computer and computer skills, GET THEM! If you are not on the Internet you will have to get an internet provider and GET ONLINE! This is just the way it is.

UPDATE 2015. Not much has changed. You can loose the Fax Machine. Most everything is now done Online. I have found you can get good deals at Ebay.com and Amazon.com on things like Gasket Sets, Brake Pads, and other motorcycle stuff. Lots of Web Sites now have online exploded parts books for most all makes and models. Lots of Web Sites and Blogs also cover common and not so common repairs on lots of different motorcycles. This is handy if you run across a problem that has you stumped.

After you take a bike apart and give an estimate for the repair, get a deposit for the parts. Always do this. Then if the customer takes off, leaving you with the bike, you are only out the labor and not the parts. Yes, they really do this. I usually tell the customer that I will take the bike apart and work up an estimate. If they decide not to do the repair all they have to do is pay for my time. If it helps them, they can walk away and give me the bike. I give ball park estimates for free, but if they want an exact estimate and I have to spend a lot of time on it, they must pay for that time. I charge for insurance estimates. If they want it free... go somewhere else.

Never, Never, NEVER, let a repair job go out without it being paid for in full. I don't care what type of sob story they give you. NEVER let a job go out unpaid for. Here is a sign I have in the shop. It's looking a bit old but it tells the story.



Well, there you have it. Just remember, if I had it to do over, I would get a good job, make some money doing something else, and work on bikes as a hobby and have fun.

Motorcycle Flat Rate Times

Every repair job takes time. How much time a repair takes is known as the Flat Rate Time for that job. How do they come up with that time? The factory time studies the different motorcycles models on the assembly lines. They time each procedure a number of times and get an average time for each procedure. A procedure might be cut a valve seat, or assemble the valve and springs into the cylinder head or assemble a clutch. Each repair procedure is then assigned a number.

Factories like to time study every little thing for a reason. When a bike under warranty breaks the factory wants to fix it the cheapest way possible. They require the dealer who fixes the bike to put the number of each repair procedure of each repair on the request form for payment. The factory totals up all the repairs, multiplies that number by the agreed on shop rate and pays the dealer accordingly.

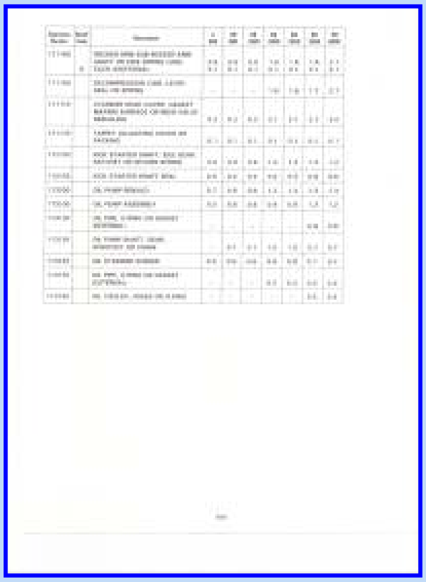
The shop rate is the amount per hour that the shop charges per hour of labor. Most shops post it in the service area or you can just ask them what it is.

Repair shops often use these flat rates to figure out how much is a fair price to charge for each repair. This sounds good and all until you consider one thing. Factories want to loose as little money as possible. Warranty work losses them money. So what is a factory to do? Simple, make the repair procedure go as fast as possible while still making it seem fair. So how do they do this?

I once worked for a company repairing Natural Gas Meters. While I was there I watched them create a time study for gas meter repair. They basically took the fastest repair man in the shop, gave him new meter bodies and parts and timed him putting the meters together as fast as he could go. It was ready, set, go.... work, work, work, one meter done. Work, work, work, two meters done. Work, work, work, three meters done. Stop and rest. Time it again. Take the best time and that is how long it should take for that procedure.

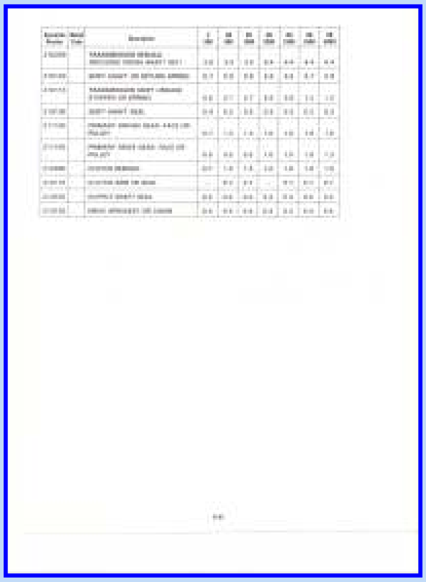
That is how the motorcycle factories do it too. Time a man who has spent his entire adult life putting a piston into a cylinder. Give him all new parts and time him going as fast as he can go. That will guarantee you get a really fast repair time. Do the factories really do this? Perhaps I might be exaggerating a bit but not by much.

So what does this have to do with us? Most shops use some sort of time studies to figure out what to charge their customers. In a way this is good and in another way it is bad. If you are a slow, precise mechanic (Also known as Me) the time studies give you a fair price to charge and allow you to spend as much time as is needed to complete the repair. That is good. Trouble is the time studies are not always accurate. Sometimes the studies do repair at warp speed. That is bad because a it does not allow enough time to realistically complete the repair.

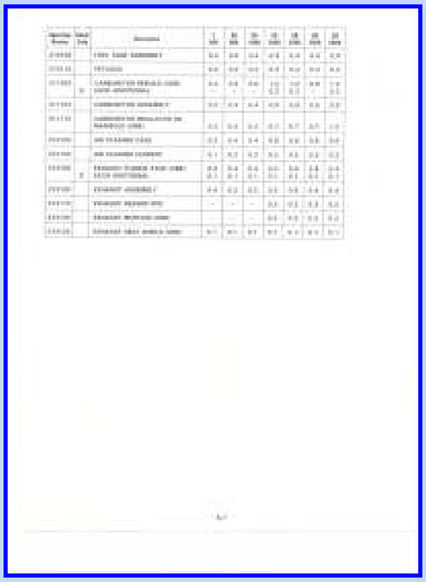


Rusted bolts. Stripped screws. Dirty engines. Old rusty engines. These things make the job hard and time consuming. Sometimes engines just do not want to come apart. You have to worry and piddle with them to get them apart without breaking good, hard to find, parts.

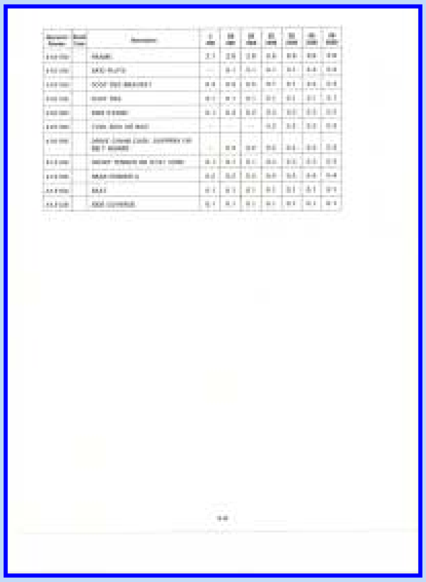
So, in reality, the time study a factory gives for repair is more like a suggestion then a rule. What we really want is to know is the time it takes a trained mechanic, working at a reasonable speed, on a clean and well cared for motorcycle, to do a repair. If the motorcycle is rusted, dirty and poorly maintained the time it takes to repair it will be longer.



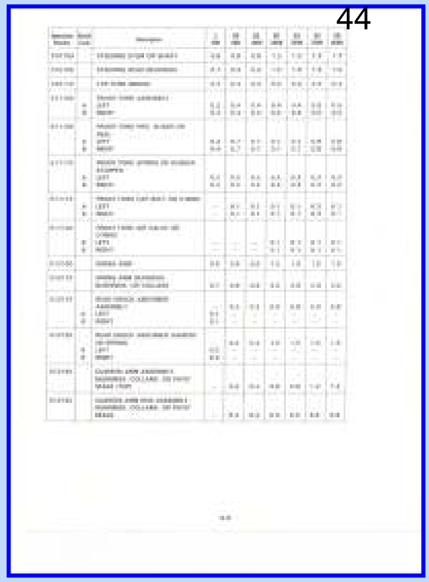
So let us put some numbers to this.



Shop Rate 1



Shop Rate 2



Shop Rate 3

Shop Rate 4

Shop Rate 5

Shop Rate 6

Shop Rate 7

Shop Rate 8

Shop Rate 9

To Figure the actual price of a repair simply add up the times for all jobs done and multiply that number by your shop rate. So for a Honda XR200R remove & replace the cam chain (2.7), one carburetor cleaning (1.2), and change out rear chain (.4) you get a total time of 4.3 hours. Multiply by a $75.00 shop rate and you get $322.50 for the labor part of the job. Adding parts, taxes and sometimes a small bit for shop supplies (Grease, soap, solvents, ETC.) gives the total price for the job.

Not all shops use Flat Rate Manuals but Flat Rates do provide a useful starting place to figure a fair labor price. You can buy current model Motorcycle Flat Rate Manuals from many different places online or from a dealer of the brand of motorcycle you are working on but they can be quite pricey.

Here is, for your edification, a Labor Rate Table from 1972. Around 1969 I was running ads in the local paper for tune ups for Honda singles and twins for $12.50. The local shops were charging $15.00 for the same thing so I did quite well. About an hour and a half of pleasant work as I recall. Minimum wage was $1.15 an hour. Gas was about twenty to twenty five cents a gallon.

PRICE CONVERSION TABLE

| Suggested Time (Hrs.) | LABOR RATE PER HOUR $3.50 | $4.00 | $4.50 | $5.00 | $5.50 | $6.00 | $6.50 |

First Things to Look at When Troubleshooting

In the last month two different bikes have come in. The owners of both bikes had cleaned them up real nice and cleaned the carburetors several times. But they still wouldn't start. They were just sure the bikes had good enough compression. Both bikes had virtually NO compression!

The first thing to look at, when troubleshooting a bike that will not start, is compression. You must use a compression gauge. If the engine does not have at least 100 PSI (Pounds Per Square Inch). If the engine has low compression it will never run right. 100 PSI is right on deaths doorway. If it "seems" like it has enough or you "think" it has enough... that's not good enough. Run a compression check. If the compression is low, and the engine is a four stroke, check the valve clearances. If the valves are tight, they may be leaking compression. If the valves clearences are correct and the compresson is still low you will have to rebuild the engine.

On a two-stroke engine low compression means the rings are not sealing right. The piston may be burnt down or partially melted. Sometime an engine has had a partial sezure and pinched a ring in the piston ring groove. I once had a two-stroke engine read 90 PSI on the gauge. It would not start and it turned out that it had a piched ring.

A pinched ring can also be caused by the crankshaft bearings starting to fail. Bits of the crankshaft bearings can come up through the ports and be caught by the piston in the port piching the ring in it's groove. The only fix for this is a total engine rebuild.

If the engine has good compression, now check for spark. Use a new plug with the ground electrode bent out straight. The spark MUST jump a gap of AT LEAST 1/4" or more with the spark plug in the spark plug cap and grounded to the engine. If the spark won't jump a 1/4" gap outside the engine, it will not jump the spark plug's .030" gap in the engine under compression. Be Careful here. ALWAYS HAVE A FIRE EXTINGUISHER CLOSE BY. You are making a big spark and that could set something on fire!

If you don't have good spark, find out why. If you do have good spark NOW you can start looking at the carburetors. If the bike has been sitting for several months or years odds are the jets are plugged with varnish. If the engine will start and run only with the choke put on the idle jet(s) is plugged. If it will not start at all the fuel valve (Needle and Seat) may be corroded shut and/or the fuel petcock plugged. To test pull the spark plug out and put a little gasoline or staring fluid down the spark plug hole, screw in the spark plug and puton the plug cap. Now try to start the engine. The engine should start, rev up and then die. If it does this you can be reasonably certain the problem is in the carburetor or gas tank.

Don't waste your time working on a bike with no compression or spark. Check these things first and check them the right way!

TROUBLE SHOOTING
A NEW (TO YOU ANYWAY) MOTORCYCLE

Well, it's bound to happen sooner or later. You're over at your Uncle's place and there it is. A 1989 Honyamsuzykaw 721 Special. You know, the one with the chrome plated clutch cable, so you can shift gears faster... or so the ad you once read in High School said. Your Uncle says he got it from his son's best friend's cousin's neighbor. Ran just fine when he left it here four years ago. He'll let it go cheap. Thing is... do you want it ?

They tell me that outboard motors don't wear out while running, they wear out while sitting. I've found that this is true. It seems it is often true of motorcycles too. Just about the worst thing that can happen to an engine is for it to sit there doing nothing. Rust starts to form everywhere. The rubber seals and o-rings dry out and harden. The sun, and ozone in the air start to rot the plastic parts. The saying is true, "Use it or loose it." So when you look at a bike that has been sitting for any length of time, you are looking at RESTORATION and not repair. How much restoration is needed will depend on how long it's been sitting and how well it was prepared for storage. You can look at the mileage of a bike with a grain of salt. Most bikes are junked out at extremely low mileages. 18-25,000 miles for the big stuff and 5-10,000 for the small bikes. I think this is because (unfortunately) motorcycles are not considered to be real transportation in the USA. They are viewed as recreational vehicles. As a result they sit for long periods of time, run hard for a short time, and then are put away again. I have a friend who was a missionary in Indonesia. He reports that the little Yamaha Bikes they use there (90-100cc) would rack up 60-70,000 miles. Yes, they rebuilt them a lot, but they still lasted a long time. The secret ? They were in use all the time.

The first thing we want to do is look at it. It's been sitting a while so it will be dusty dirty, but that's not what we are looking for. We are looking for bent stuff and scrapes. Asphalt makes a distinctive mark on metal that is violently thrown upon it. If all looks OK, kick the engine over. If the engine has no kick starter and the battery is dead, you can use a car battery. Take out the dead battery and hook up jumper cables from the good battery directly to the bike negative and positive leads. Make sure the voltage is correct (6 or 12 volts). Don't connect things to the old, dead battery. There is a chance it could blow up if it gets hit with all that juice from the car battery. If the engine will turn over, take the spark plugs out, put them in the spark plug caps and ground them to the cylinder head. If you have a compression gauge, run a compression test on each cylinder. Remember to hold the throttle open while you turn the engine over with the gauge hooked up. You need AT LEAST 100 psi. 120-135 is pretty good and 150-170 is great. Two strokes will test less because of the ports. If you don't have a gauge handy and if you can reach the spark plug hole, put your thumb over the hole. Push hard and then turn the engine over. If the compression will blow your thumb off the spark plug hole (no matter how hard you push) the compression is probably OK. At least enough to start the engine. While you have the plugs out check for spark.

If the engine is stuck... won't turn over... or has no compression, it's top end rebuild time. If there is no spark and the bike has electronic ignition, things can get real pricey, real quick. Electronic ignition can be very hard to trouble shoot too. Most bikes, after 1980 have electronic ignition (but not all !) Most bikes before 1980 have points (but not all !) If you have no spark and the bike has points, odds are a new set, timed right will get your spark back. Look at the spark plugs. If they are oily, the oil rings may be worn even if the compression is good. Check the oil. Does it look good ? If you don't know what good oil looks like, buy a quart of oil and look at it and feel it. That's how the oil should be. The oil in most engines will be darker, but you will have an idea of how things should be. If it smells burnt there may be clutch problems. If it smells like gas, the fuel valves in the carbs may be stuck open or leaking. If it is a funny color, like white or green, it has a lot of contaminates in it. White or whitish, oil has water in it. Green ? Well, I'm not sure. I've seen it a number of times. Must be a combination of water, acids, and things the neighbor's kid stuck in. One things for sure... it's not good ! If you can, drain the oil and look at what comes out. If there is water is it rusty or clear. If it's rusty, it's not good. Where do you think that rust came from ? You might want to steer clear of this one. If it's clear, you might be OK... maybe. This bike better be cheap !

OK, everything checks out. We have compression, spark and we didn't hear any bad noises. The bike looks OK on the outside too. So now we look to make a deal. How much is this thing worth ? Well, let me tell you. If a bike is not running it's not worth much ! Even with compression and spark, you are only in the ball park. Most people just walk away from their bikes with no storage preparation whatsoever. That means the gas in the carbs and tank may be pretty bad. Carb work can be very pricey. There can be other things wrong too. Even if the bike will shift through all gears, a gear or shifter fork may still be bad. Once you put power to it, a bike may jump out of gear or a loud engine knock may suddenly appear or the clutch won't work right. If they want top dollar for it, let them pay to get it fixed and running. If you don't know what is a good price, look in the for sale ads and see what people are asking for a bike like that in good running condition. You can check out the Blue Book price on the bike, but remember, Blue Book is only accurate for a relatively new bike in perfect condition. Check out what pistons, rings, valves, gaskets, etc. cost. If you have to do much to the bike the bill can run up FAST. Don't pay $200 for a $600 bike that will cost $800 to fix. Be careful and be picky. Do your homework. One last thing to remember. Take everything they tell you about this bike (or any other) with a big grain of salt. Trust me, they are NOT lying to you. It's just that memories fade over time, and what once was true, (It Ran Good !) might no longer be true.

If the price is right, a non-running bike can end up being a very good deal. Many, many times a new battery, a good tune-up and a carb cleaning is all a bike needs to get back on the road. Just be sure to pay very little for it !

After you get it up and running, put a few miles on it before you try to fix every little thing. You need an oil change. You need new spark plugs. You need a good tune-up, but beyond that, don't do anything more than what you have to to get it running. You need to put some miles on it. Like, 200-300 miles or so. You will find that lots of things you thought needed fixing will fix themselves, and other things that do need fixing will rise to the surface after a few hundred miles.

One kind of bike you need to be leery of. Those are race bikes. Be very careful here. I mean think about it. They bought this bike for one reason... to run it as hard as they can, and now they want to sell it to you? Why?

TROUBLE SHOOTING

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." 1 Thessalonians 5:21

Often, I get in a bike that has been sitting for a number of months or years. This is not really repair, but restoration. Usually, you will know little to nothing of the bikes history. We also want to spend as little as possible on this bike until we know if the engine and all the gears work. Just shifting through the gears by hand is not good enough. Once you put power to it, the transmission can start to jump out of gear. You have got to prove to yourself that this thing will run, and run good. If it does, you will want to hold onto it.

Here are some thoughts on getting a none running bike, running. You will need to put a good fire extinguisher where it is real handy, because the things you are doing can spark, backfire, and burn. Check the oil level and if it is low add some. If it, the oil, looks white or funny colored. Drain it and put in fresh. If it's full and looks OK, don't worry about it. We will change it once we get the engine started. Now, take the old, dead battery out and connect a nice big, fully charged, car battery, to the correct cables (Plus to plus, minus to minus) with some big, thick, jumper cables. You really don't have to worry about having too big of battery. As long as the voltage is correct, the size of the battery makes little difference as long as it is big enough. The electrical parts will only draw the power they need. The battery will not force too much power on to things, just because it is big. The big thing to remember is to take the old, dead, battery totally out of the system. If you keep the old battery in the bike it will try to suck up the power from the fully charged battery. This can cause the old battery to explode. The odds of this happening are very low with a small motorcycle battery. In fact, I've never seen a small battery blow up, but I've sure seen bigger ones blow, and it's not a pretty sight ! Don't take the chance. Take the old battery completely out of the system ! It wouldn't hurt to have some baking soda and lots of water handy too.

If the engine uses a magneto ignition system, you will not need the battery. Most dirt bikes (Not all !) use a magneto type ignition. Most street bikes (Not all !) use a battery. Now kick the engine over or hit the starter button and turn the engine over. If it does not turn over, either the starter or starter gears are bad, transmission is stuck, or the engine is stuck. If the starter solenoid clicks, but the starter does not turn, check the charge of the battery. If the battery is fully charged, connect the positive jumper cable directly to the starter cable. That's the big, thick, cable going from the starter solenoid to the starter. When you make the connection, there will be a big spark and the starter should turn. If it does, the solenoid is bad. If nothing happens, the starter cable is broken or the starter is bad. Try connecting directly to the starter motor, if possible. If the starter turns, but the engine does not, the starter gears or starter clutch is bad. If the starter does not turn, either the starter is bad or the engine is stuck.

If the kick starter will not turn, try putting the engine in third or fourth gear, or even top gear, and pushing it. If the engine will then turn over the problem is in the starter gears. If it still will not turn over, pull the cover over the crankshaft flywheel end, and put a wrench on the nut or bolt on the end of the crank and try to turn the crankshaft, with the transmission in neutral. If it turns, the gears are stuck. If it still will not turn, the engine is well and truly stuck ! If the engine is stuck it means the rings and piston have rusted to the bore of the cylinder. If this has happened, put some penetrating oil in the cylinder and let it set for a while. Maybe, even over night. If you can brake it loose, good ! But, you will still have to take the head and cylinder off and bore the cylinder oversize and put in a new piston and rings. See the Piston Page. If it is a four stroke engine, you will also need to check the valves, so see the Valves Page

Ok, it turns over, but does it have any compression ? Take out the spark plug (s) and ground the plug wire leads to the engine. This is to prevent burning out parts of the ignition system. Screw in a compression tester gauge. Open the throttles wide open and crank the engine. If you don't have the throttles wide open, you will get a low reading. You are going to need at least 100 PSI (pounds per square inch). Depending on the compression ratio, you could have 150 to 170 PSI or even higher. I have seen engines run on as little as 65 PSI (an outboard) and I have had them NOT run on as high as 90 PSI (a chain saw with a pinched ring.) A down and dirty way of testing is to put your thumb over the spark plug hole and turn the engine over. No matter how hard you push your thumb down, the compression pressure should blow your thumb off. If you can hold the pressure with your thumb, there's not enough compression to start the engine.

If you have a four stroke engine, it's always worth while to check the valve clearance to see if one of the valves is tight and leaking compression. See the Valve Clearance Page. To figure out whether it's the rings or the valves try this. Lock the crank with a wrench, with the piston at TDC (Top-Dead-Center) and run some compressed air in through the spark plug hole. Make sure you have a good hold on the crankshaft wrench or the engine will spin, throwing the wrench off ! Now listen. If you hear air coming out at the carb or air cleaner, the intake valve is leaking. If at the exhaust pipe, it's the exhaust valve. If at the engine breather, it's the rings.

While the spark plugs are out, and we are cranking the engine over a lot, do it just a bit more. Do it till the engine oil light (if it has one) goes out, or until you feel that enough oil has been pumped to all parts of the engine. If you use the kick starter, kick it maybe, 30 times or so. If you use the electric starter, crank the starter no more than 10 to 15 seconds. Then let it sit and cool off for a minute. Motorcycle electric starters are very fragile and very expensive. If you crank away for a minute or two, the starter could be burned out.

So we find we have compression, what next ? Check for spark. I like to use a new spark plug with the ground electrode bent straight out and a clip soldered in the side. Connect your tester to the big thick spark plug lead and crank the engine. You should see a nice big fat blue spark. If you don't, disconnect the engine kill button. If there still is no spark, you will need to determine if the engine has points or electronic ignition. Most (but not all !) bikes built before 1980 have points ignition. Most bikes built after 1980 (but not all !) have some sort of electronic ignition system. If in doubt, pull one of the crank end covers (Usually 2-3 screws) and look ! If you have a battery and coil points system see the points page If you have a points magneto system see the Magneto page. If you have an electronic ignition system see the electronic ignition page.

Ok, we now have spark. If the old spark plugs are real clean you can use them, otherwise put in new ones. Put all the plugs back in the engine and connect up all the plug caps to the plugs. Check the air cleaner and air box. Make sure mice or bugs haven't gotten in there and built a nest, plugging up everything. Look at the air cleaner. If it's a paper type, blow it off and use it until we are sure the bike will run and the gears work. Then get a new one. Paper tends to plug up, as it ages. If it's a foam one, clean it in solvent. As you clean it, rub the foam somewhat roughly. Not too roughly, just a little roughly. If the foam starts to come apart in your hands you will need to get a new air cleaner. A lot of bikes must have that air cleaner in the system. If you leave it out, the engine may run too lean. This, of course, makes you think there is something wrong with the carb. I had an old Suzuki GS750 come in once. If you just took the air cleaner cover off, it would refuse to idle. Put it back on and it idled perfect. The owner put over 60,000 miles on that bike. Ran great, but it had to have that air cleaner on. I've seen a number of different makes and models do the same thing. Sometimes, even a crack in the air box can make them run funny. I've also seen a lot of bikes where having the air cleaner on or off made no difference in their running. If your not sure, leave the air cleaner in place while you work on the engine.

Now drain the old gas out, put some new gas in the tank and turn the fuel petcock to "PRI" or "ON", and check that there is a flow of clean gas to the carbs. Tanks that are badly rusted will require a filter in the gas line to the carbs. If not see the Gas Tank Page. If the gas starts to come out the carb over flow tube(s) tap the carbs gently, but sharply with a plastic hammer or the plastic end of a screwdriver. Do this to each carb several times or until the gas over flow stops. If it does not stop you will have to take the carbs apart and find out why the fuel valve (needle and seat) is not working. See the Carb page. If it will not start, try to drain the fuel out of the carb with the float bowel drain screw. If nothing comes out, nothing is going in ! In other words the needle and seat are stuck closed. Again, if tapping the carb doesn't start the gas flow, take the carb apart to find out why.

Check for water in the gas too. Water is heavier than gas, so the gas floats on top of the water. Drain some fuel into a glass container and look for water at the bottom. You can also take a cotton rag and catch some gas in it. Usually, the gas will soak into the rag, and the water will ball up on the surface of the rag.

If it just will not start, try putting an eyedropper's worth of fresh, good, (as in "Buy It New !") gas down each carb. If the problem is only with the carbs, the engine should start, rev up, and die. Put in another eyedropper of gas, and it should do it again. You can do this even if the carbs are off the engine. Just put the gas down the intake port. Keep your finger on the kill button, in case it revs too high. If it doesn't start, DO NOT keep putting gas down the intake. If the raw gas works it's way into the exhaust pipe, it can vaporize there, EXPLODE, and blow your exhaust (and other things !) pipe clean off ! You can use starting fluid or spray carb cleaner for this too. Just remember to use a LITTLE ! Too much and it can blow things up, just like gas. If it still will not start, it means something else is (mechanical or electrical) wrong too. This will work for both two and four stroke engines.

If it starts with the choke, but will not idle with the choke off, check to see if the idle jet is plugged. If it will not idle, but seems to rev up, down, and then dies when you try to adjust the idle. You got an air leak in the carb manifold or gasket. If your ignition timing is way off or if the automatic spark advance is stuck. These things can cause erratic idling and strange running. If it starts and idles good, but loses that good idle as it warms up. Check the valve clearance. If a valve is just a bit tight, it can leak a bit after things warm up and expand. Once you know the engine will start and run, I would turn it off and change the oil and filter. You don't necessarily have to do this. If the original oil looked and felt good, you could run it for a while. However, oil is cheap. Why not replace it ?

Now, put the bike on it's center stand, or in some way lock the rear wheel up and off the ground. Make sure the rear wheel cannot contact the ground. It wouldn't hurt to have a friend hold the front brake on and have their finger on the stop switch, just in case things get out of hand ! Start the engine up and see if it will shift through the gears. While it is spinning the rear wheel, oil up the rear chain if it has one. If everything shifts OK, and the brakes and clutch work, you can now buy a battery for it and go for a ride.

If you find the clutch will not disengage, most likely the clutch plates are stuck together. This happens a lot to bikes that have set a long time with the clutch engaged. The oil leaks out from between the plates and they stick together. Sometimes you can break them loose by running in first or second gear, pulling in the clutch and locking up the rear brake. You may have to do this several times. If this doesn't work you will have to take the clutch apart and oil the plates. See the Clutch Page.

Try the brakes. If they are drum brakes, the brake pivot shaft often rusts and this can make them stick. Try oiling the shaft with penetrating oil and working it back and forth. If this doesn't free it up, you will have to take the brake apart. See the Drum Brake Page.

Hydraulic brakes that will not release once they are applied will have to be disassembled, and the gunk that forms behind the caliper piston cleaned out. This gunk tends to lock up the piston. Sometimes, you can work the brake and it will free up for a while. Don't be fooled, you need to take it apart and clean it. Same for the hydraulic clutch. If they don't work at all, check the fluid and add some, of the proper type, if necessary and/or bleed them. See the Hydraulic Brake/Clutch Page.

Old two strokes add a few more problems to the mix. A two stroke must have a sealed crankcase to work. If the crank seals have dried out, they can crack and/or not seal against the crankshaft. This leakage lets air into the fuel mix making everything too lean. If the seal on the power-take-off (PTO) side of the crank leaks, it can let oil from the transmission into the engine making it smoke like crazy. A lot of the older two strokes have the seal on the crank side of the bearing. This means to replace it, you must remove the PTO side bearing. To do that you must completely disassemble the engine. Lots of work. On two stroke twins and triples you must break the crank apart to get to the center seals. Again, lots of work. Some two strokes have reed valves. If one of the reeds is broken or warped or not sealing good, hard starting and/or poor running will be the result. Reeds are usually easy to get to. If the PTO crank seal is on the out side of the PTO bearing, it is easy to get to, too. If it's on the inside, you may be bucks ahead to junk that critter out and look for something else. Sometimes, If you can get it started, and the seal isn't too far gone, just running the engine can rejuvenate the seals. They will slowly start to seal good again. Each time you start it, it will run better and better. So be patient. If things aren't working just perfect, run it gently for a while. It just might heal itself.

Even if the bike has an automatic oil injection system, I like to run a small amount of 20:1 premix for the fuel. This runs everything real rich on the oil. That will help the seals, bearings, and everything. I also like to bleed the injection oil pump. The engine will smoke like mad, and maybe even foul out a spark plug. That's OK. We want lots of oil going into that engine. After running the engine for a few minutes, you can add plain gas to the tank and let the oil injection pump take over. Do this only for two strokes that have an oil injection pump. If the bike has no injection pump, or it has been disconnected, make sure you use only 20:1 premix for fuel. For some reason, there are a lot of two-strokes out there with good, working, injector oil pumps, that have been disconnected. Go figure. Even with the injector pump set right, I like to see just a bit of smoke coming from my two-strokes. If there is no smoke, bad things are happening ! If there is a lot of smoke, like a smoke bomb, the power take off side crank seal may be leaking oil into the engine. I have also noticed that a well worn two-stoke will smoke a lot more than one with a unworn engine. This is probably because the worn engine does not burn the oil/fuel mixture as well as the newer engine.

Some two stroke engines will wet foul their spark plugs. That is, you put in a dry spark plug, try to start the engine, and end up with a spark plug dripping with gas. If the fuel inlet valve leaks or the floats are damaged, raw gas can leak into the crankcase. I've seen some bikes fill up with so much gas that they hydraulically lock the engine up when you try to start them ! The cure ? Make doubly sure the spark plug is grounded and the ignition is off. Remove the gas tank, seat, and turn the entire motorcycle upside down. After checking again to be sure the ignition is OFF and your fire extinguisher is handy, turn the engine over with the kickstarter. Gas will pour out of the engine so you might want to do this outside and catch the gas with rag. Do this till no more gas comes out of the engine. Wait ten or fifteen minutes, and do it again. Do it till no more gas comes out. Turn the bike right side up, replace everything. If everything else is right, it should start now.

Patience is a virtue, with two and four stroke engines. Make sure there is clean gas and oil. That the ignition timing is correct and that the valves are not too tight. Other than that, LEAVE IT ALONE AND PUT SOME MILES ON IT ! If you try to fix every little thing you think is wrong, you will just end up wasting your money. After three or four hundred miles you will find that many things that where wrong will fix themselves, and that other unforeseen problems may arise. Spend your money on real problems, not on things that will fix themselves. The only exception to this would be the tires and drive chain. If the tires are really bad, with big cracks in them, you will need to replace them. Either that, or get good life insurance, wear a helmet, lot's of leather and go slow ! Same with the rear chain. If it breaks it can lock up the rear end and/or punch a hole in your crankcase. You will just have to use common sense here. Life is full of risks and a bit of a risk is worth taking... just don't get carried away.

Once you get a few hundred miles on the beast, change the oil again and give it a full tune-up, including checking the valve clearance. Check the tires, drive chain, sprockets, stuff like that, too. Spend as little as possible UNTIL you know the bike running right, THEN do it up right!

DEFINITIONS

Guys are always saying that bike needs a "Top End Job" or a "Tune-Up", but what exactly does a good Tune-Up, rebuild, etc. consist of ? Motorcycle engines are a bit different from other engines. If you have a car engine, you can get a rebuilt engine from a lot of different places. You can get a "Short Block" without a rebuilt cylinder head or a "Long Block" with a cylinder head. You can do the same with any of the lawnmower type, small engines. But when you get to motorcycle engines, none of these options are available. This is because they just don't make that many of each type of motorcycle engine. They will make millions of each type of car engine, but only, maybe 100,000 of each type of bike engine. I guess that is the price of performance.

Because of this you must rebuild each engine by ordering individual parts. Oops, I forgot Harley is now offering rebuilt engines for a price, and a place called PMC has just started to offer selected rebuilt engines. Still, on most engines, you just don't have a short or long block available.

Here is what I think is right for a rebuild and why.

On four cylinder bikes, a top end job just isn't economically feasible unless it's a very new bike, you are hopping it up, or it is a restoration. If it's just a bike to get to work on, junk it out and buy another bike.

A four stroke engine top end rebuild would consist of the following:

- New oversize pistons, rings, wrist pin, and clips
- Bore cylinders
- New Top End gasket set
- New Valves both intake and exhaust
- New valve seals
- Check valve guides
- Measure and/or test valve springs
- Cut valve seats
- Clean engine parts
- New cam chain- A lot of people forget this one. If the chain is stretched it will effect the engine timing.
- New cam chain sprockets if possible.
- Check Cam chain Guides and adjuster
- Take a close look at everything as you take it apart. Especially bearings, like on the cam. If things look worn they probably are.
- If you just take the head off, say to fix an oil leak. You better be careful and not disturb the cylinders or you will have an oil leak there too. Gaskets get hard over time and once you break them loose from the metal, they will not reseal well.
- If water cooled, always use anti-freeze and not straight water. If you use water and forget to change to anti-freeze, come winter, the water will freeze cracking the cylinder and/or block.

A single cylinder, two stroke, engine top end rebuild consists of:
- New oversize piston, rings, wrist pin, wrist pin bearing, and clips

- Bore cylinder
- New top gasket set
- If you have a power valve, you may have to grind it a bit to clear the new piston and rings.
- If you have water cooling, always use anti-freeze and never straight water. If you use water and forget to change to anti-freeze, come winter,the water will freeze cracking the cylinder and/ or block.

A four stroke bottom end job just isn't economically feasible except perhaps on a single cylinder. On most Four cylinder bikes you would be talking a lot more than the bike is worth. With the exception being Harley Davidsons and perhaps other big bikes that hold their value (Ducati, BMW, Moto-Guzzi etc.).

- If you do go into the bottom end check everything. Like gears, shifter forks, bearings, etc. Now is the time to fix it, while you are in there.
- Replace rod bearing and maybe the whole rod
- Replace the primary chain if it is at all worn
- Replace primary and cam sprockets if worn
- Replace all seals, o-rings, and circlips
- Replace the crank main bearings
- New bottom end gasket set

A two stroke bottom end job consists of:

- New rod, crank pin, crank bearing, crank washers (2)
- New crank seals (2)
- New crank main bearings (2)
- Complete gasket set
- Labor to press the crank apart and together and to true it.
- New crank and clutch lock washers and it's a good idea to replace all the other seals, (kick starter, counter shaft, shifter, etc.) o-rings, and circlips.

A multi-cylinder, two stroke, bottom end job isn't economically feasible unless this is a classic restoration and you have lots of money. If it's just a bike to get to work on, junk it out and buy another one.

- If you do go into it replace all seals, o-rings, circlips, and gaskets.
- Replace all main bearings

A good tune-up is simply resetting all the things on a bike that wear and change, back to the original factory settings. You will find that a simple tune-up will cure a lot of problems. ALWAYS do a full tune-up BEFORE you start ripping things apart.

A four stroke, electronic ignition, bike tune-up consists of:

- Adjust valves.
- Some bikes have hydraulic valve adjusters and don't need regular adjusting.
- Lube all cables
- Lube any grease fittings you can find with a grease gun
- Clean or replace the air cleaner
- Adjust front brake cable
- Adjust rear brake cable or shaft
- Adjust rear brake light switch.
- Adjust and lube chain
- Install new spark plugs and properly adjust the gap

- Check spark plug caps
- Lube all pivot points on the bike (side stand, levers, etc.)
- Change oil and filter.
- On some bikes check the transmission oil
- On some bikes check the drive line and rear end oil
- Check the brake fluid on hydraulic brakes and clutch
- Check tires for damage, tread depth
- Check tire pressure
- Check spokes for tightness
- Check all light bulbs
- Run a compression check on all cylinders and keep a record of it.

for a points ignition bike add:

- Adjust or renew points and retime engine

For a two stroke lose the valve adjustment and add:

- Adjust oil pump

You will notice we don't just replace everything without a good reason. On a car rebuild you replace a lot of stuff because new doesn't cost much. Like valve springs. A set for a car may be 10-20 dollars. on a bike they are 5 bucks each... 2 for each valve... 8 for each cylinder... 32 for the engine. 5 times 32 is an extra $160. A lot of money, at least to me ! So we measure them and reuse them if we can. So it is with everything else.

One last thing to consider. On all jobs there are only two ways to go.

- Do it right and replace EVERYTHING that needs replacing.

OR

- Do ABSOLUTLY as little as possible. Only replace the things you must replace. Reuse everything else. Save every penny.

Don't do things half way. You will be wasting your money. All or as little as possible. Cheap it out or bit the bullet. Those are the choices.

It was a lazy summer, Sunday afternoon and I was napping on my bunk in the barracks. After a wonderful, deep, sleep, I was slowly awakening. You know, that wonderful place between sleep and wakefulness. Your not awake but your not asleep. That's when I first heard it... Kerthunk. I didn't really notice it at first, just background noise. Very rhythmic and steady. I didn't really think about it. Well, I woke up, stretched, and slowly got up. That's when I started to wonder, what was that noise ? I looked out the window and way over in the motorcycle parking area of the barracks behind mine, there he was. One poor old grunt, kick starting a Harley. Maybe I should say trying to kickstart a Harley. Man, did he have a leg. Now at the time I was riding a 750cc Norton Atlas twin. My Norton would always start within three kicks, but they had to be REALLY good kicks. Believe it or not, my right leg was actually bigger than my left. This guy made me look like a wimp. I started counting the kicks. I gave up after reaching 200. Most impressive ! 82nd Airborne infantry, gotta love 'em. However, I was an 82nd Airborne Mechanic. No way am I going to kick a bike that many times, and neither should you. If it doesn't start in 5-10 kicks... find out WHY.

I'm always amazed at how people think. or rather don't think. They get an idea in their mind (kick it enough times and it will start), back it up with no evidence, and are genuinely surprised when it doesn't work. If you have no plan, you will send hours and hours of hard work with no reward.

So how do we do this ? First of all, we have to deal with facts without adding our own idiocies to the mix. Facts or evidence come in a number of ways.

1. Empirical. Evidence that is repeatable.
2. Eye Witness. You saw it.
3. Probability. What are the odds ?
4. Historical. What has happened in the past.
5. Legal. Will it hold up in a court of law.

OK, what has this to do with motorcycles ? If the bike always misfires at the same RPM, that is a repeatable, empirical fact. If the customer tells you that about a problem that comes and goes, that's an eye witness fact. You are told of a thing that seems totally impossible, yet it's happening, what are the odds ? The customer tells you he got this bike from a friend's brother's uncle, who had it sitting somewhere for six years. That would be historical facts. Legal ? Well, I once met a guy who absolutely believed that there was a governmental agency which made sure that each bike would go as fast as the speedometer would read. If the speedo would go to 160 MPH, so would the bike. Yeah, legal stuff probably won't effect us here, unless we want to talk about the EPA... and I don't !

Why all this talk about evidence/facts ? Trouble shooting will only work if you take all the facts and analyze them properly. How do I do that ? I collect every fact that I can. Then in my mind I formulate several theories using the facts to back each theory. I then assign a percentage to each theory based on how likely true I think the theory is, based on the facts I have. As I learn new facts I adjust the percentages, up or down for each theory. So, let's try this out. A guy brings in a bike and says "It won't start !" We have one eye witness fact. It will not start. Now, we collect other facts. Was it sudden ? Yesterday it started, today it doesn't, or has it been getting harder and harder to start till it wouldn't start any more ? He says he rode it yesterday and today it kicks over but will not start. More facts. Customer says he thinks it's the carburetor. You kick it over and it kicks over way to easy. A compression test shows zero PSI. It's a two stroke dirt bike. Now Apply percentages to all the facts. He said it would not start and it was sudden and it kicks over. Electrical problems-40%, carb-40%, mechenical-20%. Once we kick it over we have a hard empirical fact... no compression. Now it's electrical- 5%, carb-

5%, mechanical-90%. We run a spark check and find we have good spark. We pull the head and the piston is melted over the exhaust port. Now it's electrical-2%, carb-5%, mechanical-93%. What ? Mechanical only 93% likely to be the problem ? Why is that ? Well, the melted piston is what prevents it from starting, but why did it melt ? Could the electronic ignition be going out, changing the timing, causing over heating ? Is there an air leak at the carb or did someone play with the jetting, and not tell you about it ? It can get quite complicated and you can have many different theories as to why something happened. Every fact just gives a small part of the story. Don't ever say that's impossible. Impossible just means the likelihood of that something happening is very, very low.

The big thing to remember is to develop a plan that takes in all the facts. If you have no plan, each repair will take way too long and cost way to much. Add to that the cost of missing things. If you replace that melted piston, miss the air leak at the carb AND that the spark plug was the wrong one and way too hot, you will be doing this again... Soon.

TOOLS

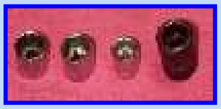
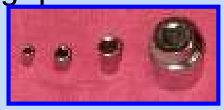
Tools. You have to have lots of tools to work on motorcycles. So what does that mean ? Do you have to go out and buy a $2000 master tool set to do good work ? No, not at all. A basic tool kit is all you need. You can add tools as you need them. It's always nice to have pretty, shiny, new tools, but hey, the bolts don't care. They'll come apart with old tools, same as new. Start looking around... garage sales, 2nd hand stores...tell your friends you're looking for some tools. Most mechanics start out with old, junky tools and upgrade as money allows. This means there are lots of old tools floating around. Maybe they will sell cheap or even give them to you, so keep your eyes open for them !

If you are really new to tools, a good place to learn about what is out there is a tool catalog. Sears Craftsman tools put out a free one that is a good place to start. Almost all my tools are Craftsman. There is a good reason for that...they are guaranteed forever ( well, maybe just till they go out of business. ) If I break one, I just take it back to Sears, and they give me a new one. I've fished them out of dumpsters, bought broken ones from junk yards and take them back and I get a new one. There are others who give a lifetime warrenty, but I always know where a Sears is. I don't always know where the other guys are.

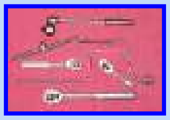
To start with you're going to need some wrenches. Wrenches come in lots of types and sizes.



The handiest ones are Combination Wrenches. You will need sizes 6mm through 14mm, 17mm and 19mm to start. Two sets are nice, one for the nut and one for the bolt head. A set of small, open end ignition wrenches is handy. Especially if the bike you are working on has points. A set of inch (US) wrenches would be good too.



You will need lots of Screw Drivers. Small ones, large ones, big, long ones, small,short ones, short big ones and long small ones. Well, you get the idea. There are all kinds of weird screw heads. Besides the ones we all know, Straight and Phillips, there are Allen, Torex, Square and others. You will also use them for all kinds of unauthorized prying, chisling, levering and such. As Red Green says " Any tool can be the right tool."



The Impact Driver is a must have tool. The steel Phillips head screws used on a large number of motorcycles really lock onto the threads in the aluminum crankcases. You must have an Impact Driver to get them out. Impact Drivers come in both 3/8" and 1/2" drives. You can use screw driver bits or sockets with them. To use an impact driver first select the right size of bit, then put it on the driver and onto the screw. Turn the body of the driver in the direction you want to turn. This " cocks " the tool, so to speak. Now hit it on the end, with a hammer, good and hard, and off it comes... the screw, that is. Remember to back up the part. If the part with the screw in it is not strong enough to take the hammer blow, it will break.

Sockets come in 6, 8, and 12 points and 1/4", 3/8", 1/2", and bigger drives. The points refer to the way the socket grips the bolt or nut. 6 and 12 point work on hex head bolts and nuts. The 6 point has a very strong grip on the hex head. the 12 point has a weaker grip but allows the socket to go on the bolt easier. I always try to get 6 point sockets. I don't think the 12 point are that useful. The drive refers to the square that is used to drive the socket. 8 point sockets are used on the square nuts seen on farm machinery. You will need sockets in the same sizes as your wrenches. Sockets below 10mm will use 1/4" drive handles. 3/8" drive goes from 10mm up to 19mm. 1/2" drive goes from 10mm on up to 36mm or so. 3/8" seems to be the drive to use for most bike work.

The handles for these sockets come in all kinds of shapes, sizes, and styles. T-Handles are handy, as are rachet handles. Just pick the ones you like. Socket extensions come in all sizes from 1 1/2" long on up. Get several. You can hook them together to get any length extension you want.

Pliers are useful for holding things tightly. They come in lots of shapes and sizes. Vice-Grip types are very useful. If you only have one make it a medium sized Vice-Grip. Better yet, get a whole bunch of them, you will use them.

No good mechanic ever uses a Crescent Wrench...but we all have a good selection of them hidden in our tool box ! Now you would think that with as many tools as I have, I would always have exactly the right wench for every nut and bolt. But, you would be wrong. I am always running across bolts that nothing fits. For those bolts, I keep the trusty Crescent Wrench. So tell everyone you never use a Crescent Wrench and keep a good supply of them !

If it's a British bike like Triumph, BSA, Norton and the like, it will have nuts and bolts that are British Standard. These are also called Whitworth. You will need a set of these Wrenches if you work on British stuff. Speaking about funny sized bolts, from time to time you will run across bolts and nuts that are rounded off or it's a weird size. If you measure the bolt and compare it with this chart, you will be able to select a socket or wrench that is pretty close in size. Print it out and put it in your toolbox. My thanks to Flanders Co., a motorcycle parts distributor, for giving me permission to reprint this chart from their catalog.

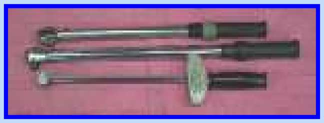
There are lots of other tools out there and the ones you will want will depend on the job you are doing. If you are just starting your tool box, here is what I would consider a good start.

- A good hammer
- Impact Driver and Bits
- Set of 6-point, meteric sockets, 6mm-19mm,
- Set of 6-point, inch sockets, 5/32"-7/8",
- 1/4" and 3/8" drive rachet
- 1/4" and 3/8" drive T-Handles
- 3" and 6", 1/4" drive Extentions. 1&1/2", 3", 6", 12" 3/8" drive Extentions
- Metric Combination Wrenches, 6-19mm
- Inch Combination Wrenches, 5/16"-7/8"
- Small, medium and large Phillips and Sloted screw drivers...Hey, just buy a set !
- Set of allen wrenches in both inch and metric.
- A Two foot long prybar. A real BIG screw driver will do.
- A two foot long piece of Brass round stock in both 3/8" and 1/2" diameter
- A really big Crescent Wrench
- A pair of Needle Nose and Slip-Joint Pliers
- A pair of wire cutters, also called Diagonal Pliers
- A small, medium, and large Vice-Grip type pliers
- A long, hollow, piece of pipe, big enough to fit over your rachet handles. For leverage. A Cheater !
- A metal box to put everything in !



The list is endless, but at least now you have a place to start !

Someone requested an easy way to print out the wrench referance and then my computer crashed and lost all my E-Mail so I could not send him this PDF file. Here it is-See the PDF Folder on the CD.

ADVANCED TOOLS

After you have been wrenching a short while you will find that you need more than just regular hand tools to get the job done. You need some special tools. Tools made for one job and only one job. Some of these special tools will only do one job on one type of engine, like a flywheel puller. Others do one type of job common to a lot of different engines, such as a micrometer to measure the size of an engines bore. The one thing all these tools have in common, is that they make that one job fast and easy. I'm only going to cover the special tools that are common to a lot of engines. The other "one job, one engine" types of tool you will just have to get as the need arises. The ones we will cover here will be the ones you will really need to help you get the job done, and done right. I will cover them in order of their importance, but if you are bucks short, buy the cheap ones first !

Torque Wrench. A cheap "must have". The 3/8" drive ones are in the $20-$30 dollar range. 1/2" $40-$50. Get one of each drive, 3/8" and 1/2". Sears has ones that work just fine. A needful tool.

Easy Outs. Use Easy Outs to remove broken bolts. Drill the right sized hole in the center of the broken bolt, tap the easy out in gently with a hammer and unscrew the bolt. Sounds so easy, doesn't it ? Just don't break off the easy out if the bolt won't turn. They are very hard and you will never be able to drill it out.

Circlip Pliers. You have to have these to get your front forks apart, pull some clutch baskets, disassemble gear clusters, all kinds of things. They come in inner and outer types, and there are several different nose sizes and shapes. Sometimes, I think it's best to buy them as you need them or you can just get a set.

Soldering Gun. A Soldering Gun or Iron. If you are going to fix wiring or make control cables, you have to have one. They come in lots of different sizes. Bigger the wire, the bigger the gun needed. If you only have one, a 200 watt model will do just about anything on a motorcycle.

Tap and Die Set. Taps to cut threads in holes and dies to cut threads on shafts. Taps and dies are handy, not only to cut new threads, but to clean up old ones too. There are lots of different sizes. Get as big of set, both standard and metric, as you can afford. Very handy.

An Air Compressor. You need an air compressor ! Not only is it handy for airing up tires and blowing dust off things, but it opens up to you the world of air tools. Like air guns, air ratchets, air chisels, etc. Air tools have lots more power than electric tools. This is a must have. You can pick up a good, new, air compressor for as little as $200.00. Look around in garage sales and they cost even less. Get one with as big of tank as you can, to reduce engine cycle time. You can pipe air all over you shop. Use 3/4" CPVC pipe. It's cheap, so you can put an air fitting right next to your work. Air hose is cheap, but tends to rot it you leave it out in the sun. CPVC pipe will last forever, it's cheap. Pipe it everywhere !

Air Tools. If you are just starting out, buy one of the cheap kits that has everything in it. If it looks like you are really going to use one particular gun a lot, then you can buy an expensive brand name. I like the "Chicago Pneumatic." Brand.

Dial Calipers. With Dial Calipers you can measure shaft diameters, lengths, widths, depths. Truth be known, with a little care, you can measure piston skirt diameters and maybe even cylinder bore diameters... well, on top and bottom anyway ! These can be had for $25.00 and up. Sears sells a good, cheap set.

A Set of Micrometers. You can get Micrometers in sets of individual tools, 0-1", 1"-2", 2"-3", etc. or in a universal set that has one large micrometer and several adapters. You will need both inside and outside micrometers. These can get quite pricy. $100-00 and up. The universal sets are cheaper. I have the universal set 'cuse I'm poor (and cheap !). If you are going to measure cylinders bores and piston skirts, and you want to do it right, you MUST have the a micrometer.

Micro-Fiche Reader and Micro Fiche. Once you start using micro-fiche you will wonder how you ever got along without one. These 5 by 7 inch sheets of film will show you where every part goes and give you the part number. Very handy when a basket case comes in. You can get ALL the Yamaha shop manuals on micro-fiche. Sweet ! A Micro-Fiche reader can cost $300.00 to $700.00 new, so go to a used office furniture supply place and they will probably have one for $100.00. Fiche decks cost $100.00-$200.00 and are worth every penny. You can also get individual fiche too. I bought my first micro-fiche reader from a used office supply place for $100.00. Used it for 15 years and then got a better one in a garage sale for $25.00 !

Valve Seat Cutters. You can get valve seat cutters in lots of different sizes and angles. Expensive, they can be $100.00 or more each. If you don't have a lot of valves seats to do, it may be cheaper to farm it out to someone who has a set.

Cylinder Hone. There are lots of different types of cylinder hones from cheap spring hones to break the glaze, to expensive hones from Sunnen and Ammco which will accurately hone a cylinder oversize.

Other Tools. A parts washer and sandblaster cabinet are nice to have, but are really not a necessity. From here on, the list is endless, just try not to get carried away. Before you get any tool, ask yourself this. Will this tool SAVE me time ? Will this tool SAVE me money ? Will this tool EARN me money ? If the answer is no or I'm not sure, then maybe it would be better to not get it. I just LOVE special tools, but anymore, I don't get new and fancy tools without a lot of proof that they will make me money or save me time. I have thousands in tools that promised much but delivered little. I sure wish I could have all that money back ! Don't you make the same mistake.

Another thing to remember. Only get the quality you need. If your an easy one to please, "You only want the best," you'd better have a lot of money. I find most manufacturers have a top of the line tool, with all the bells and whistles, to separate the fools who "only want the best" from their money and then a meat and potatoes model, for those who need quality at a reasonable price. Buy only the quality you need.

Special Tools

Special tools. I hate special tools. I love them too because some of them are super neat. However, if you build something right. If you build something you want people to use and use and use. Something you are really proud of, you are not going to require a mechanic to have dozens of special tools to fix it. You want your customer to be able to ride that bike to the uttermost part of the earth and be able to fix a worn out part with simple hand tools.

So why do they have special tools? A few. A very few, are needful but the rest? I think it is just the manufacturers trying to make you go to their dealer and pay top dollar to get your bike fixed. If you don't have or can't afford the special tool you can't fix your bike. So special tools is something we have to live with.

Special tools seem to come in three flavors.

1. Tools specific to one procedure on one model of engine or frame. Like a clutch basket puller with a special thread.
2. Tools specific to one procedure on more then one model of engine or frame from the same manufacturer. Like most Flywheel pullers.
3. Tools specific to one procedure on a large number of engines or frames from many different manufacturers. Like a piston pin puller.

This can be very frustrating for a mechanic. If you have to buy two or three special tools, at $30 to $80 each or more, it really cuts into your labor profits. I remember buying a $50 special tool for one job and it was years before another bike with the same engine came in and I could use it again. Most irritating.

However irritating, special tools are there for a reason. If you try to substitute some other tool you better be very careful. There usually are reasons why you have to use a special tool. I have seen guys try to use a three leg bearing puller to try and get a flywheel off. Sometimes they get away with it and sometimes it cracks the flywheel. But all is not lost if you need a special tool and have no bucks to buy one. You can make one.

Make Special Tools

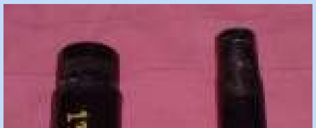
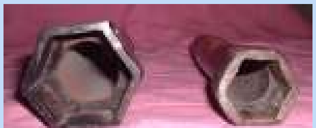
OK, we have a job to do that requires a special tool. If we buy the tools it takes all the profit out of the job. What do we do? Simple... we make it!



Depending on our skill and desire many complex special tools can be made. It may be as simple as heating up a combination wrench with a propane torch and bending it into a special shape to cutting and welding steel into a complex special tool.



When hunger forced me into working on three and four wheel ATCs I found a lot of them had huge nuts on their rear ends. I found I could hacksaw one side of a thick open-end wrench off, weld a piece of metal in and whala! A Special tool.

You can take wrenches, cut the end off and weld that end to a socket and bang, another special tool.

To make big sockets measure the side of the nut and cut six pieces of one inch wide, quarter inch thick, steel strap. place the pieces of steel around the nut and wrap it with some wire. Then weld. You can make all kinds of big sockets this way. Weld an old half inch drive socket on it and you have a big special socket. Need it to be real deep? Weld a length of steel pipe on it and then weld the socket on the other end.

You can make quite a complicated special tool. I had a wheel come in last year for a new set of bearings. Easy job right? Not! It had a special aluminum nut with six slots on it. Why they couldn't have used a nice, easy to remove circlip I don't know. So I cut up some steel strap and welded the pieces together. Then I welded an old nut onto it and boom. A dandy special tool that worked great. Same tool from the manufacturer, $60-80. After market, $20-25. Cost to make? Basically nothing but I did have to clean some rust off the strap steel I used!

So with a bit of welding, you can make a lot of special tools and save a lot of money. If you don't have a welder you can still make a number of special tools just by heating a wrench with a propane torch and bending it. If you have a lath, wow, the skies the limit.

And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind?
Ecclesiastes 5:16

Back in the day, from the first time motorcycles were produced, the spark was triggered by a set of points. In 1980 everything started to change. Yes, before 1980 there were electronic ignition systems and after 1980 there were points ignition system but, for all intensive purposes, points ignition systems ended in 1980. So perhaps I am laboring for the wind in that what I am going to tell you is 35 year old, dated news. Still, it may help some of you time your old points Magneto ignitioned motorcycle.

When you time points in a battery coil ignition you can use a circuit tester light, know exactly when the points open and be very accurate in your timing. Not so in a Points Magneto ignition. The reason is because the points are always grounded in a Points Magneto. That is the bad news. The good news is the points change the resistance in the wire and that resistance change can be recognized with a Buzz Box, so you can know exactly when your points open and your spark occurs. If you are not understanding why this is important go read the Magneto timing page HERE.

To hook up a Buzz Box you simply attach one clip to ground and the other to the points wire which is usually a black wire or a black wire with a white stripe or some other color wire. Whatever color wire it is, it is the wire going from the points to the ignition coil. Attach the Buzz Box and turn it on. With the points closed, it will make a buzzing sound hence the name Buzz Box. If you open the points the buzzing sound will change tone just as they open. The tone changes sometimes a little and sometimes a lot. This tone change is when the spark occurs, at the spark plug, firing off the fuel/air mixture in the engine.

Here are some audio and video files that illustrate what is happening. They are all the same, just different formats.

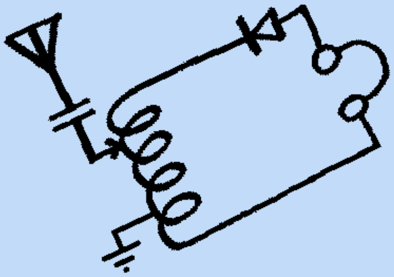
Back in the day some people claimed you could use a Transistor radio too. You just have to find the right spot with the radio station tuning dial and run some low voltage through the points. A real pain in the rear as I remember, especially as there are better cheap ways to do it.



OK, story time. I'm in my college dorm room with my room mate sitting at his desk and I am lying on my bed trying to sleep. He has his radio on. He had to have his music. Most irritating. Had no taste in music. Unbeknown to him, I had discovered my cheap junky radio had a hidden talent. At the far end of the tuning dial was a magical spot. If I turned the radio on, with the sound at the lowest setting, and moved the tuning dial just a bit at the far end of the tuning range my room mate's radio would go wee, ooo, waaa, wee.

He would then adjust his dial and it would go away. I was laying there with my eyes closed and my hand lying on my radio, seemingly asleep. I would very slowly move the dial again. Wee, ooo, waaa, wee, went his radio. He would adjust it again. A minute later more wee, ooo, waa, wee. What fun and yes, sad to say, I do have a mean streak in me. Well, after twenty minutes of fun, my room mate finally turned his radio off and I finally got to sleep. You got to love cheap late 1960s radios.

Just a thought, do you remember Transistor Radios? I sure do. I had a Two Transistor Radio. If you could afford it, you got a Six Transistor Radio which was much better. Alas, I was poor and could only afford a two transistor one. It had a little 1/4" diameter antenna. It was a collapsible type that could extend to around twenty-five to thirty inches in length. It worked much better then my Crystal Radio. As I remember little Transistor Radios were very popular back in the day. It was very hard to look "Cool" with a thirty inch Antenna sticking above your head but we did it. Anything to have our "Vibes"!

Want to make a Crystal Radio? Go HERE Or HERE for free plans.

OK, so we need something that will work and we need it RIGHT NOW! No time to build something. Well, there is a way out. That way out is a lowly Ohmmeter. This is all loose and gooey. The internal resistance of the Ohmmeter is about .9 Ohms so the real resistance is about 1.4 Ohms. That is not very much. Your results may vary. Up down, who knows. The big thing to remember is that when the reading changes is when the points open.

Here are some video files that illustrate what the Ohmmeter is doing. They are the same, just different formats.

1. AVI file 8,253 KB
2. MPG file 2,560 KB

Points Closed

Points Open

"OK, that is nice" you say, "but haven't you noticed? The economy is down and I am POOR. I no gots a big fancy Ohmmeter. What do I do now?" No problem, Go bum a cigarette, throw the tobacco and filter away and cut the cigarette paper into long stripes. Now put one end between the points as you turn the flywheel gently pull on the cigarette paper. When the paper comes out the points are just opening. This is very accurate and it is very cheap.

Impact Driver

Well, you got your wrench set and screwdrivers and a hammer. You've got a bike and the desire to fix it but to get into those engine cases off you need one more thing. Your first special tool and probably your most useful special tool. You need an Impact Driver.

Steel screws in aluminum crankcases. As time passes those screws seem to lock in and can seem to be impossible to get out. With an Impact Driver those Philips head screws will come right out with no damage to the screw. Without one the screws will just not come out and you will end up damaging the head of the screw when your screw driver pops out. .

An Impact Driver is like a big thick screwdriver. Inside there is a spring pushing on a cylinder of metal. On the end of that cylinder is a 3/8″ or 1/2″ square drive for a socket or screwdriver bit. There are two grooves machined in the cylinder and also matching groves in the impact driver body. Two ball bearings fit in these groves. All of this is held inside the impact driver body by a cap and circlip.

To use simply put on the correct bit and turn the tool in the direction you wish the screw to go. You will feel the tool sort of cock it’s self. Now hit the round end of the driver with a hammer and boom, the screw is loose. Most times anyway! If the head is all buggered up from someone else trying to remove the screw the driver bit may slip out. To cure this try putting some valve grinding compound or very fine sand on to the screw head. This will give the bit something to hold onto. If that does not work you will have to drill out the screw head to remove it.

One other thing to remember. You are hitting this screw with a hammer. Make sure that whatever the screw is screwed into is strong enough to take the blow without breaking. I once had a screw holding the tachometer cable to the top of a twin cam Honda engine refuse to come out. I was too lazy to drill it out and used my Impact Driver. I didn’t hit it very hard and it came right out. However, that screw was on the top half of one of the camshaft mounts. Cracked it! Just a little crack too but it was enough. Expensive little beggars too! Fortunately I found a real good used one, but it would have been better, and certainly more professional, to not have broken it in the first place. If in doubt, drill it out!

One final note. If you don’t have your Impact driver with you. A tight screw can sometimes be loosened by hitting it BEFORE trying to remove it. Use a screwdriver that has the steel shaft going all the way through the handle, If the shaft only goes through part way all you will do is break your handle. Put the screwdriver on the screw and then hit the end of the screwdriver with a hammer several times. Now try to remove it. Sometimes it helps to twist the screwdriver with your hand as you strike the end. Kind of a poor mans makeshift Impact Driver.

Good Shop Practice

Any time we work on an engine we want the to do the work quickly and accurately. To do this we need to stay organized. I am always surprised some, otherwise good, mechanics keep their tool boxes. Good mechanics takes time, so does searching for tools. Spend your time twisting wrenches not looking for them.

While in collage I worked for a large auto parts and truck rebuilding company. They had about seven mechanics who worked exclusively at rebuilding gigantic 16 speed truck transmissions. Two of the mechanics were quite old. At least One was 67 and the other was 71. The others were young guys around 25-30. The old guys always worked in slow motion. They had all their tools set out in front of them. Big 3/4" drive sockets, real monster rattle guns (air guns). Everything BIG, which made sense. Those big sixteen speed transmissions must have weighed 600 pounds or more. They would use a socket and then clean it off and put it back in it's place. They were never in a hurry. If something in the shop needed fixed or a special tool made they were the ones that did it. They had that much free time. The young guys were always working like mad. Dirty tools flung all over the place. They had no free time at all.

Now the interesting thing about all this was the number of finished transmissions each mechanic had done at the end of the day. Near as I could figure, these old guys were working TWICE AS FAST as the young guys. I think it was the way these old guys worked. They never hunted for a socket. They never had to redo anything because they took their time and did it right in the first place.

I always remembered that and I have found that memory to be valuable. I always try to keep my tools clean, neat and in order. In fact, it's just about the only thing I'm neat about. It really does help. At the end of the day I police up all my tools, clean them, and put them back on my tool board. You may have to work out of your tool box and not have a tool board, but you can still have neat tools. You can buy tool box organizers or make something to fit the tools you have. Whatever way you go, keep those tools neat so you can always grab the tool you want without searching for it.

Another good shop practice I use is to keep a good Fire Extinguisher very handy. From any one place in my shop you can see at least two of them hanging on the walls. I have them in every room. They have saved me from serious burns several times. Pain hurts, slows you down, and costs you money. A Fire Extinguisher, properly used, will eliminate any threat of pain from fire. Buy one and keep it handy.

When test riding a strange (to you anyway) motorcycle, Good Shop Practice is to ALWAYS wear a Helmet. Things can happen. Brakes can fail ("Oh yeah," the customer says, "I forgot to tell you the brakes don't work !") Gears can lock up. Countershaft sprockets can come off and lock the chain. Any number of things can make you wish you had worn a Helmet, not to mention gloves and a leather jacket.

Clean, neat tools, several good, working, Fire Extinguishers and a good Helmet. Make this your shop practice. It will save you a lot of time, money and pain.

One last thing. If the guy you work for won't put lots of Fire Extinguishers around the shop DO NOT ARGUE with him. Buy your own and keep it by your side. HEY, It's your life. Live it own your own terms! OK?

DAN'S
ONLINE MOTORCYCLE COURSE
" HOMEWORK "

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Timothy 2:15

Well this is a school, even if it is " Online ", and every school has Homework. but unlike diagramming sentences in English class, this homework should be fun.

First I want you to find, beg, borrow or buy ( but not steal ! ) several items. A salvage yard would sell this stuff cheap or maybe a friend might have these laying around.

1. An old Motorcycle crankcase. It can be broken or dented but it must have a lot of it's screw holes in good condition...the threads have to be good.
2. An old cylinder. It can be rusted but the fins have to be in good condition.
3. A big bunch of bolts, nuts, screws, and flat washers in sizes from 6 mm on up to 12 mm.
4. A big strong Vice.
5. A good Torque Wrench.
6. Strong sockets, of sizes to fit the bolts. Try to use impact grade sockets or at least the Guaranteed forever type.
7. Safety Glasses
8. The rest of your tool box.

First put on the safety Glasses, then I want you to take one of the 6 mm bolts, put a flat washer and 2 or 3, 8 mm nuts on it, then another flat washer. Now screw it into one of the threaded holes on the crankcase. Now I want you to take the Torque Wench and set it at 10 Lbs. Turn the bolt until the wench indicates 10 Lbs or it clicks. Not very much is it ? Now take a 10 mm combination wrench and loosen the bolt and retighten, by hand. Check it with the Torque Wench and see how close you can come to 10 Lbs of torque. Do this a number of times.

When you feel that you can reproduce this torque reliably, increase the amount by 5 LBs and then 5 Lbs more. Keep doing this until the threads in the crankcase strip out. I want you to get the " Feel " for the right torque for this bolt ( 7 to 10 Ft. Lbs ) and for the torque that strips it out. We do this with a junk crankcase so you don't strip out a good one.

Now, do the same thing again only this time put a steel nut on the bolt and put it in a vice. Go through the sequence again, going up 5 Lbs in torque each time, until something gives or breaks. Use the Chart below as a general guide. Do this with each size of bolt. 6 mm, 8 mm, 10 mm, 12 mm. Be careful when you do the larger sizes. You will need to use an a " Cheater ". This is a piece of pipe, that fits on the end of the wrench to give you more leverage. You don't need to break the bigger bolts. I just want you to learn the " Feel " of the different Torque settings. Use your head and don't get carried away. The object is to learn the Torque settings for different bolts and how strong they are, not to break bolts, although this may happen.

Take the Cylinder and with a big screw driver, break one of the fins off. You might want to put it in a vice for this. They break off pretty easy don't they ? Now hit them dead, straight on with a big hammer. Didn't break did it ? Now, hit it at an angle. It broke, didn't it ? In other words, you can hit the cylinder fins dead on and they don't break, but if hit at an angle they do. This will be handy to remember when you run across a cylinder that is really stuck to the case. Try putting a large screw driver at the base of a fin and hit the end of the screw driver with a hammer. The fin doesn't break does it ? Now try the same thing at the end of a fin . Breaks right off doesn't it ? Experiment hitting and prying and levering the cylinder in different places. You may want to get another crankcase and cylinder from a different engine and practice some more. The more you practice the more money you will save. How, you ask? Cylinders cost hundereds of $$$ and helicoils run $15 each and more. If you don't break it, you don't have to replace it!

General Torque Specifications

| Bolt (thread dia) | Nut | Torque (ft lbs) |
|---|---|---|
| 6 | 10 | 7 |
| 13–14 | 8 | 15 |
| 17 | 10 | 25–30 |
| 19–22 | 12–14 | 30–35 |
| 26–27 | 17–18 | 40–50 |

Starting The Engine

Starting an engine. It should be easy, but sometimes it isn't. Each engine has a starting procedure or drill. The reason for this is that cold gas does not vaporize well. Gas will not burn unless it is in a vapor form. The colder the engine is, the harder it is for gasoline to vaporize. Bush pilots who have crashed in the Arctic report that gasoline will not start a fire in forty below zero temperatures. In fact, you can put a lit match out in it. Fortunately, we usually do not have to start our bikes at forty below but we do have to start our engines when they are cold. For this reason most engines require a richer then normal fuel mixture to start from cold. A hot engine quickly vaporizes fuel from the carb. Because a cold engine doesn't vaporize gas as well as a hot one, you must put in a larger quantity of fuel to get enough vaporized gasoline to start the engine.

Motorcycle carburetors have either an enriching circuit, a choke or a float plunger.

Carb with Enrichening Circuit.

Choke type carb.

Float plunger carb.

1. If you have an enriching circuit type carburetor the starting drill is this. Turn on the ignition and fuel, pull the enriching lever or plunger, leave the throttle closed, and hit the starter button or kick start the engine. If you open the throttle any it will prevent the enriching circuit from working properly. Sometimes the plunger will be activated by a lever or a cable.
2. If you have a choke type carburetor the starting drill is this. Turn on the ignition and fuel, put on the choke, open the carburetor throttle 1/8 to 1/4 and hit the starter button or kick start the engine. The choke can be operated by a lever or a cable. Sometimes, the choke lever will have a spot to attach a cable too.
3. If you have a carburetor that only has a float plunger, you will need to hold the plunger down till the carb floods. Then open the throttle about 1/8 to 1/4 and then kick or hit the button. Some carbs will have both a choke and a float plunger.

This will start most engines. As an engine ages and piles up the miles you may need to vary the starting drill just a bit. Perhaps open the throttle a bit more or less. Open it for one kick and then close it. You will just have to experiment with each engine.

Older British twins like Norton, Triumph, and BSA require a staring drill that is just a bit different. Turn the gas and ignition on but don't put on the choke. With your thumbs, push the float plunger on the side of the carb (also called a float tickler) down and hold it down till your thumbs become wet with gasoline. Now open the throttle about 1/8 of a turn and kick. My Norton 750cc twin would always start within three kicks using this method.

If you put on the choke or enriching circuit and find that you have put too much extra gas into the engine, flooding it, you can clear the engine by opening the throttles wide open and cranking the engine. This creates a zero vacuum condition in the throat of the carburetor. That means only air, and no gas is drawn into the engine. This, in turn, will clear the excess gasoline out of the engine.

When you rebuild an engine all the parts are new and rough and don't really know each other very well. Because of this, a new engine may be hard to start for the first time. With a fire extinguisher close by, try a small squirt of gas, from an eye dropper, down the spark plug hole. Reinstall the spark plug and it should start. You can use starting fluid, but you need to be very careful and NOT use too much. Same with gas. Just a small squirt. If it doesn't start, find out why. Don't keep pouring more gas or starting fluid down the engine. If you do, a stray spark could end up blowing the exhaust pipe off or setting fire to the engine!

Sometimes you will run across an old two stroke engine that will only start with a squirt of starting fluid. Often, the engine will continue to start for the rest of the day as long as the engine does not get too cold. The next day, with a dead cold engine, you have to use starting fluid again. This usually indicates worn out seals.

Most of the big single cylinder motorcycle engines now-a-days come with electric starters. This makes life a lot easier unless we have an older engine with only a kick starter. These engines will usually have a manual compression release. The idea behind the compression release is this. If the position of the piston, when you start, is just after top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke, when the engine is turned, it will go through the exhaust and intake strokes easily and come up on the compression stroke with as much kinetic energy as possible. This makes starting much easier and more likely to happen.

To start these older engines (made before 1978) push on the kick starter until you feel the engine come up on the compression stroke. Now pull the compression release lever and continue pushing on the kick starter till it just goes over Top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke. Set the choke and throttle where you want it and give it as hard of kick as you can. Hang that rear end of yours out to give some extra leverage and really give it a kick! If it doesn't start... do it again!

Most of the big singles made after 1978 (give or take a year or two) have some sort of automatic compression release. When you push the kick starter a cam attached to a cable works the compression release. Some engines have both an automatic compression release and a manual one. Lots of newer big singles just have a spring loaded automatic compression release on the camshaft and an electric starter.

Ahh, but not always. The 2015 Yamaha SR400 has a manual release and a window on the end of the camshaft. Line up an internal marker in the camshaft window and kick. Just exactly like we did back in the 1970s.

Starter "Kick Indicator" Window

Starter "Kick Indicator" Marker

If you don't have a kick starter and your electric starter fails, you only have one choice... push start it. The drill is this. Put the engine in second gear. This will allow the rear wheel to turn the engine over easier. Now pull the bike BACKWARDS with the clutch engaged. You will feel the engine turn over and then the rear wheel will lock up from the engine compression. This means that the piston is just past Top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke only in reverse. This is right where you want to be. With the ignition on, choke and throttle set, pull the clutch lever in and start pushing. Push as fast as you can. When you are going as fast as you can push jump onto the bike and let go of the clutch. You want to release the clutch exactly when your rear end hits the seat. You can land side saddle or straddling the bike. If the engine starts, pull in the clutch lever, keep the engine running, seat yourself properly on the bike and off you go! If it does not start, you will have to reset the engine and try again. On a big bike you can work up quite a sweat doing this! It helps if you can push down hill.

Some of the four stroke engines in four wheel ATVs have a compression release lever right on the cylinder head. You turn the lever to set it and then pull the pull starter cord. If the engine does not start with one pull, you have to reset the compression release and pull again.

Here is something to be aware of on small, kids type, four wheel ATVs. If the kids report hard starting, check the choke. Some of them have spring loaded chokes. That is, the choke shaft has a spring that keeps the choke closed. A lever pushes and holds the choke in the open position for running. If this spring breaks, the choke plate will not firmly close, if at all. The choke appears closed but is not. Mostly kids use this type of ATV. They will crank and crank on the electric starter overheating it and burning it out. At $200 a starter, this is not a cheap fix. So keep an eye on those choke shaft springs.

New Engine Break-In

"Ye shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left."
Deuteronomy 5:32

¶ Any rebuilt or new engine has to go through a break in process. Each piece of moving metal must get to know and fit with the piece of metal it is moving against. Usually, the manufacturers put a sticker on the speedometer or tachometer telling you to take it easy for 600 miles or so. Your buddy says "If you want to run it hard, break it in hard." As you might expect, the truth is not on the right hand or the left but, in the center.

The problem is this. All this rubbing produces heat, which can cause oil to fail, which can cause a piston to seize to a cylinder wall. On the other hand, if there is not enough rubbing, the piston rings will not seat right with the cylinder walls. If this happens the engine will not reach it's full power potential. If the only new parts are piston and rings, as in an engine rebuild, we only have to worry about heat build up from the new parts. If the entire engine is new, the heat built up is even greater, because all the parts are new.

Yes, it is true that we have much better machining and quality control on new motorcycle engines, then we did in the past but, moving parts still have to wear in. If you have better, harder metal, it will take longer then if you have poorer, softer metal. Years ago I decided to bore my BMW motorcycle to the first oversize. After a hundred miles of break-in I started to ride normally, which is to say FAST. Well, the bike just was not running right. I re-jetted the carb and it started to run OK. Another hundred miles passed and I had to rejet again. This went on for over one thousand miles. After the last re-jetting I realized I had just put the stock jets back in! It took better then 1100 miles for those rings to break-in. The steel used in BMW motorcycles is very hard.

On one hand, if you run the bike too easy, you run the risk of the cylinder walls glazing over and then, maybe, never seating properly. On the other hand, if you run the bike too hard, you run the risk of engine seizure. I suspect, that even if you do glaze the cylinder walls over, if your run the engine hard enough and long enough, the rings will seat. However, this may take several thousand miles, or more, to do.

So what's a biker to do? Turn not to the right hand or to the left. A compromise is in order. This is what I do with a freshly rebuilt engine. It will work on new engines too. On a straight, deserted road, I put the bike in second or third gear and accelerate with wide open throttle to about one or two thousand RPM BELOW red line. I then shut the throttle and coast down, in gear, to two thousand RPM or so to let the engine cool a bit. I then do it again. I do this drill about six to ten times, give or take. Then I ride around for a while at an easy pace. I do this several times, if possible. This seats the rings without overheating the engine. If the engine seems to be getting hot, stop the drill and ride around slowly till it cools down.

I would continue to do this little drill, every once in a while, during the entire break-in period. This break-in period should last five hundred miles of easy running. At five hundred miles you can start riding harder and harder till the engine is fully broken in at one thousand miles or so. Remember, DO NOT over heat the engine.

If you are doing any freeway riding. That is, running long periods of time at a steady throttle setting. I would also add this. Shut the throttle off and then on again, very quickly, every three or four miles. This tends to draw more oil up on the bottom of the pistons, lubing and cooling them. On a freshly rebuilt engine, I like to change the oil and filter at about two hundred miles and then every thousand miles thereafter. On a totally new engine, I change the oil and filter at one hundred fifty miles, three hundred miles, six hundred miles and twelve hundred miles. After that, change the oil and filter every one thousand miles.

MYSTERIOUS TWO STROKE SEIZURE

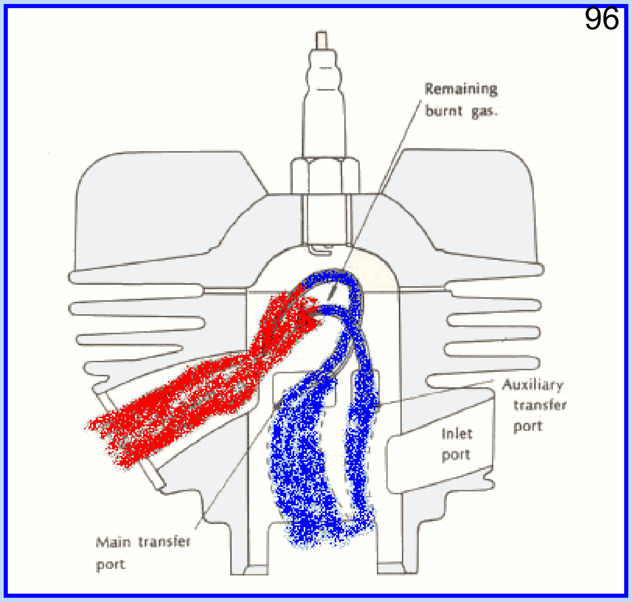
Your running along on your dirt Ring Ding and your not pushing it at all. Nice day, 1/2 throttle, grooven on the scenery, eat'n up the miles, head'n home, and then it happens. The bike locks up and you skid to a stop. Why ? ? ?

I've seen this a lot of times. The story varies a little but basically you were not pushing it, but you did have the throttle in one position for a long time. I've never heard anyone address this issue other than to say "Don't run your two stroke, for long distances on the street." I believe it really boils down to engine design. An engine is designed according to it's use. A two stroke lawnmower or outboard engine is designed to run at a steady speed. A two stroke motocross engine is designed to be run full throttle, part throttle, full throttle part throttle. On and off, on and off.



Most motorcycle two stroke engines use what is called loop scavenging. This refers to how the incoming charge flows into the cylinder and how the exhaust flows out. When an engine is run at a steady speed, I think the temperatures tend to stabilize and stay the same at different spots in the combustion chamber. It stays cooler at the intake ports and hotter at the exhaust ports. This is no problem as long as the temperatures stay lower than the melting temperature of the piston. That is the problem. If the engineers design the engine run at a steady speed, they make sure the temperatures are low enough to not cause problems.

Loop Scavenging Animation

Loop Scavenging Animation

Two-Stroke Motocross engines are designed for on and off running. I think that getting on and off the throttle all the time tends to mix the cool incoming mixture with the hot exhaust gases. This cools the area over the exhaust port and keeps the piston from melting. Run the engine at a steady speed and the area over the exhaust port starts to get hotter and hotter until Boom, things melt. The problem is the steady running. If you run steady at half throttle it will take you longer to burn down than if you where going at three quarters throttle, but sooner of later it will happen. At least that's my theory as to why it happens. Probably, it does not make much difference these days. Two-Stroke engines are getting very rare indeed.

Bottom line? Don't run your Two-Stroke Dirt Bike at a steady speed. If you have to run on the street, keep working that throttle on and off.

INCREASING THE POWER OF YOUR ENGINE

Now believe me, I just LOVE to hop up an engine. However, the best advice I can give you is this... DON'T DO IT ! Why do I say this ? Because there is a better way. Sell your little bike and... Buy a bigger bike. To put it another way "Speed costs money, how fast can you afford to go ?"

Everybody seems to think, "If I just take off the muffler and air cleaner, hang on a big carb, and fiddle with the tires, I'll go really, really fast." Maybe forty years ago this approach might have worked, maybe. But not now. Nowadays, everything is interconnected. If you change one thing you mess up the balance of everything else.

But, you're not going to listen to me are you ? Ok, let's go over a few things that might help.

Bigger is better. The cheapest and easiest way to more power is to bore the engine bigger. I don't mean an oversize or two. Even the biggest oversize is only about 1 mm bigger in bore diameter. You need 3, 4, 5mm bigger. To feel a real seat-of-the-pants power increase you need a 10-12% horsepower increase. The best way to get this increase is with more cubic inches. This is true for both two and four stroke engines. Remember, you may have to put in a bigger main jet in the carb because you have a bigger engine. Next comes the intake and the exhaust. Here is where it can get hairy. Some engines respond well to an exhaust pipe change and some do not. Ask around and see what others with your type of bike have done. DON'T be the first on your block to find out what doesn't work. If you change the exhaust, make sure you can get lots of different jets for your carb. That is so you at least have a chance at making it run right if it doesn't work quite as well as the ad said. Don't throw out the old exhaust. If things don't work out, you can always put the old one back on.

A carb change can sometimes help, but don't go too big. Now it is true that you can jam a gigantic carb on and you can make it work, but it will be a real job of work. I had a friend who put a monster Mikuni carb on a Honda 350cc single. It was like 40 mm or so. Maybe bigger. A real monster. It was supposed to be pre-jetted... yeah, right. He stayed with me for several weeks while he worked on it just like a regular job. Like 6-8 hours a day, every day. At night he poured over all my carb and carb parts books. Bought a bunch of very carefully selected main jets, idle jets, jet needles and needle jets. It would barely start when he started and I got to admit it ran almost perfect when he finished... almost ! Now, I don't think it had any more Horse Power than stock, but it did run pretty smooth. Over 100 hours of careful tuning, another $150 in parts (at wholesale prices, no less) and all we can say is that it runs smooth ? I don't think it was worth it. Who knows... maybe it will be worth it to you.

If you have a four stroke you can put in a different cam and enlarge the ports and valves. A good polish job on the ports can help. A higher compression ratio can give a nice power increase too. Sometimes you can increase the stroke of the engine to make it bigger. However, this involves a different rod and repositioning the crank pin and sometimes grinding the mouth of the crankcase ... lots of work. One little cheap trick you can pull with cams is to grind the heel of the cam. That is, the part opposite the lob of the cam that pushes open the rocker arm. This enables you to tighten up the tappet a bit (but still keep the stock valve clearance) which will give your cam more lift, while retaining the stock opening and closing ramps. There is no pressure from the rocker arm on the heel, where you grind, so you don't have to worry if you grind through the case hardening on the surface of the cam heel.

If you have a two stroke you can cut the height and width of the ports. You can also do this with the ports in the piston, if it has any. Go very slooow with this grinding thing. Enlarge things just a little, then put her together and go for a ride. If you like what you've done, you might want to leave well enough alone. Get greedy, go to far and you will loose everything. The right expansion chamber exhaust can make a really big difference in the horse power and in the power band of the engine. Sometimes weight added to the flywheel can help make the bike more rideable. Changing the reed valves (located right in front of thr carb) to ones of better quality can give a power boost.

You will find that many small changes, say one ratio up in compression, a slightly hotter cam, a slightly bigger carb, a little freer flowing exhaust. Stuff like that will work better than one or two big changes. All this will take a lot of time and money. Then, when you finally got all that horse power dialed in, it blows the clutch. You put in a stronger clutch, and it blows third gear. Fix that and the drive chain has to be bigger, and then of all things, there's too much HP for the rear hub. So you put one on from a bigger bike and it weighs more, and then... ! You get the picture ? Not only that, when the clutch went I was doing 70-75 mph and it locked up the rear wheel. Pulling in the clutch didn't do one bit of good ! I didn't fall off either and it was on asphalt too ! To top it off the bike is now worth less money than a stock one. Why ? Well, do you really think a hopped up bike was run real easy ? Granny only ran it on Sundays against other old ladies in wheelchairs, didn't push it at all !

Change only one thing at a time. That way if the change is good, you will know what helped. Conversely, if you lose power, you will know exactly what to undo.

You will run into lots of things that you did not expect. I once put a hi lift cam in a 450 Honda twin. As I remember, it was a 5-speed and for some reason the circlip groove on the valve stem was machined just a bit lower than on the 4-speed valve and the little fork that closed the valve (it had torsion bar valve springs.) hit the valve seal at full lift, ruining it. If I used the valves off the 4-speed engine all was OK. Hmmm... maybe it was the 4-speed that was too short and the 5-speed cured it... it was a long time ago ! Anyway, I ended up having to change out perfectly good valves. This happens a lot when you do hop-up. The factories call it research and development, and declare it on their taxes. What do you call it ? Time and money... time and money. If you really have to do it, there are a lot of books out there. Get several and do your homework.

You can also get more power from Turbo Charging, Super Charging, and Nitros-Oxide injection, but what's the point ? Get a bigger bike. Remember, Speed costs money. How fast can you afford to go ?

REMOVE YOUR MOTORCYCLE'S SEAT

BMW 750/5

"And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain," Revelation 16:10

Well, don't feel too bad if you can't even get your motorcycle's seat off. I have the same problem! When you can't get your seat off to fix your bike your kingdom is filled with darkness and you really do end up gnawing you tongue for pain! You would think they would standardize this. I guess we should be thankful we don't have to shift on the right anymore. Hey, I can say that. I put 30,000 miles on an old Norton Atlas twin. Anyway, here are a few ways I've found to get seats off so you can give your tongue a rest. I'm sure there are more, new ways that we will find in the future.

- Open tool box, at rear of seat, with key and unhook or unbolt the seat from inside tool box.
- Pull lever on right or left side, up under the seat. It can also be at the rear of the seat, right or left side, again up under the seat. Lift seat off up and to the rear. Sometimes it's hooked on both sides with a rod or cable connecting both sides. These can break. Make sure both are unhooking. Sometimes, there is a spring...it can stretch and/or break too!
- Same as above only you use a key.
- Remove the two bolts on either side at the rear of the seat. Pull seat to rear.
- Nuts or bolts, at the rear and below seat, under the rear fender Remove 2-4 bolts holding down the rear seat (Pinion seat). Remove seat and then remove two bolts, at the rear, holding the front seat on.
- Unlock lever on side of seat. Seat then pivots on two hinges to open. Can open to the right or left. Might have no lock.
- Push button on side. Left side, I haven't found a push button on the right side... yet! Can be locked or unlocked with a key.
- Pull lever at front of seat, right or left side. Seat lifts up with the hinge at the rear.
- Pull lever at rear of seat, right or left side. Seat lifts up with hinge at front.
- Pull lever at front of seat, right or left, and whole seat comes off. Seat has pegs underneath that fit into rubber grommets on the frame.
- Gary E-Mailed me with this.

On the 1995 Yamaha Virago XV750 G or GC, To remove the seat;

STEPS

1. Forget about buttons, switches, levers.
2. Break out the handy tool box.
3. Remove the left box cover and the right Battery Box cover.
   note: never even knew there was a tool box under there.
4. Remove the top left hex drive screw that holds the tool box in place. It also acts as a hinge bolt.
5. On the battery box side remove a matching position bolt (also hinge bolt).
6. Slide seat forward and lift off.
7. DONE! Now you have access to electrical wiring for rear lights and the fuel tank rear retaining bolt.

Here are a few pictures that I have. I guess I should have taken more pictures of seat latches over the years. It was just not something that occurred to me at the time. If you would like to help Please send me some big, clear, in focus pictures of your seat.

There are lots more ways to attach a seat. For your edification I went through a bunch of parts manuals and found a number of ways different motorcycles latch their seats. Here are thirty three different exploded views in no particular order. Study them and that seat will come off without a gnawed tongue.

Seat Latches

Here are some Seat Latch exploded views for you to study. Enjoy!

INSTALLATION

1. If necessary, install grabstrap. Tighten to 11-17 Nm (97-150 in-lbs).
2. Push pillion toward front of motorcycle until mounting hole in base is approximately 25 mm (1 inch) in front of mounting hole in frame.
3. While applying downward pressure on middle of pillion, slide pillion rearward to fully engage slot on bottom with tongue on top of fender. Push rearward until mounting hole on pillion base is aligned with mounting hole in frame.
4. Install pillion base to frame. Tighten fastener to 11-17 Nm (97-150 in-lbs).
5. Install seat. Make sure both seat pins engage their bushings on the frame.
6. Press clip over seat hinge.
7. Install seat tether to hole in frame.

⚠WARNING

When closing the seat, make sure the ignition switch is in the FUEL position. If the ignition switch is in any other position when the seat is closed, the seat latch mechanism could be damaged.

8. Turn ignition switch to FUEL and close seat. Then turn ignition switch to LOCK.

⚠WARNING

After installing and locking seat, pull upward on the latch side of the seat to be sure it is locked in position. If seat is loose, it could shift position during vehicle operation resulting in loss of control of the vehicle and death or serious injury.

This chapter covers body components including the seat, fenders, footrests, forward controls, sidestand and fork lock.

Fuel tank removal is covered in Chapter Ten or Chapter Eleven.

Table 1 is at the end of this chapter.

Removal/Installation

1. Remove the seat retaining bolt (Figure 1).
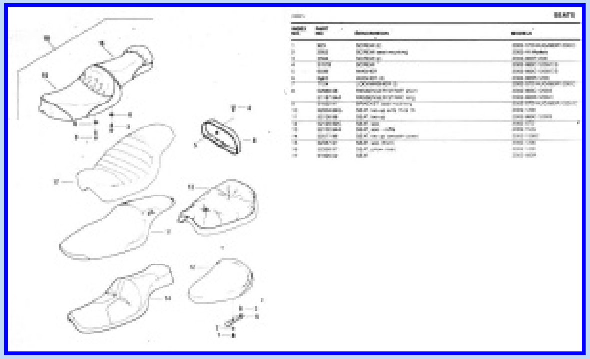
2. Move the seat towards the rear of the motorcycle so the seat disengages from the frame tab.



NOTE
On 1997-2002 models, account for the nylon retaining clip that retains the seat bolt nut to the fender.

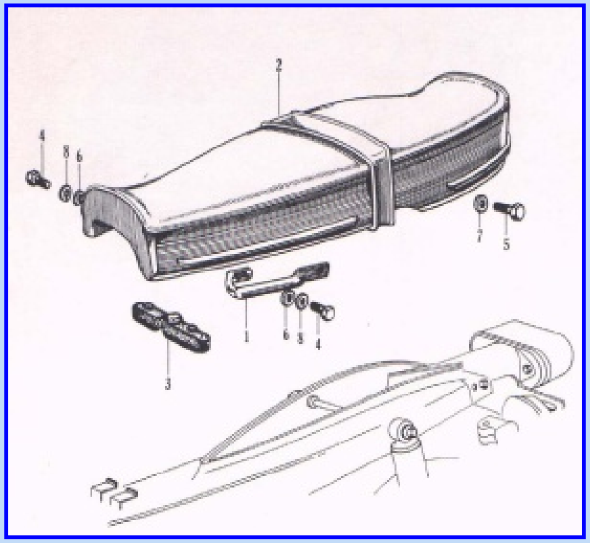
3. Reverse the removal steps to install the seat. Be sure the seat is secure before operating the motorcycle.



FRONT FENDER

1. Hold the front fender so it cannot fall after removal of the mounting bolts.
2. Remove the locknuts and bolts on both sides of the fender.
3. Remove the front fender.

CHEMICALS

Motorcycles use a lot of different types of chemicals and oils to keep them up and running. Here are a few that over the years, I have found useful. I will give the name of whatever oil or chemical I use, but it's not an endorsement. You don't have to use the same chemical if another brand will work. Remember, the important thing is that they work ! You can get these at a local Auto or Motorcycle parts store. I put the ones I use the most, on a shelf, near where I work, so I can get to them easily. So, for your edification, here are the ones I tend to use the most.

1. Penetrating Oil. Lots of times, bikes that have been sitting awhile have a lot of rust. For these bikes I like to use some sort of penetrating oil similar to WD-40. I prefer STP penetrating oil but I can't seem to get it any more. WD-40 does have the benefit of pulling water off the part treated with it. I've started using an oil, made by Kano, called "Kroil" which seems to works quite well. You want to spray on the penetrating oil, let it penetrate for awhile and try to take the part off. It may help to work the part back and forth, worrying it. The only problem I've found with penetrating oils is that they don't like to stick around. They seem to disappear after a day or two.

2. Light Snowmobile Oil. After using a penetrating oil, to loosen things up, I like to use a light, general purpose, snowmobile oil. It penetrates well and tends to stay where you put it. I use Mac's Snowmobile Oil.

3. Contact Cleaner. Electrical contact cleaner is great for cleaning corrosion off anything electrical. After it dries there's no residue left on the electrical parts. It also tends to dry out any moisture on the electrical contacts. Spray it on and work the switch, or whatever, back and forth to clean it off. Then spray more on to kinda wash the crud away. I like smell of the stuff Kal-Gard put out, but I don't see them anymore. Maybe they are out of business, but I don't care... I got a whole case !

4. Acetone. Use acetone to clean anything metal. Leaves it totally grease free.

5. Drive Chain Oil. I use any brand name, o-ring compatible, motorcycle chain oil that's on sale.
6. Armor All. I spray this on all rubber or plastic parts. Tends to rejuvenate most everything. A lot of times, it will even bring the color back. Good stuff.
7. Starting Fluid. Handy to get a reluctant engine to start. Use sparingly. A little goes a long way.
8. Non-Hardening Gasket Cement. I use Copper Coat by K&W. Use on gaskets that you should have replaced, but are too cheap to do so. Gaskets that are old and hard, but still in one piece.
9. Copper Spray-a-Gasket. Made by Permatex. Sprays on nice and neat. Use same as above.
10. Hylomar Gasket Dressing. Made by Loc-Tight. Use same as above.
11. Two and Four stroke Oil. Use a small bottle of each, for two and four stroke assembly.
12. Brake Kleen. Spray this on oily brake shoes and pads to take the oil out of them.
13. Gunk. This used to come in quart bottles, but now you can only get it as a spray. It makes oily dirt soluble with water. Spray it on and hose off with water. Now you have a nice clean engine to work on !
14. Dry Slide. I use this on old cables that have a lot of cracks in the outer covering. It's graphite in a solvent. It flows in tight places, the solvent evaporates, leaving the graphite, and graphite is a great lubricant.
15. Spray Carb Cleaner. I spray the carb cleaner into a small glass jar. Then put small carb parts, like jets, in it and let them soak. Also use it to spray through small passages and jets, in the carb body. Use goggles to protect your eyes, and look at the passages when you spray. If you can see the spray come through the passages, you can be pretty sure the passages are clear.
16. Loc-Tight. There are several different flavors of Lock Tight. At least get the standard one. Use it wherever you have bolts or nuts that tend to come loose.
17. Valve Guide lubricant. Briggs and Stratton # 93963. Use on valve stems, shafts, places like that. Can be used as an anti-seize compound.
18. Anti-Seize Compound. I use "Never-Seez", but there are a number of brands, just pick one. Put this on shafts that will be exposed to the weather, like wheels on rototillers, axle shafts, or nuts and bolts. I also use it on spark plug threads. Makes things much easier to disassemble in the far flung future.
19. Yamabond # 4. Get it from Yamaha. Best stuff on the market. Use on gasket less mating surfaces like crankcases. Works great for filling in gouges in surfaces.
20. Tinners Fluid. A weak acid used to prepare old wiring so hot solder will stick. Get it from a hardware store. The fancy boys say don't use it on wiring because it can cause corrosion... yeah right. Like the wire isn't corroded already !

This is just a partial list, but it's a place to start. Add to it as you go along.

Parts Cleaning

Cleaning parts. It has to be done but nobody likes to do it. Even if we don't like to do it, we can at least do it safely. Seems like every year I read about someone lighting themselves off cleaning parts with gasoline. NEVER use gasoline to clean parts. To clean parts we use Petroleum Solvent. Petroleum Solvent works every bit as good as gasoline but without the danger. You can buy it in five gallon containers from an auto parts store or a fuel oil distributor.

A large parts washer is nice to have because they usually have a pump to direct a stream of solvent onto your parts but a large pan will work too. You will also need a stiff bristle brush and an old tooth brush. Now dip the dirty part in the solvent and scrub off all the dirt with the brushes.

To keep my solvent clean, I like to clean most of the dirt off with an engine cleaner like GUNK. I usually do this with the engine still in the frame. Squirt the gunk on, work it in with a brush and then hose it off with water. This will get 95% of the dirt off. I then do the detail cleaning with Solvent.

After cleaning you can just set the part on some paper towels to dry or blow it off with compressed air. If you use compressed air, do not allow bearings to spin uncontrollably. This will danage the bearing.

Soap based cleaners like Gunk combine with the oily dirt and allow it to be soluable with water. A spray of water then removes all the dirt. These work pretty good but if you use them on steel, internal, engine parts and don't get all the water off, the parts will rust. Therefore I prefer to clean the outside of an engine with Gunk and the inside with solvent.

AIR IMPACT WRENCHES

¶ Rattle Guns, I just love Rattle Guns. They have so much power! They are just wonderful. With an air gun you can pop the nut off a flywheel without locking the engine. Just hold the flywheel with your hand.

Air Guns come in a lot of sizes and styles. There are the guns we are all familiar with. They come in 1/2" drive and are used a lot in most every shop for pulling lug nuts off wheels and most any big nut that needs to come off.

1/2" Drive Air Gun
With Extended Nose

3/4" Drive Air Gun "Godzilla"
With 1/2"adaptor

Then there are other types of air operated tools. Ratchets, Saws, Chisels, Cut Off Wheels, all kinds of stuff.

3/8 in. Air Ratchet Wrench

Air Hammer with Chisel

High Speed Metal Air Saw

3/8" Drive Butterfly Air Gun

High Speed Air Cut-Off Tool

The reason everyone likes air tools is that they are so powerful. A 1/2" drive gun usually has about 250 foot pounds of torque. Some of the fancier 1/2"guns can come in at almost 500 Foot pounds.

A few years back I was trying to remove a big crankshaft bolt on a car engine. It was still in the car and while I could get my Rattle Gun on it I just could not get it to come off. The way the car body was around the engine I could not get a big long breaker bar and socket on it. I borrowed one of the 500 Foot Pound 1/2" guns from a friend and put it on it and POP. Off it comes.

Of course that got me to lusting for a more powerful Air Gun. Trouble is I only need this kind of power once in a while. Usually to take off a car axle nut. Some of those can be put on with over 300 foot pounds of torque. Let a nut sit there rusting for eight or ten years and it can be really locked on to that axle. Anyway, I wanted one but these things go for four to five hundred dollars. A bit much when you don't use it very often.

Godzilla and Tank

So I got a 3/4" drive monster gun from Harbor Freight for $80.00. I call him Godzilla. Yeah, I know. Buy American. Well, as soon as I can find an American made one for $100.00 I will. Now, I ran into another problem. This thing needs a big volume of air. My air compressor is a little five horsepower one and my air fittings are 1/4". So I need more air volume. I can't afford a new air compressor but I don't need one. I took a ten gallon air tank (Garage sale-$10.00) some bigger air fittings and five foot of big air line hose (another $20.00). I put an extra fitting on the tank that connects to a hose from my compressor.

So now I have a tank I can pump up and big air hoses from the tank to the gun. Lots of air flow now. I get full power for maybe ten seconds and then I have to wait for the compressor to refill the ten gallon tank. BUT now I have a genuine One Thousand foot pounds. WOW. I need maybe two seconds, tops, to pop off ANY bolt or nut. This thing will twist the Tusks out of a Elephant in two seconds. I am one happy camper!

This brings up what could be called a problem with air tools. They need compressed air (well Duh). Now there are electric Rattle Guns but they, in my experience, seem to be a bit short on power. This really isn't that much of a problem. You really need an Air Compressor if you work on motorcycles. Look around. They can found for forty bucks on sale on up to thousands of dollars. Figure on spending two to four hundred dollars to get one that will work well for you.

Some people may disagree but if you use 3/4" hot water CPVC pipe you can pipe it all over your shop very cheaply. A few cheap fittings and a cheap long rubber hose and you are in business. Don't use cold water PVC pipe. It is just not strong enough. All the air in my shop is piped through 3/4" hot water CPVC pipe rated at 325 PSI. I installed it in my shop in 1981. Thirty-four years of constant use and NONE of it has ever failed.

If you need more volume and you are using a small compressor just add a cheap used air tank. You can find them at a General Salvage Yard. A used pressure tank from a Well Water System will work too. Just plumb it in to any part of the air pipe system and you are good to go. You need a tank that is rated at least 200 psi or so.

Impact Sockets

Due to all this power you will need to use special six point Impact Sockets. Regular sockets can fly apart causing you and everything around you lots of damage.

One thing to remember. DO NOT use an impact gun to tighten nuts, bolts or screws down. Oh sure, you can use them to run down long screws, nuts on long shafts and the like, if you start them by hand first, but never run them in hard. There is just too much power and no "feel" to them. A 1/2 inch gun can twist a 3/8 inch bolt in half real easy. A 3/8" Butterfly gun can do the same to a 1/4" bolt. Always assemble things with hand tools and use a torque wench.

Metal is not as hard as it lookes or feels. It is always moving. As the temperature goes up metal expands. As the temperature goes down it shrinks.This has advantages and disadvantages. The disadvantage? This changing of size can loosen nuts and bolts. The advantage? It can help us take things apart. An example would be wheel bearings. Most are in an aluminum hub. aluminum expands a lot when heated. So just break out the torch and have at it .. right?

NO!!........

NO!!!........

NO!!!!

You want to start with gentle heat and if nessesary go up from there. I use a hot air gun. Hair driers don't put out enough heat and boiling water...well..not me. You want to heat the entire object. IF you heat only one part of it whatever it is you are heating can warp out of shape... not good... so move the gun around to evenly heat it.

There seems to be a "magic" temperature(around 250 to 275 degrees). If you moisten your finger and lightly touch it to the hot part you will feel the moisture boil! Yes I really do this, and it does not burn me because I do it very fast ! It can burn you. If you want, try dropping a little drop of water on the part and if it boils off your there. At this temperature bearings will sometimes fall out of crankcases all by themselves or with just a little help. Not only that, the new bearing will usually drop right in if it's been in a freezer for an hour or so.

Notice I use words like "usually" and "might" and "probably" and the like. that is because this level of heat almost always works... almost but not always. Sometimes you have to go to the next level of heat. This would be a propane torch. Very gross but sometimes you have to use it. Remember if you get a part too hot you can take the temper out of the steel making it too soft...Not good. Speaking of tempering, if you heat a solid copper head gasket red hot and then quickly quinch it in water it will retemper it good as new. Won't work on steel head gaskets.

Lastly comes the oxy/acetylene torch. The bad boy. The "Hot Wrench" It will take the part off, and you needed a new one anyway. Long and short of it, use a hot air gun and your freezer. If it fits inside something shrink it in the freezer. If it goes on the outside of something heat it up with the heat gun and work quickly.

WORRYING

The BIBLE tells us not to worry, and if we are trusting in Jesus for our salvation we don't have to worry! But that is not the type of worrying I'm talking about.

Lots of times we run across cylenders, heads, shafts and the like that are rusted on tight. Other times the idiot that worked on it before you glued it on with gasket cement. To get these parts apart you squrt on the penitrating oil and work the part up and down, back and forth "worrying" it. A dead blow hammer(with lead shot in the head of the hammer) helps or a rawhide mallet. The thing is to do it gently and to keep at it. I once worked over an hour getting an rusted axle out of a wheel. Very BORING but I got it out. Go gently, go slow, but keep at it!

PIDDLING

MAKING IT WORK WHEN YOU DON'T KNOW HOW

¶ Piddling means, among other things, to dawdle. It's also the word I use to describe the motorcycle repair technique I use when all else fails. When the way the shop manual says to do it fails. When the way that has done it in the past fails. When the way your buddies say always worked for them fails. When you have no idea as to what to do next, you just piddle with it. You play with it. You try different things that you don't think will work because, well, nothing else has worked either.

I'll give you an example. I'm trying to install a new tire on a lawn tractor. This is an old tractor that has been sitting for a long time. The tires were totally rotten, the wheels were rusted solid to the axles and would not come off. With the wheel still on the tractor, I was able to get the old tire off and the new tire on. Trouble was, the tire bead would not seat. I tried every trick I could think of to expand that bead and get it to seat. Now, I really wanted that wheel to work because the tractor was mine. I had several hundred dollars in it and I sure didn't want to put another seventy-five bucks into it for a new wheel. It would almost seat and then poosh, it wouldn't. I thought I could try one last trick. Spray some starting fluid in the tire and light it off. Theory being, the, burning, expanding, gas would seat the tie rim. But, I didn't. Yeah, your right, I'm getting old and turning into a real woose. I mean really, it probably won't blow up in my face... right? So I just piddle with it. I jiggle it. I wiggle it. After an hour or two, just for the heck of it, I hook a tire tool on the bead and almost, but not quite, pull it over the rim of the wheel. I do this all the way around the tire. I put some air to it, and bam, the bead seats. I never would have thought that that would do it, but it did. I just piddled with it.

Here's another example. Back in 1970 Harley Davidson set a world land speed record (265.492 mph). They used a Sportster engined streamliner. One of the men who worked on these engines was Warner Riley. He said that they were having trouble with the front cylinder over heating, even though it was set up the same as the rear cylinder. The front was running too hot but the rear was running just fine. He could not figure out WHY. They took the record, but blew two engines doing it. He took the engine home, set it on his work bench and started turning it over with a wrench, watching the valves work. He said he did this for what seemed like hours. Just turning it over and looking at it. He was just piddling with it.

Then it hit him. The front cylinder would fire and then immediately after the rear cylinder would fire. Because of the angle between the cylinders, there would then be a long time, relatively speaking, before the front cylinder would fire again. This allowed the fuel mixture to slow down a bit, before the front cylinder would fire again. When the rear cylinder's intake valve opened the fuel mixture in the intake tract would be going faster then when the front intake valve opened. This made the front cylinder run too hot. He found that if he angled the carburetor to the front cylinder by 2.5 degrees, both cylinders would run the same. No more over heating.

Bottom line? If nothing works, don't give up, just piddle with it and maybe, just maybe, Jesus will give you the answer.

James 1:5
"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God,
that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not;
and it shall be given him."

STORING YOUR MOTORCYCLE

Every year lots and lots of people just come in from riding, push their bike over in a corner and walk away. They return in four or five months and wonder why their bike won't run... well DUH ! If you want that bike to work for you, you've got to take care of it. Let's take a look at how you do that.

- The Minimum

1. Gas rots, so you must put in fuel stabilizer and run the engine long enough to get it completely through the carbs. Then, either fill up the gas tank to full ( To the bottom of the filler neck ) with gas that has no Alcohol ( Oxygenated ) in it, and has the proper mix of fuel stabilizer in it. Or drain all of the gas out of the tank and spray some gas soluble oil on the inside of the tank to keep it from rusting. The choice is up to you. Either way is OK.
2. Drain all the gas out of the carbs. Most carbs have a drain screw on the bottom of the carb.
3. Take the battery out and, if necessary, add distilled water to it and clean off the outside ( Battery Box Too ! ) with a mixture of baking soda and water. Then put the battery on a trickle charger ( No more than one AMP ) and charge it till it is fully charged. Do this at least once a month, till you start riding again.

- The Maximum - Add The Following.

1. Wash and wax your Motorcycle.
2. Change the engine oil and oil filter.
3. Change ALL other oils and fluids, such as rear end oil, radiator fluid, brake fluid, etc.
4. Take out all the spark plugs and put about a tablespoon of engine oil down each spark plug hole. Now, before putting the spark plug(s) back in, turn the engine over several times to ditribute the oil around the cylinder. Be sure and ground the spark plug wires when you do this. This is to protect the ignition system. Now reinstall the spark plug(s).
5. Use a breathable motorcycle cover to keep dust and moisture out. Plastic tarps that don't breath trap moisture in, causing rust.

- Something More

1. I like to put some type of water displacing, penetrating oil in each cylinder to sort of dry it out, before I put in the engine oil. Combustion makes a lot of water, and some of it always seems to get into the piston ring area.
2. I like to use some kind of Armor All type preservative on all plastic and rubber parts.
3. If you change the fluid in your bike's radiator, use distilled water and a motorcycle type anti-freeze. Car type anti-freezes use additives that can wear out your water pump.
4. If you change your brake or clutch fluid, use the type recomended for your system, Dot 3, 4, or 5. Which one ? It's in your Shop Manual. You do have one, don't you ?
5. It costs a bit more, but you can get a trickle charger that will shut off automaticly when the battery is fully charged and start up again when it's charge goes down. You can leave it connected and on all the time.
6. Aluminum does rust...sort of, so an application of spray wax or the like, to all surfaces of the engine, wouldn't hurt.

7. Keep the bike in a dry, heated garage, if possible.
8. Once a month or so, turn the engine over a couple of times, to keep things loose and lubed !
9. Keep it in the dark... sunlight thru a window can fade paint and the like.

Hey folks, at least do the minimum. If you don't, you might get away with it once or twice, but sooner or later You Will Loose.

Of course, if you don't,

IT'S OK,
I DON'T CARE...
IT'S NOT MY BIKE !

Fastener Theory

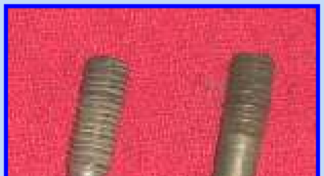
Bolts, nuts, studs, and other threaded fasteners are a vital part of our motorcycles but no one ever thinks about them till they try to take them apart or put them back together. Bolts seem quite simple, but are really very complicated.

I'm just going to cover what you need to know. If you really want to get into it I would recommend reading a book by Carroll Smith called "Nuts, Bolts, Fasteners and Plumbing Handbook". It will tell you more then you will ever want to know about fasteners.



When you tighten a bolt, it acts like a spring. The bolt actually stretches as the bolt is tightened. You can measure this in one of two ways. By how much turning force the bolt takes (Torque) or by the overall length of the bolt (Bolt Stretch). We use a torque wrench to measure the turning force. To measure bolt stretch we use Calipers to measure the over all length of the bolt. Usually, we measure the bolt stretch on connecting rod bolts and compare it to the values given in the shop manual. Not all rod bolts are torqued in this way. You will have to check the shop manual for each engine. You might want to take a bolt and measure it's length. Now put some washers and nuts on it, clamp it's head in a vice and torque the nut to the proper torque figure for that grade of bolt. Now measure it again and see how much it has stretched. Loosen it and measure the bolt. It should have returned to the length you first measured. If it doesn't, that would indicate that the bolt has failed. You might want to torque the bolt till it fails so you can feel what if feels like when the bolt fails (Yields). If you are torqueing a bolt on an engine and feel it Yield, you must replace that bolt !

Bolts are made of different types of steel. The stronger the steel, the higher the torque the bolt can take. The bolt is (Sometimes & sometimes NOT !) marked on it's head with a special mark indicating the strength of the bolt, also known as the Grade of the bolt. A grade four bolt is not as strong as a grade eight. However, that would make it too easy, so bolts may not always have markings or there may only be an insignia for the manufacturer. As you might think, the lower grade bolts cost less then the higher grade bolts. If the bolt is only holding a fender on it does not have to be as strong as the bolt that holds the cylinder head on. By using a lower grade and cheaper bolt on a fender a designer can save money. If a fender bolt fails, odds are you will notice it and easily fix it, no harm done. The flip side would be the bolt that holds the cam sprocket to the cam shaft. These bolts need to be very strong. If they fail, the engine could be destroyed. Because of this difference in strength we need to be very careful we don't use a low strength bolt where a high strength one is called for. Well, duh !

When you disassemble an engine, be careful to save ALL the bolts. I once had a man bring in an XR 250 Honda. Someone had pulled the head and cylinder and lost all the bolts. It would have cost over $100.00 to buy all new bolts. That hurts, seeing how these bolts don't really wear out !

Some Bolts and Studs, such as those that hold the cylinder head on, are under extra stress. These bolts come in different shaft shapes. Usually they are "Waisted".

That is, the shaft of the bolt tapers down to a smaller shaft. This helps make the bolt stronger by channeling the stress on the bolt in just the right way. Also, the head of the bolt can be of a special shape. The shape can be to give more strength or to enable the bolt to fit into a tight spot.

Most all sizes of bolts come in two thread varieties. Coarse pitch and fine pitch. There is no measurable difference in the strength between them or so they tell me. There is one rule for using one or the other. A coarse pitch is used when the female thread will be weaker then the male thread. If the bolt threads into a casting it should be coarse threaded. On the flip side, if the end of the bolt or stud takes a nut they are supposed to be fine thread. All this talk of coarse and strength might make one wonder why it seems all the crankcase screws, you know, the ones that always strip out so easy, seem to be fine thread. I guess they're not. They are 1.0 pitch. Maybe they don't consider those threads to be fine as there is a 6mm-.75 pitch. They sure look fine to me, especially when compared to 1/4-20. I've also checked the threads on studs I've pulled from a number of different motorcycles. Most seem to have the same thread on both ends. I guess someone forgot to read the rules !

Most all male threads are rolled on, not cut. Rolled threads are stronger then cut threads because the cutting of the threads cuts into the grain of the steel and leaves spots where stress cracks can arise. All female threads are cut in. Sometimes you need to cut a few more threads on a bolt or screw. The big problem with that is if you try to cut too many threads, on side of the bolt will start getting deeper threads and the other side shallower threads. I have never traced a bolt failure to a cut thread, but most of my experience is with stock, unmodified, engines. If you are working on modified engines you might want to try to stay with rolled threads.

There have been all kinds of types of threads and they tell me the best are the British CEI, BSW, BSF, and BA threads. However, no one uses these anymore... go figure !

Just to make things interesting, threads can be in right hand OR left hand. I guess the left hand thread can help keep the nut tight if the shaft is turning in the appropriate direction, whatever that is. Actually, I think the engine designers do it to irritate the mechanics. The shop manuals almost always tell you when they throw in a left hand thread. I say most because my example picture is from a DR350 Suzuki. In the after market shop manual I have, I could find no mention of that left hand thread nut in the disassembly instructions. They did mention it at the end of the assembly instructions, kind of as an after thought... just in case you were interested ! If that nut absolutely will not come off, try going in the opposite direction... you never know, it might be a left hand nut. Don't get carried away. It might just be a really tight right hand thread. Ain't mechanics fun !

Sometimes engine vibration will make bolts loosen and fall out. We can come up with all kinds of theories as to why this one came loose and that one didn't but to what purpose ? For a stock machine, make sure you check the lock washer and replace it if it's not in good condition. Metal and Nylon Collar Lock nuts can usually be reused a number of times. They work a lot better then lock washers, but cost a lot more. Some people say the lock washers do not work, but I don't agree. On many occasions, upon removal, I find the nut all scrapped up by the lock washer. Obviously, the lock washer was fighting to keep that nut on !

Lock washers usually have a plain washer under them, next to whatever part is being tightened. Lock washers come in several styles. Spring, Wave, Internal Tooth, External Tooth, Ribbed, lots of different types. Sometimes, the lock washer will have a tab on the inside which fits into a hole in the part being held on. After you tighten the nut, part of the washer is bent over against the nut. This keeps the nut from loosening. Other times there is a groove in the end of the male threaded part and, after tightening, part of the nut is bent into that groove. This is called a Key Nut. I don't really like these bendy type washers because you need to get a new washer or nut every time you disassemble a part but, if the manufacturer calls for one, you had better use one. Nuts and bolts can also be locked in place by chemical thread lockers and by safety wire. As always, let the shop manual be your guide !

Matt from the "Bolt Depot" E-Mailed me and said you could download a bunch of printable bolt tools from them.

They also have a lot of handy bolt and thread information Here.

TORQUING BOLTS

TORQUING BOLTS

Now we get to the nitty gritty, and the only things you really need to know. All the bolt torque guides are just that, guides. Most all of them are torque figures for clean dry threads. Well, I don't use dry threads. On all threads that use a torque of ten Foot Pounds and under I Oil them with a light weight oil. I use a low temperature snowmobile oil. On all bolts with a called for torque of fifteen Foot Pounds or more, I use a Molybdenum Disulfide grease. I then torque to the figure given in the shop manual. You will find that the torque, for almost every bolt and nut on your motorcycle, is given in the shop manual.

Why do I do this ? Well, I have had, at one time, head gasket failures. After I started using the Molyendeum Disulfide grease... no more blown head gaskets. I got the idea for the grease from a Honda GL1000 shop manual which said to use it on the head bolt threads. I think Honda was right ! The oil and the grease make the bolts turn easier. This seems to make things clamp down better. Some may say that we are increasing the torque on the bolt and theoretically they would be right but, I have had excellent results doing this. Lubrication makes assembly and DISASSEMBLY much easier. You have got to remember... sooner or later, this turkey has got to come apart again.

Interestingly, I just read an article, in a major motorcycle magazine, on lubing spark plug threads with anti-seize. Some guy wrote in to ask if the using anti-seize on spark plug threads changed the torque reading. Seems a spark plug manufacturer said to cut torque by one half if you used anti-seize. The guy writing the article checked with several other spark plug manufacturers and all of them seemed to think that was a bad idea. I agree. His sources said to torque the plug to the lower end of the recommended setting, when using anti-seize. This I can live with.

This got me to thinking. Does lube change the torque significantly ? I took a ten millimeter, grade 8.8, 1.25 thread, bolt, then put a spacer and nut on it. With the nut loose I measured the over all length of the bolt. I then torqued it to thirty five foot pounds with a torque wrench. Then I measured the it again. 3.022" to start. Then 3.026" after torquing, so we have .004" bolt stretch. Doing the same thing with the bolt threads lubricated with Molybdenum Disulfide grease. The bolt stretched to 3.027". So lubed, we have .005" stretch. That's about a 20% increase.

Now, consider some other things. I was surprised to find that getting an accurate, repeatable measurement was quite difficult. Things, they kept a'changen ! I also am not really sure how much of a torque increase that extra .001" in bolt stretch really is. This sounds like a great experiment and I'm sure the next time I have five or ten extra free hours with nothing to do, I will look into it ! Till then it's oil for threads with ten foot pounds of torque and below, Molybdenum Disulfide grease for threads with above ten foot pounds of torque, and anti-seize for spark plug threads.

If the shop manual for your engine gives a different procedure, I would follow it, but if all it gives is a torque figure I would lubricate that thread ! Interestingly enough, all the tests I've read indicate it's much better to slightly over torque a bolt then to under torque it. Anyway, that's what I do. Oil or Grease up the threads and torque to the right amount for that size and grade of bolt. Contrary to what you might think, this lubrication will not make the bolt loosen and fall out. Engine vibration or a poor design does that. Remember, a correctly torqued, threaded fastener of the right type, used in a properly engineered assembly, will not come loose... most times, anyway !

I made up a chart of Bolt Torques for US and Metric bolts. I was surprised to find that while US bolt torques seem to be quite standardized, the Metric ones were all over the place. Huge differences, depending on what book you looked in. I never realized this before because I always use the Torque Values given in the Shop Manual for whatever machine I was working on. My advice is to use your Shop Manual. But you want a chart too, don't you. Here it is as a PDF file too-See the PDF Folder on the CD.

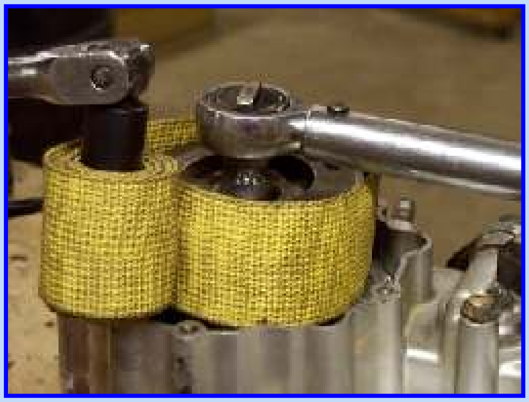
I still say USE YOUR SHOP MANUAL !

If a bolt keeps coming loose you might have to remove the flat washer that is under the lock washer. It will also help if you tighten the bolt and then take a hammer and continue to tighten the bolt just a bit with several sharp blows. You are only trying to tighten the bolt, or nut, just a little bit. The important thing is to do it with a sharp rap or two. This tends to lock the bolt in. I don't know the reasons why it works but I can tell you that it does work !

Lots of racers rely on safety wired bolts and nuts to keep things together. The nut or bolt is drilled and wired in such a way that it is physically impossible for the fastener to loosen.

My thanks to Flanders Co. for letting me use this chart from their catalog.

Fortunately, these days we also have another trick to keep those bolts together. It's called Chemical Thread Locker. There are a number of different manufacturers but they all seem to have a low strength type, a medium strength type, a high strength type, and sometimes a ultra high strength, stud locker, type. I usually use the low strength type for very small bolts and the medium strength for most everything else, especially on disk brake bolts. Use it anywhere there's a bolt you don't want to come loose. Here it can really pay to check the shop manual. Some bikes use all the different strengths of thread locker on various bolts on the motorcycle. Check your shop manual.



We have another little problem torquing bolts and nuts. Everything tends to turn. When you torque a crank nut, the crank wants to turn too. Same with a clutch nut. There are a number of ways to lock whatever shaft you are trying to torque. A strap wrench works well on flywheels or anywhere you have a large roundish something to wrap it around.

A penny works if you jam it between two gears. The penny is made of soft metal and doesn't harm the gears, but it's not my favorite way to do it as I have seen the penny go right through the gears. You wouldn't think that would be possible, but it did happen to me more than once !

A better method is a Grabbit tool. They work great, however you do need to make sure whatever you grab with it is strong enough to take the strain.

For locking cranks I like to use two square shaft screwdrivers and the wrist pin and rod. This way, prevents damage to the crankcases and rod.

If the cylinder head is on you can put some cotton rope down the spark plug hole. When the piston comes up, it will jam the rope in the head and lock the crank. When it's torqued, turn the crank the opposite direction and pull the rope out. If any little piece of the cotton rope gets cut and left in the cylinder it will burn up and go away !

You can also use the rear brakes to lock the engine shafts if the engine is still in the frame. Use your imagination. Just make sure the parts you hold, to lock the shafts, are strong enough to handle the torque.

FIXING THE THREADS

Cutting Threads

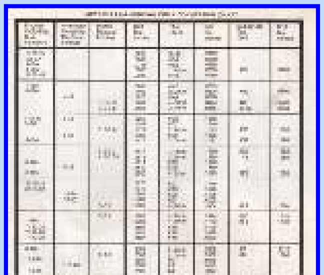
From time to time we must make threads. Threads in holes. Threads on shafts. Threads extended on bolts. Sometimes too, we must clean up damaged threads. To do all this we have what are called tape and dies. A Tap will cut threads in a hole. A Die will cut threads in a shaft. Taps and Dies come in a lot of sizes and thread types. You will need a full set of both Metric and Standard Taps and Dies.



Many times it's a good idea to clean up threads that are rusty or damaged. If you don't know what thread size, you will need to use a Thread Gauge. A thread gauge is a template of the thread size. Each thread size has a separate thread gauge. You just keep trying different gauges till one fits the threads and then read the size off the gauge. Once you know what the thread size is, simply pick the right diameter Tap or Die and run them into the hole or over the bolt. This will make assembly much easier. The only problem is this. If the bolt or nut was over torqued, the threads may be distorted. When you re-cut them you remove a bit of the thread, making it weaker. There's not much you can do about this short of replacing the nut, bolt, or part.

You can also clean up male threads with a Thread File. You can also use a small triangular file. Threads can also be damaged by the screw end of a gear puller as you pull off a gear or by hammering on a threaded shaft, like an axle. If you must hammer a threaded end of a shaft put the nut back on and screw it down flush with the end of the shaft. This will protect the threads.

If you have stripped out female threads sometimes you can go to the next biggest tap and retap the threads and use a slightly bigger bolt. An example would be those little 6mm bolts that hold so many different cylinder head covers and side covers on. They always seem to strip out. If you retap the stripped out hole with a 1/4-20 tap and use a 1/4-20 bolt, it will usually hold just fine. The only other way to fix stripped threads is to drill out the hole much bigger and install a new set of steel threads. There are lots of different Thread Repair kits out on the market for this. They all have advantages and disadvantages. If they are put into aluminum, the threads will be stronger then the aluminum threads they replace, but they tend to back out. Also, there must be enough metal around the old, stripped out threads to support the new steel threads. Many times there just isn't enough aluminum to support the new threads.

My thanks to Flanders Co. for letting me use this chart from their catalog.

You can add more threads to a threaded bolt if needed but it is usually a better idea to go buy a bolt with the extra threads already rolled on. This is because they are stronger and if you have to add more then 1/2" or so of thread the die tends to cut off center. This means one side of the bolt has deeper cut threads then the other... not good !

When you cut threads with a tap or a die, turn it about 1/4 turn to cut the threads and then turn in the opposite direction to let the chips of steel, cut from the bolt, fall out. If you don't, the tap or die will bind in the cut and possibly break. Trying to get a broken tap out is VERY difficult ! Using thread cutting oil will help you make good threads too.

If you have to cut new threads and don't want the chips to fall inside the hole, like when you rethread a stripped oil drain plug hole, put grease on the tap and clean the tap several times as you cut the threads. The grease will hold the chips on the tap.

Check this out. I have a friend, he has a daughter, she marries a Dope. Dope buys a new Yamaha four stroke dirt bike. Dope tells Father he needs to change his oil. Father-in-law, who is storing bike for dope-in-law tells him "No problem, I'll do it for you !" No says Dope. Father-in-laws' not smart enough to do it. Dope will do it. Dope stripes out threads on oil drain hole. All of a sudden Father-in-law is not so stupid anymore. Dope wants him to fix it ! Smart Father-in-law brings it to me. I'm able to tap it out, next size up, using the grease trick, and it holds the manufacturers recommended torque... barely. There was no meat at all around that hole. He came very close to paying $1000.00, plus labor, to put in a new set of crankcases. Moral ? Use a torque wrench on those oil drain bolts and listen to your Father-in-law !

You will need a whole set of Metric and Standard Taps and Dies. Get the biggest kit you can afford. Sooner or later you will use them all !

STRIPPED & STUCK
BOLTS & SCREWS

The job looked so easy! Three, four bolts and that part will come right off...30 seconds to do it... Max. Two hours of frustrating work later, it's still in there...WHAT DO I DO NOW!

It's happened to all of us, at one time or the other. Those lousy phillips head screws seems to strip out so easy ! First, make sure the grooves in the screw head are in good condition. Also, make sure the phillips screw driver or impact bit is the right size. If the screw head is a bit messed up you can put some fine aluminum carbide paste, similer to valve grinding paste on it to help the tool hold to the screw. Penetrating oil won't hurt, but I usually only use it on nuts or on screws that I feel will be a problem. On most crankcase screws, the head is a long way from the threads.

Soooo... you give that Impact Driver a good swat and the screw head strips completely out. OK, OK...go get a small, sharp flat steel chisel and a steel punch. Using either one or maybe both ! Gouge and punch into the screw head. Do this off center and in the right direction ( counter-clockwise ). If all goes well, the screw will loosen. If not, you will have to drill out the Screw. Pick a drill of about the same diameter as the SHAFT of the stuck screw, NOT the head. Now, get a drill and drill it out. Go in just far enough to break the head off the shaft. Do this with each screw head that is rounded out and remove the cover or whatever part the screw is holding on. Now you will see the shaft of the screw sticking out. Grasp it with a vicegrip plyer and unscrew it. About 80 % of the time it will come out very easily, sometimes even with your fingers.

OK, but what if it doesn't ? Ah yes, the other 20 %. There are several options, none of which are easy or fun.

1. Soak the shaft in some kind of penetrating oil for awhile, overnight maybe, then try the Vice-Grip again. Don't go crazy with the Vice-Grip. You don't want to twist it off, and rust can really lock things in. How tight can rust lock something up ? Well, I had a friend who worked at a big shop that had a 20 Ton press with a guage on it giving the pressure. He tried to press an axle out of a Troy-Built rototiller wheel. He gave it the full 20 Tons... It never did come out ! The only thing holding it to the wheel was rust. I have had similar things happen to me. How did he get it off ? Cut it off with a torch and replaced the wheel and axle. Hey, he's not the one that let it rust... and he's not the one who had to pay for it, either. The customer paid for it. Lack of maintinance does have it's price.
2. Heat up the area around the bolt a bit with a propane torch. Just do it a bit...we are looking for about 212 degrees or so. Don't get carried away ! Now try the Vice-Grip.
3. You can heat things up REALLY HOT, like cherry red with a Torch then let it cool or even help it cool with a bit of ice. Watch out when you do it ! Wear gloves and eye/face protection. Also, if it is a steel part in aluminum, don't melt the aluminum.
4. Heat and cool and oil the part over and over again. Worry it !
5. If the part is expensive or "...you just can't get them anymore ! " TAKE YOUR TIME ... WORRY IT !
6. If the shaft is really in there and will not come out or if it broke off level with the case , take a center punch and put a deep punch right in the center of the screw shaft. That is to help start a drill. Now drill a small hole down into the shaft. Start pretty small and then go to the next size larger drill. As soon as you have a big enough hole try to use an easy-out type of tool on it. Turn the tool gently. If you get carried away and break off the easy-out in the hole you will NEVER get it out. Easy-outs are made of very hard metal and you cannot drill them out. I suppose you could heat them red hot and take the temper out of them, use a bolt disintegrator, or Aluminum Sulfate, but... just don't break them, OK ?

7. If it still will not come out you will have to keep drilling, going up one step ( or size ) at a time until you hit the threads. Then get in there with a needle and kinda peel the threads of the screw out from the threads of the case. I know that sounds kinda weird, but I've done it many times. If your starting punch hole is off center it will make things harder but it can still be done. If you've really buggered up the case threads, as will sometimes happen, you can put in new threads called Helicoils. They are, however, somewhat expensive.
8. You can get drills that are left handed. You then drill into the metal with the electric drill set in reverse. This can be handy. Sometimes, as you go up in drill sizes, you reach the magic spolt when the pressure keeping the stuck shaft stuck dissapears. The shaft will unscrew and come off on the end of the drill. Neat !

OK, that covers screws... How about bolts ? You can use most everything we talked about with screws plus a few things more.

1. Use a 6-point socket. They are much stronger then the 12-point and they grip the hex head better.
2. If the head is totally rounded off get the next size smaller socket and a hammer. After making sure that whatever part that is under the rounded off bolt head is strong to take the pounding, BEAT the socket onto the bolt with the hammer. Gross... but it works !
   It helps to use a " guaranteed forever " type socket too !
3. If the bolt is just turning and turning, but doesn't come out, the threads in the middle of the bolt may be stripped out. Try pulling up on the bolt in some way to engage threads that are good. Use a Vice-Grip to pull the bolt up or stick a screw driver under the bolt head to lever it up.
4. If the the problem is a stripped nut and there is a lot of area around the nut you can use a Nut Breaker
5. You can hacksaw the nut till it is almost through, then heat it up red hot and touch it with a piece of ice. That will crack it the rest of the way through.

If you break off a tap in some kind of non-ferrous metal, like an aluminum crankcase, you can try soaking it in a solution of Aluminum Sulfate. It works best if you heat it to 120+ degrees Fahrenheit and let it work for a few hours. Or you can just throw it in at room temperature for a few days and the iron will go away. Remember, this is good for NON-FERROUS metals. Be sure there are no other iron pieces on the workpiece. Use a plastic tray, Tupperware works too.

Now, if you have a bolt or screw that broke off in a real expensive part, there is one last option... a metal Disintegration Machine. They cost a lot of money to own, so not very many places have one, but if you find a place that does have one, it doesn't cost to much to disintegrate a bolt. You will just have to call around. Lots of times they can do it right on the bike.

Using Acid to Dissolve Metal

"The earth is utterly broken down,
the earth is clean dissolved,
the earth is moved exceedingly."
Isaiah 24:19

It happens quickly. You were just cleaning up some threads in some stinking, lousy crankcase or cylinder head and BANG, it happens. You snap the end of that tap off. Now what?

Man, you are just going for it up some dirt hill when the engine makes that familiar sound and stops dead. You drag that pig home, pull the head and look at that. An aluminum piston smeared all over the cylinder walls. What do we do now?

Well, there is a way out, but it is a way that has some danger. Different types of acid will Dissolve different types of metals. Trouble is those acids can Dissolve you too!

If you are not willing to at least take the basic safety precautions then DO NOT USE ACID!

So the first thing we need to do is make sure there is lots of Baking Soda and running water near by. We also need Rubber or Nitrile gloves and a good full Face Shield. Make sure the gloves you use are rated for the acid you are using. I like the cheap Nitrile gloves you can get almost anywhere.

The minimum is Baking Soda, ten pounds or so, and Running Water or at least five or six gallons of water in a big, wide, tub. If you need it, you can't have too much, OK? If you get ANY acid on you or your clothes, even a single drop, rinse IMMEDIATELY in lots of Baking Soda and Water. Baking Soda and water will bubble and fizz when it hits acid. That means it is neutralizing the acid.

Something to cover your eyes and something to cover your hands would be nice. Being able to see is very nice. Being able to scratch yourself without scar tissue coming off your hands is very nice too. Do this whenever you work with any type of acid. YOU HAVE BEEN WARNED!

A non-Ferrous metal is any metal, that does not contain iron in appreciable amounts such as Aluminum. Ferrous metal has some iron in it, like steel. How do you tell the difference? Easy, Non-Ferrous metal is NOT magnetic. Ferrous metal IS magnetic. Get a magnet and put it on the metal in question. If it sticks, it is Ferrous. If it does not stick, it is non-Ferrous.

Aluminum is a non-Ferrous metal. Bits of an Aluminum piston melted and smeared all over a cylinder wall can be a real pain to remove unless you plan to use a boring bar to go to the next piston oversize. If you just want to Hone the cylinder you have to get that Aluminum off the cylinder wall. To get that aluminum out of there all you have to do is put some Muriatic acid on the smeared aluminum with an eyedropper. Muriatic Acid is a 31 % solution of Hydrochloric Acid and water. The acid will Dissolve the aluminum and leave the steel untouched.

You must be very careful to not get the Muriatic acid on any of the aluminum parts of the cylinder that you do not want Dissolved. As you can see, it bubbles and fumes and releases heat. Along with other bad stuff the fumes contain Hydrogen, which is flammable. Be careful not to breath the fumes. Might be a good idea to do this outside the shop or in a well ventilated area.

On this example I put a piece of Aluminum on a piece of plastic and put a few drops of Muriatic Acid on it. Lots of bubbling and fumes. I then put it in about two ounces of Muriatic acid and in about fifteen minutes it was totally Dissolved. I put a steel nut in too and an hour later it is unharmed. You might want to build a small dam of clay in the front and rear of the cylinder you are working on to keep it from getting on any of the aluminum of the cylinder.

When done, rinse it off with a baking soda/water mix. Use maybe a cup of Baking Soda and a quart/1000 ml of water. If the Aluminum smear is gone, great. If not, do it again. This stuff really works on aluminum.

As far as I know, Muriatic Acid will eat Magnesium too. However, I have never tried it on Magnesium.

You can get Muriatic acid at most hardware stores and swimming pool supply stores.

A steel tap is Ferrous metal. For a broken tap or steel bolt you need to use a different type of acid. One that will Dissolve steel and not aluminum. Some say to use Aluminum Sulfate. I did too until I tried it. It works but is agonizingly slow, like months to do anything. I let two new nuts sit in it for over two months and you can see the result or lack there of. Perhaps the stuff I have is not strong enough or I am doing it wrong. Sooo on to something that does work. Battery Acid.

Battery acid is no speed demon but works great. It takes a little under two days to Dissolve a 1/4"/6 mm steel bolt or tap. The active ingredient in Battery Acid is actually Sulfuric Acid. Typical battery acid has about 35 to 36% Sulfuric acid in it. The rest is water. It works slow but steady. I suppose if you want to go faster, you could get a solution with a higher percentage of Sulfuric Acid. You can get Battery Acid at any auto parts store. I have lots of Battery Acid but I don't know were to easily purchase stronger Sulfuric Acid.

The only problem with Battery Acid, besides it's propensity for Dissolving you, is the time it takes. If you can soak the Aluminum part in the acid you are good to go. However, if the Aluminum has other steel parts in it, like a cylinder head with steel valve seat inserts, you will need to make sure no Battery Acid gets on those steel parts. I use a plastic cap with a hole drilled in it. Use Silicone Seal and glue it around the hole with the broken bolt or tap in it. In this instance I used Black RTV Silicon but I think others would work too. After it has hardened, fill it up with Battery Acid and wait till the bolt/tap Dissolves. A matter, in this instance, of one day.

You will need to use several ounces of acid and you may have to change it out, with fresh acid, once or twice to completely Dissolve the Tap. It depends on the size of the tap. As it works the acid color will go from clear to black. When things stop bubbling you are either done or you need fresh Battery Acid. As they say "Your results may vary."

Be sure to check the opposite end of the hole. If it is a dead end, you are good to go. However, if it is an open hole you will need to plug it with some Silicon Seal. If it appears to be a dead end be sure that dead end is not the end of a steel screw coming from the opposite side of the part you are working. This is because the acid will eat it too. It may take a day to set all this up and let the Silicon Seal hardened. Be Patient

Yes, I know. Patience, Patience. Please Lord Jesus, give me Patience and give it to me right now!

I'm not sure if the gases that are released by the Sulfuric Acid, as it works, are explosive. With my luck they are. Again, it might be a good idea to do this outside the shop or in a well ventilated area.

As with any acid, finish off by neutralizing the part with Baking Soda and Water.

Story time. Over the years I have ended up working a lot with Battery Acid. Mostly I was just filling motorcycle batteries. Pretty mundane. Now I am absolutely paranoid about Battery Acid. Rinsing my hands in water, dribbling Baking Soda everywhere. Absolutely paranoid about Battery Acid. Even with all my paranoid behavior, every once in a while, I find a tiny acid burn hole in my work pants or shirt. You can't be too careful with this stuff, Kapish?

As you can see, this is all a royal pain in the rear. Next time you use a tap, use it gently. especially the smaller ones. Lesson learned!

While they won't be Dissolving the Earth in the quantities we are using, these acids will surely Dissolve our broken bolts, taps and Aluminum smears in short order.

Phillips Head JIS Screws

It was 1967 and I was working in a Honda shop assembling new Honda motorcycles out of their shipping crates. On the side of one of the crates it said new JIS screw. OK, JIS screw? What the heck is a JIS screw? I asked and was told to stop asking stupid questions and get back to work. Which was shopease for "We don't know but we don't want to admit it." So I went back to my wrenches and forgot about it. It was a long time before I figured out what JIS meant. There just was no information that was readily available in those days. Fortunately you have the Internet so we can do a bit better now.

If you look at a lot of Phillips head screws on the crankcases of just about all motorcycles you will find a goodly number are damaged. This is because all Phillips head screws are not created equal. Now Henry F. Phillips was a businessman from Oregon who produced a good screw head to be used by automated production lines that use powered screwdrivers. It seems he, Phillips, bought the rights to this design from a guy named Thompson who invented it in 1935. Today we have a large number of Phillips screw types running around but generally only one type is used on motorcycles, the JIS type. Do an internet search and you will find a lot of different types of Phillips head screws out there.

That is the problem. There are different types of Phillips head screwdrivers around but only one type fits JIS screws. Look at the examples below.

Good Fit

Bad Fit

Phillips screwdriver that fits good.

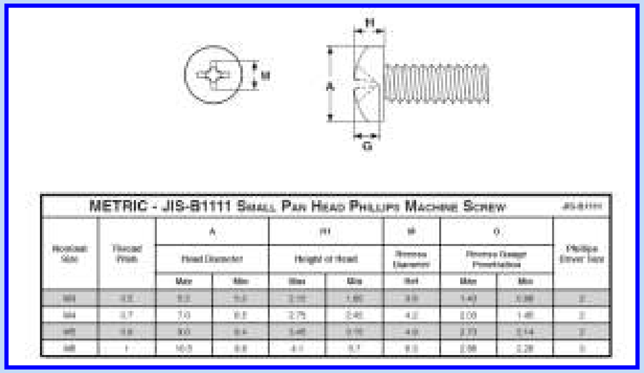
Phillips screwdriver that fits not so good.

Good bit, Bad bit.

The problem is that while both of these Phillips screwdriver bits fit a JIS screw head, one of them is a bad fit. Now if you take a good impact driver with a bad fitting bit and whack that puppy good and hard with a big hammer most times the screw will come out. Trouble is when the screw is in extra tight and the bit does not fit good the screw head tends to camout and round off the edges of both the screw head and screwdriver bit. The power of the screwdriver is not transferred to the screw head efficiently.

Look closely at the ends of these two Phillips screwdriver bits.

Bad screwdriver bit for JIS screws.



Good screwdriver bit for JIS screws.

That is the big problem. You are working hard and want to get the job done. It looks like it fits so it must fit, right? No, not right. To make matters worse, it is even hard to tell the right Phillips bits from the wrong Phillips bit. Well, here is an idea. Try the bit or screwdriver in a good JIS screw and see how it fits. It should fit tight and snug. If it fits loose take the time to find the right screwdriver or bit. Yes, it doesn't really take all that much time to drill out a buggered up screw head but it is still ten minutes added to the job. Drill out four screws and you have lost a lot of time on that job.

Japanese Phillips head screws come in two flavors. ISO and JIS. The difference between the two is the size of the head. The ISO type has a bigger head then the JIS type used on most motorcycles.

JIS Screw Specifications

ISO Screw Specifications

To complicate things some of the JIS screws have a punch mark on their heads to indicate they are JIS and then again a lot do not have the mark.

Bottom line, get the proper JIS screwdriver and/or bit for your impact driver and you will not be rounding out your JIS screw heads. Makes the bike look nice. If you are having trouble finding the right bit to buy for your impact driver, I usually use a NAPA #3 (Part #35031) Phillips Bit for the JIS 6mm screws and a NAPA #2 (Part #35021) Phillips bit for smaller JIS 5mm screws. Naturally the packaging these bits come in has no reference to JIS. I don't know how "Official JIS" these bits are but they seem to fit tight, are cheap and easy to get.

Just to give you an idea of how crazy things have gotten below is a security bit set I have. Although I have tried to get all the bit types and styles I am still missing many of them.

Sand Blasting

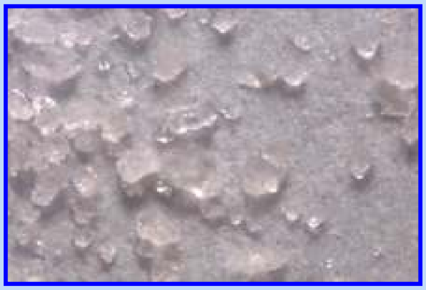
Lots of times we run across motorcycle parts that have been, shall we say neglected? Parts that are badly corroded. To clean these parts we need more then than a tooth brush and some solvent. We need to really blast those parts clean.

A Sand Blaster takes the blasting media of your choice, blows it through a gun shaped nozzle and onto the part you want cleaned. This gun uses the venturi principle and compressed air to suck the blast media, through a tube, up into the gun and out the nozzle. A trigger on the gun controls the blast of air.

While there are lots of different grits and sizes and combinations of media it really boils down to this. There are basically, three types of blasting media.



1. Walnut Shell
2. Glass Beads
3. Sand

Walnut Shell at 60x

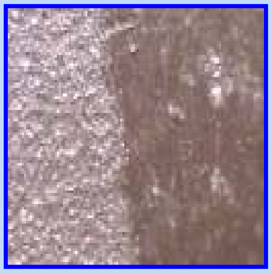
Sand at 60x



If you have a part that is not too badly corroded or a part off a bike you are restoring that must not be damaged, walnut is a good media to clean up that part. Walnut will clean the part without removing any metal or changing the surface of the part. Walnut does a good job if the part is just dirty. I had a piece of duct tape separating the blasted and unblasted surfaces. Notice that the part is just cleaned and the surface of the metal is not changed. There is not much difference between the cleaned and uncleaned surfaces except that the surface is clean.

The next grade up is glass beads. Glass beads are, well, beads of glass! They are round and will not take off much if any metal. They do sort of harden the surface of the metal. This makes glass beads especially good for cleaning internal engine parts. Not only do you clean the part but the bombardment of the metal with the glass beads actually hardens the surface of the metal. Glass beads are easier to clean off the parts too. Notice the surface looks like you hit it with a million strokes from the words smallest ball-peen hammer.

The final step is sand. Man, will it clean the rust and corrosion off a part! Sand will chew a hole right through a metal part if you hold the blaster gun on the part long enough. In fact, if you mask off a small circle on a piece of glass with duct tape, you can drill a hole right through it with sand. Notice the part looks like it has been worked over with sandpaper.

Sand tends to get into every crevice and hole and stay there no matter much you clean. This can be a problem. If a piece of walnut or a bead of glass gets into your engine things are not so bad. Sand is a different matter. It can really grind things up, so choose your blasting media carefully!

Once you decide on what type of blasting media to use you will need to decide on exactly how you want to blast the part. This can be simple or very complex! The easiest way is simply to buy a blasting cabinet. They come in all kinds of sizes and shapes depending on how big the objects you want to blast are. Prices start at about $100 and go up to thousands of dollars. You can make a cabinet too.

You don't have to have a cabinet but it sure helps if you do have one. You can just buy a portable gun and media hopper kit and have at it! This works but has two distinct disadvantages. One, it's wasteful and two it's down right messy. The blast media is reusable. Yes, it does wear out with use. However, unless you are working on a special project that needs a very uniform finish, you can reuse it many times. As to messy. This stuff goes everywhere. If it is contained in a blasting cabinet you will not be getting it in your mouth, down your back, in your ears, well, you get the picture.

If you have a part that is just too big for a Blast Cabinet (like a motorcycle frame) you can use a portable gun like the one above and then build a big tent out of 1x2 or 2x4 wood, plastic tarps and duct tape. Then blast away! When the media hopper is empty simply sweep up the spent media on the floor and put it back into the hopper. Build the tent big enough and you could blast a car body!

A word on safety here. If you use a blast tent or just blast out in the open you need a good respirator and good eye protection. Think about it. The blast media does degrade as you use it. Breathing glass dust or sand dust will not do your lungs or your eyes any good!

Chinese Motorcycles

"They're easy to get parts for. They are the same as a Honda 125. Just order the parts from Honda." Or so the salesman said. What could be simpler, and the bike was so cheap!

"Their just cheap garbage." said the young Honda parts manager. He had a real neat crossed pistons tattoo on has forearm so he must know something, right?

Me? I've got Déjà vu. Seems too I've heard this song before. It's an old familiar tune! I have indeed heard this before.

Back in the early 1960s Triumphs, BSAs and all bikes British were king of the motorcycle hill. Japanese bikes were small, cheap and sold out of little hole-in-the-wall store fronts. At the time I remember all the magazines and British shop all said the Jap bikes were junk. Poor quality, unreliable, used funny metric tools, bad news all around. Just stay with good, reliable British bikes!

Well, we all know how that worked out. Now I hear the same thing about the Chinese. So what is the real truth? I have now worked on a number of Chinese bikes and I can tell you the quality is just fine but there is a problem. Actually it is a problem of our own making. The grim fact is we in the USA are plain, flat, broke. We are looking for the best possible deal but we are still broke. In come the Chinese. They want to sell stuff in the worst way. Someone said "The USA is addicted to buy things cheap, no matter how much it hurts us in the long run and the Chinese are addicted to selling things cheap no matter how much it hurts them in the short run. In other words we import "Stuff" and it destroys our own businesses. The Chinese sell "Stuff" for pennies and their people stay poor.

That's all well and good but what does that have to do with my cheap motorcycle? Simply this. You get what you pay for. There are literally dozens of Chinese motorcycle factories. There are hundreds of parts suppliers. They build a bike and sell it cheap. Trouble is there is basically no support. No parts support, No shop manuals. No factory training or support. They are selling the bike to you at the same price that they would sell to a dealer. When you buy that bike cheap you are becoming the dealer! You are responsible for the support of the bike but no one ever tells you that!

I feel that these bikes are well made for the most part. The only real problem is that the Chinese have not totally figured out what is required to make a good reliable motorcycle for the USA market... yet! For example. I was hired by an internet company to assemble a Chinese ATV for a customer they had who lived near my shop. One of the fenders was cracked so they sent a new one. I noticed the fender was black plastic that was painted. They will soon learn to use colored plastic so the scratches will not show as much. The rear chain was not adjustable from side to side so the chain was not perfectly aligned with the front sprocket. However, they put on 630 chain. The engine was a 250cc. Even with a lot of side wear that monster chain will never break. They are willing to put the time and money into a the machines to make them good but they just have not learned exactly what to do. But they will!

Because you are buying this bike so cheap, you are essentially taking over the dealers job and you are getting paid for it. Your pay is the money you saved by buying a cheap bike! The real question is are you ready, willing and able to be a dealer?

Check this out. Last year a guy brings in a R*a four wheeler. He was an older guy who runs the machine easy. A good thing too. There was not more then a tablespoon of antifreeze in the radiator and the oil looked like treacle (maple syrup). It melted the piston under the intake valve, which was unusual. A piece of the piston had logged in the exhaust valve and the piston had hit the valve bending it.

I called the US distributor and he said the two year old machine was "Obsolete" and he could not get parts for it. He had a piston that might work but if it didn't fit I could not send it back. Fortunately, one of my sponsors "High RPM Racer" was able to get me a piston and rings that worked but could not locate an exhaust valve even after an extensive search. I used a cut down Wisco wrist pin and an exhaust valve out of a Honda XR200. The valve head was too small but I was able to recut the valve seat and make it work, barely!

I'm not sure what the guy would have done if I had not been able to find the parts for it. This problem is going to reoccur until the Chinese get their parts and service manual act together.

The good news is that parts houses like "High RPM Racer" can help you out a lot. The bad news is that you have to do a lot of the "Dealer" work yourself.

While I'm on the subject of Chinese parts let me just give you some random thoughts. While you can buy each individual nut, bolt, piston and gasket for most all other bikes the Chinese seem to like to sell "Assemblies" such as the complete carburetor assembly, complete clutch assembly, complete magneto assembly, ETC. This is fine because the assemblies are quite cheap. These different "Assemblies" fit a number of different engines and frames from a number of different Chinese factories. You may or may not end up with extra parts.

There don't seem to be any oversize piston and rings sold for the Chinese bikes. You buy cylinder, ring and piston sets and replace everything. you don't bore them over. However, you can get standard ring sets and pistons for a lot of the Chinese bikes. One problem with a lot of Chinese ring sets is a lack of marking on the rings themselves. On most all ring sets there is some kind of mark on the ring signifying which side goes up. Such is not the case with all Chinese sets. Many ring sets have no markings at all. This is not as bad as it might seem. Simply check out my Ring Page.

The lack of shop manuals is also not as bad as it might first seem. Again simply use the general specifications and torque figures as given in the Motorcycle Repair Course.

Another interesting thing is the availability of cheap, complete engines to repower... well most anything you can fit them in. Got an old Honda 200, a 70 or 90? A bit of modification and you are back on the road for far less then a rebuild.

So there you have it. The Chinese revolution is here to stay. We might as well take advantage of it.

Finding Motorcycle Parts

"Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom."
Psalms 51:6

We all want the truest parts to replace our motorcycle's inward parts and in that thought is wisdom. There are basically four types of parts.

1. OEM. Meaning "Original Equipment Manufacture."
2. NOS. Meaning "New Old Stock."
3. AfterMarket. Meaning parts made by someone other then the original manufacturer.
4. Used Parts. Parts taken from a broken or wrecked motorcycle.

OEM parts cover every single part on the motorcycle. Every nut, piston, bolt and gasket. This costs the original manufacturer a lot of money but they have to do it to support the motorcycles the manufacturer makes. The down side is that these parts cost top dollar. The up side is that each part will fit and fit perfectly. Many times the best place to start your parts search is with the original manufacturer.

NOS parts are just OEM parts that are old. You might be getting them from the original manufacturer but more likely you will be getting them from some one who bought them from the original manufacturer. Some manufacturers sell off all parts that are older then a certain number of years, usually ten years. NOT all manufacturers do this, just some. They do this so they don't have to store parts that maybe no one will ever buy. The people that buy the old parts either think they will buy cheap and sell high OR they just truly love that engine or bike and want to keep it going as long as possible. Yes, people really do this. Shoot, I would buy all the old Trail-90 parts if I had enough money. Which I don't, unfortunately. I just love that bike. Anyway, people do that!

One problem with some NOS parts is their age. This is not so much a problem with steel parts because they are normally packed in special paper and plastic that is designed for long term storage. Rubber parts can be packed as well as steel parts but rubber just does not age as well as steel. Just something to think about if the part is twenty or thirty years old.

Aftermarket parts are made buy some one who thinks they can make a common, fast moving part at a great profit. Say an air cleaner or a piston or a valve. They do not have to make every part only the fast moving, high profit parts. Original Equipment Manufacturers have to make ALL the parts. High profit, low profit and even no profit parts. This means aftermarket people can price the part cheaper then the original and still make a good profit. Most times the aftermarket part will be just as good as the original. By law, if the aftermarket part is as good as the original, it will not void the original warranty. In other words if you replace your air cleaner with a cheaper aftermarket one, instead of an expensive OEM one your warranty is still good.

Used Parts usually cost one half of what a new part costs. There is nothing wrong with used parts. As one sign I saw outside an auto wrecking yard said "There's nothing wrong with used parts. You drove in here on them!" This is quite true, as long as the parts are not too used. A professional mechanic will most likely not use used parts because he must go and get them. If he pays a dollar for a two dollar part, adds 50 cents for his time, he will be charging you a dollar fifty for a used part. It makes much more sense to use a new part and charge the two dollars. However, for you, it makes great sense. Buy the part and save one half.

If the part is not available from the manufacturer you may have to buy used if you want to get your machine back on the road.

If you are innovative you can also find parts in very odd places. I once had a newer three cylinder Triumph come in for an oil change. The owner wanted to use the special oil the owners manual called for. It was Mobil 1 Racing 4T synthetic motorcycle oil. None of my regular suppliers carried it so I call the nearest dealer, who was 150 miles away. He didn't have any. Now what? I went on the oil manufacturers web site and lo and behold one of their dealers was Wal-Mart. I go down to their store and there it is. Some auto parts stores carry selected motorcycle parts too. Such as nuts, bolts, gasket paper, ignition points, batteries and the like. So be open to gathering parts from odd places.

Now we come to warranties. A warranty is only as good as what the guy who sells the part says it is. By that I mean the guy you buy the part from is the man that will decide if and how much of a warranty gets honored. What do I mean by that? Well, if the spark plug or whatever three dollar part you buy fails it is the seller that eats the price of the new part you get. Do you really think he can send a cheap part back and that the manufacturer will reimburse him? I wish it was true but it is not. On more then one occasion I have replaced a ten dollar inner tube that supposedly failed. No way the manufacturer paid me back. Oh he might have, I guess, but it just costs me too much to send a cheap part back. So I grit my teeth and back the part myself.

What about a more expensive part? Like a gear or maybe a bearing or valve? Well guess what. They may say they give a ninety day, or one year, or whatever warranty but when it comes time to make good you will find that the real truth of the matter is you didn't "install" the part right or the customer "Over revved the engine" or there was a New Moon and everyone knows you don't install that particular part under a New Moon! You get the picture? Some people may disagree with me but... !

Most electrical parts do not come with a warranty. There are a few exceptions to this but for the most part don't expect electrical parts to have a warranty.

Parts Man Ramblings

I'm at my workbench working on an engine. I had the big, roll up door open and the day was bright, sunny and glorious. In walks two guys. One asks if I can get a piston for an old Suzuki B-120 from the mid 1960's. I tell him maybe. He asks how much and I say I don't know for sure but it probably be around $120.00. He just goes ballistic. Starts to yell, rant and rave about how he only paid $50.00 for the bike and that Suzuki and I are just a bunch of thieves and robbers. He is throwing his hands up, turning red in the face and walking back and forth. I might have been worried except for the fact that I had a hammer in my hand and a 44 mag pistol under the counter so it was just funny. I'm good though, I don't say a word neither do I laugh.

He turns to has friend and says "Come on, let's go." and walks out. His buddy is somewhat embarrassed and says "Sorry!" and off they go.

Parts people have to put up with a lot of guff from people. Maybe it's because so many people seem to think that every 30 year old bike has lots of parts still available for it and that they will be real cheap. Alas, the piston for a thirty year old bike will cost as much as one for a three year old bike. Maybe it's because many people seem to think I am here only as a benefit to you. I'm just waiting and holding on to that part so I can give you a super cheap deal. Maybe it gives me a warm, fuzzy feeling inside... and then again maybe not!

Sorry folks, every motorcycle shop is there for one reason and one reason only. TO MAKE MONEY. If they can make you happy in the process so much the better. Just remember. No matter how popular the shop, if it does not make money it cannot pay it's bills and will go out of business.

Now I'm not saying don't buy from cheap internet or mail order places. I am saying if the shop gives you advice and it helps you with your repair you should buy your parts from them even if the parts cost more. They have to make money to pay the bills and bike shops have a lot of bills. Rent, special tools, banking charges, business licenses and taxes. The list goes on and on. It costs a lot of money to stay in business. In other words, find a local shop you like and support it. If you don't, the shop just might not be there when you need them.

It's like this. A young man comes into my shop and he has a question about his little Kawasaki G5 motorcycle. I answer his question and let him look at the parts Micro-fiche (This was in the days before the internet) Over the next few years I let him use the Micro-fiche dozens of times, gave lots of advice and once even let him work on his bike in front of my shop. Borrowed some tools as I remember.

Well, he finally needs to buy a part. A piston kit from Wiseco. I quote a price. Another shop, who would not give you the time of day for free let alone advice, beats my price by five dollars. Guess who he buys from? Your right, the other guy. The kid actually said to me that he knew I would want him to buy from the other guy so he could get the best price! Again, I'm good. I don't say a word. One would think that being given access to the Micro-fiche alone would have been worth the five dollars but I guess not. I never expected to make any labor money from this kid but I did think he would at least buy a part or two from me. Guess I thought wrong.

To complicate motorcycle parts is the fact that while many different models are made but there are relatively few actual bikes made in each model range. The push is for new, different and more powerful motorcycles. A car engine can be made in the millions over many years. A motorcycle engine may only have only a few hundred thousand examples made over a two or three year period. We the consumer have chosen speed over everything else. Speed costs money. How fast can we afford to go? Seems every year I run across people who buy a used, worn out, speed demon and are surprised at how much it will cost to get it going again. They really can't afford to go that fast!

If you are in a hurry and don't care about the cost buy your part from a local dealer for whatever type of motorcycle you own. If price is a big concern you can often save a substantial amount of money buying aftermarket parts if they are available. If your bike is old, often the only place you can find your NOS part is on Ebay or an internet dealer. Lastly, you just might find that special part at a good price at a salvage yard.

2-STROKE OIL

I'll condense hours and hours of study and research to one statement. "You can run the manufactures oil at whatever ratio the manufacture says and feel safe. ANY other oil run at 20 to 1."(20 parts gas to 1 part oil) .In other words run Honda oil in Honda 2/strokes at Honda ratios. But if you run Honda oil in a Yamaha, run it at 20/1. Yamaha oil in a Honda? Same thing 20/1. They all say "Ours is the finest oil available." Trouble is they will not really tell you why.

FOLLOW THE ABOVE RULE

If You Don't.... It's OK.... I Don't Care.... It's Not My Engine!!!!

Now, I know a lot of you out there who feel you can run things much leaner. Like 32 to 1 or 40 to 1 or even leaner. No less an expert than Bob Greene recommended a 32 to 1 mix and no less an expert than Gordon Jennings recommended a 20 to 1 mix. A lot of people run lean and a lot of them get away with it... and a lot of them don't. So what gives ? I feel the problem is this. No one really knows at what dilution the 2-stroke oils are mixed at or exactly what additives are added. At least I don't, and I've tried to find out a number of times. They send you a bunch of specs but will only say "Ours is the finest available." They never say why their $3.00 a quart oil is better then the $5.00 a quart stuff. Here are a few ideas to consider.

Let's look at dilution. At least that's my word for it, and I don't really mean the weight of the oil either. Most say they are a 30w. I mean the ratio of the stuff that counts to the stuff they put in to make it look and mix good. That make sense ? Probably not ! Well, think of it this way. If oil "A" is twice as thick as oil "B" and you mix both at 40 to 1, oil "A" will really be 20 to 1, right ? Now think about the reverse. If "A" is half as thick as oil "B" and you mix both at 40 to 1. "A" would now be 80 to 1. A bit lean right ? I don't think the real dilution ratios, between different oils, are that big. I do think there is enough of a difference between 2-stroke oils to cause a problem. Especially when you consider the additive package.

What about additives ? I think the manufacturers match the additive packages to the metallurgy of the metals in their engines. I once went to a Lawnboy lawnmower school where they bragged that the Lawnboy oil had almost no ash in it. They said this was really good for their engines. Another mechanic at the school said he had been to a Sachs chainsaw school and they told him there that the Sach engine needed ash. Their oil had lots of ash. Seems to me he said at least 2-3 % of ash, yet Lawnboy likes almost nothing... Why ? What about the other additives in the package ?

Here are some more things to consider. Most 2-stroke, motorcycle engines have fixed carb jets. This means changing the ratios will change the air fuel mix as oil is not gas ! Change the ratios and you may need to rejet the carb.

I have noticed that as an engine wears out the quality of its combustion declines. In other words it does not burn the fuel mixture as good as it once did. ( Well Duh ! ) As oil does not burn as good as gas, your plug tends to oil foul. Also, a worn engine will have worn seals too, letting oil in from the transmission. Now, you tell me. Do you maintain your Race Bike ( and that CR, RM, KX, YZ, etc, IS a full blown Race Bike ) to factory standards ? Do you know what those standards are ? You know... new rings every 3 motos, and all that other stuff ? Hint... they are in your shop manual.

My point is this. With 20 to 1 you will get enough of what ever is needed to keep your engine running, no matter what the manufacturer wanted. When your buddies say run 40 or more to 1 on your oil, watch out ! They may mean well, but what will it do to your bike over the long run ? Are you running 40-50 to 1 ? I know of no scientifically run tests that show less oil is better for your engine. On the contrary, I know of several that show more oil, jetted right, in a good engine, gives more horsepower. If your engine does seem to run better on less oil, you just might need to rejet, rebuild, or retune. If you insist on running lean on the oil, you better have done your homework !

One thing I do know... the worst thing that's going to happen to your engine at 20 to 1 is a fouled plug and maybe your spark arrester screens plugging up. Too lean and...

Now, if any of you oil manufacturers care to enlighten me with some facts and tests, it would sure make me happy if you would do so.

To make measuring the oil easier I use what is called a "Ratio Rite Cup" You can get them at any Motorcycle Parts Dealer. They cost 5-6 US dollars. I use mine for all kinds of measuring tasks... motorcycles, taxidermy, everything. In fact, I use it several times a day, every day. I always keep several in stock, so if I break or loose mine, I can grab another real quick. It's that handy... at least to me. I tell people about it all the time. I have yet to sell even one ! Go figure !

"And thou shalt make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary." Exodus 30:25

No, I don't think Moses was meaning engine oil. But to me, "an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary." sure describes oil. Apothecary means perfumer, and to me oil is perfume ! I am not alone in this opinion. Soichiro Honda, founder of Honda Motorcycles, said of his first encounter with a car (leaking oil) "I was literally intoxicated by the smell of that oil." That sweet smelling mixture has been really changing lately. Here are some things to consider when oil change time rolls around.

There are two styles or types of oiling to consider here. Some engines have the engine oil separate from the transmission and/or clutch oil. Air cooled BMW Boxer twins are an example. Your engine oil will last a bit longer if it is only lubing the engine. Meshing gears break down the oil quicker than spinning bearings and the clutch adds its own contaminates too. Most Japanese bikes have common engine/trans oil systems. So if your engine oil also lubricates the transmission and clutch... change the oil every 1000 miles. If it just lubes the engine you can go a bit longer. Lots of clean fresh oil will make an engine last a long time. I see very few oil related failures. What I do see a lot of is LACK of oil failures. Check the oil every time you start the engine. No fool'n... every time... without fail... always.

While you are at it oil your rear chain too... EVERY TIME YOU RIDE!!!

Now you ask what type of oil? I have never been a big fan of the motorcycle specific oils. They cost a lot of money and the only tests I've seen show that they don't hold their viscosity any better then regular oils. I've always used automotive oils. The problem now seems to be the new SJ and SL oils. The lighter weights of oil, 10W-30 and lighter, are now formulated to be "Energy Conserving". These energy saving oils have additives that may cause clutch slipping and other problems. They are also short on additives that bike engines need like Phosphorous. These oils will have a "Starburst" on them and will say "Energy Conserving". Right now the heavier oils like 10W-40, 20W-50, 15W-40, and 15W-50 aren't labeled energy conserving and should be all right to use. If your bike needs one of the lighter oils, you could use a light diesel rated oil with a C designation like CG or CH. The diesel oils are not required to be "Energy Conserving". They have come out with a MA and MB designation, but I don't have a lot of info about them right now. Bottom line... A 10W-40 or 20W-50, automotive oil with no "Starburst" symbol, and no "Energy Conserving" label, should be just fine. If you are really worried, get a motorcycle specific oil. However, they do cost a lot more.

I don't have any experience with synthetic oils because...

1. None of my customers want to pay that much for oil.
2. I don't want to pay that much for my own oil.

3. I like frequent oil changes.

As I said before, change your oil often. Now, this always seems to be a big controversy. I don't know why. Seems a no brainer to me. All the tests I've read find that the oil breaks down, loosing viscosity, as the miles pile up. Add in all the byproducts from combustion... acids... moisture... whatever, and you got a mix that is steadily going down hill. Now, your supposed to leave that in your engine for 5-10,000 miles so you can save a few bucks on oil ? No way am I gonna do that. I ride a BMW 750 air cooled twin. When I let the oil go too long the breather valve starts to chirp at me. I put in new oil and it stops. It just got a bit thin. This happens at around 1500 to 2000 miles. I have a Pontiac 6000 car. At around 3-4000 miles one or two of my hydraulic tappets don't want to pump up, so I get a bit of tappet noise. Oil's getting a bit thin. I put new oil in and it goes away. You pick'en up on what I'm saying ? Change your bike's oil at 1000 miles and your car's at 2000 miles. If you are only riding a few hundred miles a year or less, change it at least once a year. Before putting it up for winter, if possible.

Actually, I don't know why I bothered to write this page on oil. Nobody ever listens. The season has just started (2001) and already a 1999 bike has come in dead... piston pin welded to the rod... no oil... $1,200 to fix. Another one this year. I pulled the oil drain plug on a lawnmower and NOT ONE DROP OF OIL CAME OUT ! Filled it up with oil and got it started... ran just fine... no funny noises or noth'in... go figure !

As always...

IF YOU DON'T, IT'S OK
I DON'T CARE
IT'S NOT MY BIKE !

CHANGING YOUR OIL

Changing your oil sounds simple enough, but even the so called "Experts" can goof it up. I was working in a Honda shop in Salt Lake City, Utah around 1970, when this happened. A new shop opened and we were not too happy. There already were two Honda shops in the city. But, they paid Honda a bunch of money, or so we thought, and there they were. They sold an SL125 Honda single, supposedly serviced it, and out the door it went. Only trouble was they didn't put any oil in it ! So it ran a few miles and seized up. The customer brought it back to them and got another bike. So what did they do with the bike ? They put some penetrating oil down the spark plug hole and got it started again. They then SOLD IT AGAIN, WITH NO OIL IN THE CRANKCASE ! Back it came, but at least now the engine was so trashed that they couldn't sell it again. Truly amazing, huh ?

Change your oil often. If you want to keep your engine going, change your oil often. This is a real simple thing to do, but you must do it right.

If your engine uses a wet sump design, the first step is to place a container to catch the oil under the oil drain plug of your engine. Make sure the container is big enough to hold all the oil. Look in your owners or shop manual for the amount of oil your engine holds. The oil drain plug will be on the bottom or side of your engine. Some engines, like the old Yamaha 650cc twins, have two drain bolts. It's best to drain the oil when the engine is good and hot, however, I usually wait till the engine cools down a bit or I just run it enough to warm the oil a bit and get it mixed up good. So call me a wimp, I simply don't like getting burned by hot oil.

Look at the oil drain plug, once you have it out. Some of them have small magnets in them to catch any steel metal particles from the engine. These plugs can be special bolts with a flange head or an allen head bolt with a flange head. Depending on how they are made, the allen head ones can be quite strong or very weak. I took this one out of a 1996 Triumph three cylinder. It's design is very weak. This one is from a BMW twin and it is quite strong. Almost all oil drain bolts will be found to be in there really tight. This is because there is a lot of heat down there and just about everybody torque those puppies down really hard. When you reinstall the oil drain bolts, look up the tightening torque in the shop manual and use a torque wrench to put them in. If you can't find a torque for the oil filter drain bolt, measure the bolt size and use Standard Bolt Torques. This will save a bit of headache in the future.

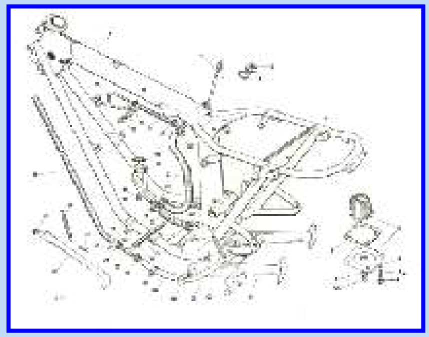
Using the right torque on both the oil drain bolt and the oil filter bolt can be a lot more important then you might think. On a lot of bikes, there simply is not enough metal around the hole to allow the use of a thread repair kit. Sometimes you can use a bolt that is just a bit bigger or you can use an expanding plug, but the best thing is to not strip it out in the first place. You will find many drain plugs over torqued and absolutely locked in. For these, you may have to make a special Reinforced Socket Wrench.

On dry sump engines, you must find the oil tank and then the drain plug on that tank. There really only two types of tanks.

1. The oil is carried in the frame of the motorcycle.
2. A small, separate tank mounted somewhere on the frame.

Frame Oil Tank.



Separate Oil Tank.

There are two types of frame oil tanks. The Japanese use the upper part of the top frame backbone and the front downtube to hold the oil. The Oil Drain Bolt is on the lower part of the front downtube.

The British use the top frametube, which bends down forming the rear frametube. The oil is drained at the bottom of this rear frametube.

Japanese Frame Oiltank.

Triumph Frame Oiltank.

I'm sure there are others, but you get the idea.

After draining the hot, or warm, oil you will want to give a thought to the oil filter. I always like to change the filter because it usually holds a quarter pint or so of old oil. You don't have to and there's not a lot of old oil in there, but... !

Oil filters come in a number of styles.

1. Screw on Cartridge
    1. Internal or
    2. External
2. Paper or Cloth Element
    1. Internal or
    2. External
3. Metal Screen
    1. Coarse Screen or
    2. Fine Screen
4. Centrifugal
    1. Clutch Center or
    2. Cup

Cartridge types are just like automotive spin on oil filters. The best way to remove and replace this type is with a special wrench. You can also use a small strapwrench, but they tend to crush in the side of the oil filter during instillation. If the housing is only crushed in a bit, it usually will not hurt anything. If it is badly crushed in, you will need to replace the filter.

Usually the cartridge is located, externally, on the front or bottom of the engine. A few engines like the BMW K series (Brick) have the cartridge located internally, in the oil pan. You can remove a cover and get to it if you have the right tool. if not, you must remove the oil pan and use a strap wrench. Screw the filter in till the rubber gasket touches the base and then NO MORE then 1/2 turn more. Check your shop manual.

The drill is this. Clean the oil filter base on the engine. Dip your finger in some fresh oil and lubricate the rubber ring on the cartridge. Then thread it on until the rubber ring contacts the oil filter base on the engine. Now turn the cartridge 3/4 to one turn more or about 13-15 Ft. Lbs. of torque, and you are done. DO NOT OVER TIGHTEN. If you over tighten the cartridge it will distort the rubber gasket and cause the filter to leak or even fail completely. Again, check your shop manual. The new Harley Davidsons want you to use your hand and turn it in 3/4 of a turn after the rubber gasket touches the base.

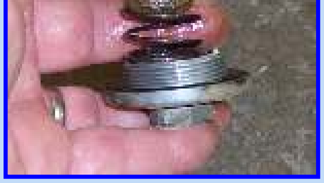
Paper Element oil filters can be inside an engine, under a cover. They can also be carried in a cast, finned, housing, outside the engine. Most of these use a special, large diameter, hollow bolt to hold the cover or housing to the engine. People just love to over torque these bolts. Always use a torque wrench to tighten the bolts. The torque can be as low as 11 Ft. Lbs. to as high as 23 Ft. Lbs. of torque. Check your shop manual. There is a large thin flat washer or Filter Spring Seat used on these bolts that everybody seems to loose. The filters seem to work fine without it, but I always make sure it's put on. These filters have two holes in them, letting the bolt pass through the filter. They are supposed to go on one way and are sometimes are marked. They seem to work both ways.

Another type of oil filter element fits into a chamber on the right side engine. It has one hole. An example would be Yamaha 250cc singles. It's cover is held on with three bolts. The newer ones can only be put on one way, the right way. On some older bikes, the oil filter element, can be put on backwards. If you put them in backwards you will cut off the supply of oil to your engine and it will, in short order, burn your engine down.

Interestingly enough, The same thing will happen to you if you reject Jesus and try another way for salvation. There is only one way this filter goes in, and there is only one way to salvation. Any other way will not work. Even if you really, really, sincerely believe another way will work, it will not. (John 14:6) OK, OK, enough preaching, just put the filter in the right way. If you are unsure, check the shop manual. Each engine is different. The Shop Manual will steer you right !

I had a customer who did this once. He changed his oil and filter and put the filter in backwards. He started the engine and let it idle for about five minutes. The engine then sized. He then brought it to me ! I got the head off and found the rocker arms were literally welded to their shafts. We had to cut the rocker arms and shafts out with a cutting torch. Very difficult. Almost ruined the head. Make sure you put it on the right way.



On some Yamaha four wheelers there is no paper element. Instead, there is a very fine screen that is called a filter. If you are careful you can clean and reuse these. It is in a chamber, and has a cover, just like the paper element. The chamber is located hi and to the rear of the engine on the right side.

On lots of different Yamahas and Hondas the Oil Drain bolt also has a very coarse Oil Filter Screen in it. Don't be fooled just because this is a coarse screen. This screen will catch stuff and can get plugged. If it does get plugged, it can cut off oil flow to the head.

The most primitive type of oil filter is the centrifugal type. It can be in the center of a clutch hub or a separate spinning cup through which the oil is pumped. If you thought that this sounds like it would not do a good job, you would be thinking wrong. At least judging from the amount of sludge, gook and metal filings I have cleaned out of them. On some of these engines, there is a cover you can remove to get at the filter and on others you have to remove the entire clutch cover. You don't see these anymore except on small single cylinder engines. They were used mostly on 50-200cc Honda singles and on early (1960s, 1970s) Honda 125-500cc twins.

CHECKING YOUR OIL LEVEL

Now we come to oil levels. Every engine needs a certain amount of air space inside the engine. If you put in too much oil, it cuts down on this air space and increases the engines internal pressure. This can cause an engine to smoke or blow out oil through the seals and/ or engine breather.

If you put too little oil in, you blow up your engine, so you had best be accurate in the amount that goes in. One way is to look in the shop manual. It will normally give two amounts. One amount for if you have changed just the oil and another amount for when you change the oil AND oil filter. Sometimes there is a third amount for when you have rebuilt the engine and it is totally oil free. Most engines will have some way you can easily determine the right oil level without draining the oil and putting in an exact amount. This is usually done in one of three ways.

1. Oil level dipstick.
2. Oil Level Plug.
3. Oil Level Sight Window.

Oil Level Dipstick.

Oil Level Plug.

Oil Level Sight Window.

All checks are done with the bike straight up and down, usually on the centerstand.

The Oil Level Dip Stick is simply a stick that screws into the side of the engine. It has high and a low marks on one end. Take the Dip Stick out. Clean all the oil off it and insert it back in it's hole. Do not screw it in. Now remove it again and look at the lower end. The oil should be between the High and Low marks. If it is low, add some. If it is high, take some out. The majority of bikes out there have an Oil Dip Stick to check their oil.

An Oil Level Plug is simply a threaded hole, in the side of the crankcase, that is at the proper oil level. Remove the plug or bolt and add oil till it starts to come out the hole. Put the bolt back in and you are done. A lot of race bikes, and some small street bikes, use this method.

An Oil Sight Window has a clear plastic window cast into the side of the crankcase. There are high and low marks on or near the window. The oil level must be between these marks. Add or drain oil to make it so. A lot of street bikes have started using this method. It works good till the plastic starts to discolor, and you can't make out the level easily anymore. Another potential problem is, believe it or not, clean oil. If the oil is clean and the level a bit high, it may look like there is no oil in the window. You add more, still no level in the window, so you add still more. To prevent this, let the bike lean a bit from straight up and down. The real level should show up in the window. If it does not, add a bit more and lean it again till you find the real level. If worst comes to worst, drain ALL the oil and refill with the correct amount (It's given in both the owners and shop manuals) and check the window again.

If you have a small mini bike with a Briggs and Stratton or Tecumseh engine, without a dip stick, you usually fill up the oil to the threads on the oil fill hole. It is a good policy to put all the oil you can possibly get in to it, without it over flowing too much. This applies to both Horizontal and Vertical engines. If it has a dipstick, you usually screw it in to check the oil level. As always, CHECK YOUR SHOP MANUAL !

Adding oil can be a challenge. They never seem to make the fill hole big enough or in the right place. Lots of different funnels can really help here. You can Dribble oil down an Oil Dip Stick and into an oil fill hole. Sounds weird, but it works !

If you change the oil filter, fill the oil up to the right level and then start the engine. Run it for about a minute, and then turn it off. let it sit for several minutes, to let the oil drain from the head, and check the level again. It will have gone down some as it fills up the oil filter, so you will need to add some more oil.

Dry sump engines are a bit different from wet sump engines. On Dry Sump engines you will need to start and run the engine for five minutes or so BEFORE you check the oil level, if the engine has been sitting for any length of time. Even if you have just changed the oil, you will need to run the engine. This is because the oil tanks are all above the engine's oil pump. The oil is gravity feed to the pump. The oil will back feed through the pump gears and into the sump. The longer the engine sits, the more oil seeps back into the sump. You have to run the engine so the scavenging oil pump will pump all the excess oil out of the crankcase and into the oil tank. Once the crankcase is empty of oil and the oil tank full of oil, you can get an accurate oil level reading.

I always like to check and make sure that oil is pumping to the head on four strokes. If there is no oil light, there often is an Oil Check or Bleed bolt. Loosen it while the engine is running and oil should come out of it. If there is no check bolt or oil light, and you still want to check, simply take a tappet cover off and start the engine. A lot of oil should spray out, so keep your finger on the kill button. If very little or nothing comes out, you have BIG problems. Look into it !

You will notice that two stroke motors have no oil filters. That is because they have no oil pump. The oil is just in the transmission and all the gears are splash lubricated. The lubrication for the engine is handled by an oil injection pump or by pre-mixing the oil in the gasoline. The oil to the engine is always fresh, but you must change the oil in the transmission on a regular basis.

Engines can be funny critters about oil levels. My RV has a Chevy 454 engine. It will sit at 1/4 quart low and stay there for many miles. If I fill it up to the top of the dip stick it will use oil till I stop refilling it and let it go back to the level it wants. I've seen bikes do this too. Check your oil a lot and you will soon see if your engine is using oil a lot or just wants to find it's own level.

TWO STROKE "AUTOLUBE" OIL PUMPS

But the wise took oil in their vessels ...
Matthew 25:4

¶ In the old days, two stroke engines used a fuel mixture of gas and oil called Pre-Mix. This worked fine at high speeds but at low speeds there was too much oil. This caused problems like fouled spark plugs and plugged mufflers.

The two stroke manufacturers came up with a great cure. Injection oil pumps. These pumps add just the right amount of oil for whatever RPM the engine is running. The oil was stored in a Oil Vessel, also known as an Oil Tank. Depending on how hard you ran the engine, the oil could last through several tanks of gas. No more pre-mixing your oil and gas.

At an idle the pump mixes the oil with the gas from a 120 to 1 ratio on up to 20 to 1 ratio at 8000 or more RPM. These pumps worked great and really helped the oiling problems of two strokes. Two strokes now fouled their spark plugs less, didn't carbon up their mufflers as much and saved money by using less oil.

These pumps are controlled by an extra throttle cable and deliver the oil either to the throat of the carburetor or directly to the main bearings. They are quite reliable, but a lot of people still seem to want to disconnect them. Why? I do not know. Most all have a little bleed screw on their side. If you run the oil tank dry, you will need to remove that screw till oil comes out the hole. Put the screw back in and your bled! If there is no bleed screw, loosen the oil inlet hose bolt and bleed it from there.

There seem to be two basic styles of pumps on most popular, Japanese, dirt bikes. Yamaha Makes their own, at least I think it's their own. I have seen one that looks similar on some of the old Bridgestones too. These oil pumps don't seem to have a brand name on them, so I assume they are Yamaha's. The other type is made by Mikuni. The pump's delivery volume is adjustable by an adjuster located on the cable going to the throttle. Some of the Yamaha pumps could be set up for a different delivery volume by adding or subtracting little thin washers, but we don't really need to worry about that. The pumps were set at the factory and should be OK for whatever engine they come on.

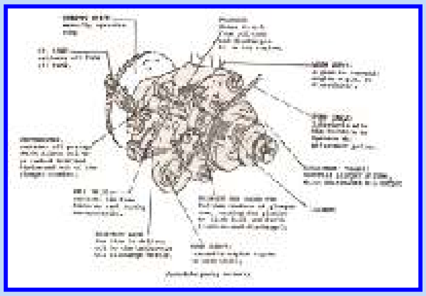
I know there are a number of other then "Japanese" autolube type pumps out there but I've never run across them here in the "Wilds" of Idaho, USA. If someone can send me some pictures and spec's on any I'll be glad to put them up here.

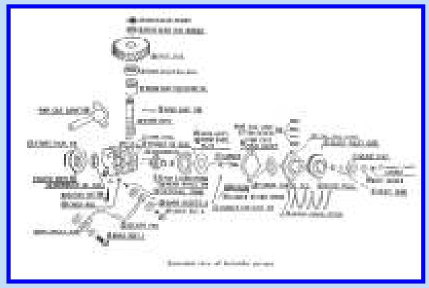
All these pumps must be set so the wider you open the throttles, the more oil they pump. Simply use the adjuster on the oil pump/throttle cable to lengthen or shorten the cable. On the Yamaha pump, align the Pin and Dot. On the Mikuni, align the two lines.

On some of the earlier (1960s and early 70s) Japanese rotary valve two strokes, you used a different method. You removed the carb cover and then opened the throttle till a mark on the throttle slide (C) matched the top of the Carburetor Venturi opening. Now adjust the oil pump marks (A&B) to align, and you were done. Just to make things interesting, some bikes require you to open the throttle wide open and then align the marks on the pump and others had the mark on the side of the carb slide and you took out a plug to see it. It would pay to check your shop manual!



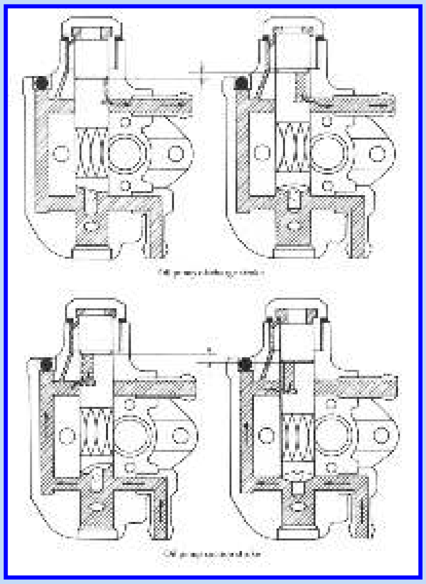
Bottom line? These pumps are very reliable and work great, but you must adjust them so their maximum flow is at the engines maximum RPM. Check that shop manual! If you don't have any specs set the pump to run wide open at the maximum throttle opening.

On old two strokes you may find that they smoke like crazy. This is because of two things. One, the engine is worn and doesn't burn the fuel as well as it did when new. Two, The seals are old and get hard. Oil from the transmission gets past the seal, and into the engine. If you cut back on the oil in the gas, and the seals soften up and start sealing, you could blow the engine up. The cure is new crankshaft oil seals.



Below are some pictures of oil pumps and example settings. You can use these as a guide, but again I say "Check your shop manual!"

Here are some styles or examples of how two stroke engines can be oiled.



All this is all probably more then you will ever want to know about oil injection pumps. Remember, if you just are not sure that your pump is working, simply run 20 to 1 Pre-Mix for fuel. Then the worst that will happen, is that you will foul out a lot of spark plugs and smoke a lot!

TWO STROKE OIL PUMP LUBRICATION STYLES

Here are some examples of how you can inject oil in a two stroke. I didn't plan on getting this carried away, after all, it's basicly oil in the gas. Most of these bikes are no longer with us, but this does give you a chance to study some of the nifty ways to really lube up a two stoke engine. Then again, you just might run across one of these babies.

FOUR STROKE LUBRICATION

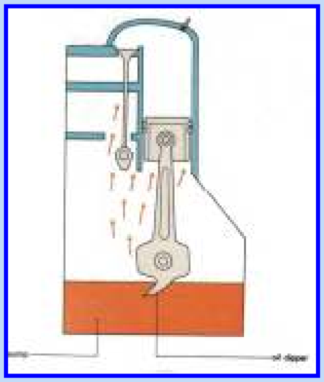
There are four styles of lubrication used on Four Stroke Motorcycles.



1. Wet Sump
2. Dry Sump
3. Splash
4. Total Loss

Wet Sump engines use an oil pan (sump) to store the oil at the bottom of the engine and use an oil pump to pump the oil to where it is needed in the engine. Some engines of this type will have a removable oil pan and some won't. Most Wet Sump engines have a plate under the crankshaft and over the oil. This is to prevent friction losses from the oil splashing on the spinning crankshaft. this seems to be the most popular oiling system. Most Japanese machines are Wet Sump, but not all !

Dry Sump engines carry their oil in an oil tank that is separate from the engine. This can be an actual tank or inside of the tubes of the frame. This engine lubrication type uses two oil pumps. One to pump oil to the engine, where it lubes everything and then drops to the bottom of the engine. From there, the second or scavenge pump pumps the oil back to the oil tank. Sometimes the scavenge pump also pumps oil to the transmission, valves and other places in the engine. The scavenge pump is twice as big as the main oil pump. If you look at the oil return pipe, when the engine is running, it will be spurting oil. This is normal. Dry Sump engines tend to back flow oil into the lower part of the engine when they sit for long periods of time. Because of this, you will need to run the engine for about five minutes before checking the oil. If you are not sure whether the engine has any oil or not, add a pint and then start the engine. If the oil level rises you can siphon some out. If not, add some more oil. At worst the oil will overflow, which is better then no oil ! The first Honda 750/4s used dry sump as did Triumph, BSA, Norton, Harley Davidson, Suzuki DR350s and others.

Splash Lubrication is pretty primitive. A hook, cast or bolted onto the crankshaft, dips into the oil in the sump and splashes it around the inside of the engine. This system was used on some of the first motorcycles in the early 1900s. It was also used in small Briggs and Stratton engines up until a few years ago. These engines where used on Heald motorcycle and three wheeler kits. For low speed (3600-4000 RPM), side valve engines, this was a very workable system. I've seen these little engines run, quite happily, for 1000 hours and more if you keep the oil level up. These are pretty much fazed out now, but you will still run into one now and then.

Lastly we have Total Loss lubrication. This was used on motorcycles back in the early 1900s. Early motorcycle engines had plain babbet bearings or roller and needle bearings or a combination of both. Oil, oilpumps, babbet and everything else were all kind of new back then and not as good of quality as we have today. Because of this, high output engines used roller and needle bearings. The engines had hand pumps on their oil tanks. When you started the engine you gave 'er a shot of oil. Every so many miles you would give the engine another stroke of the pump. The engine used up the oil and got more clean, fresh oil to the bearings with each stroke of the pump. The engines had sumps and these where filled with oil to start with and splash lubrication took care of the rest of the engine. This gave lots of clean, fresh oil always going through the engine. Sometimes the engines had a Drip feed Lubricator, in addition to the hand pump. One pump of oil every eight to ten miles at 20 MPH was deemed sufficient. At 30 MPH you needed one pump every five or six miles. The Drip Feed should be set at 8 drops per minute, just in case you wanted to know. I don't think you will run into too many of these machines !

There are four types of oil pumps. At least that's all I've found so far ! Now Harley did have a "Vane" type oilpump, but it gave way to the gear type back in the 1950s or so. A bit before my time !

Gear Oil Pumps Closely meshed gears, in a housing pump the oil. Used on early Hondas, BSAs, Harley Davidsons, and others.

Piston Oil Pumps A piston in a small cylinder with one way valves pumps the oil. used on Honda 160/350 twins, Triumphs, and others.

Trochoidal Oil Pumps A star shaped gear with rounded points, rotating in a special housing pumps the oil. Used on most all modern motorcycles. Harley Davidson calls these "Gerotor" oil pumps.

Centrifugal Oil Pumps Grooves cut in the camshaft bearing surface force oil up to the valves. Used on 50/70cc pushrod Hondas.

Gear, Piston, and Centrifugal have been fazed out for the most part. Most all current oil pumps are of the Trochoidal type. It seems to be the most efficient and most popular. Trochoidal pumps can be measured for wear with a feeler gauge.

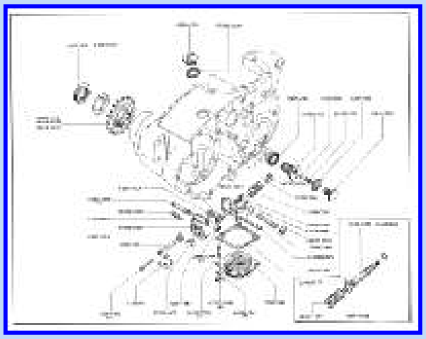
- "A" The clearance between the inner rotor (1) and the outer rotor (2). Should be around .002" to .006"

- "B" The clearance between the outer rotor (2) and Oil Pump Housing (3). Should be around.003" to 006"

- "C" The clearance between the face of the inner (1) and outer rotors (2) and the Oil Pump Cover (3). Should be around .001" to .009"

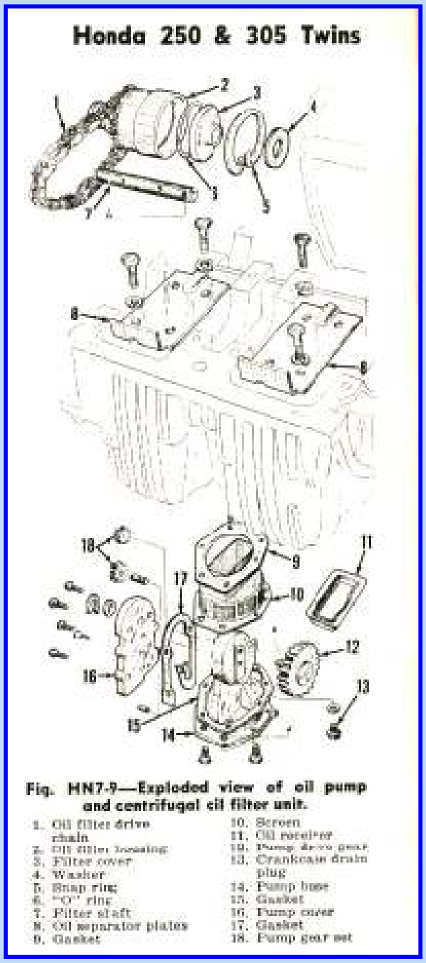
These are VERY general specs. The specs for each make of Trochoidal oilpump vary quite a bit so check your shop manual.

Honda Gold Wings are wet sump but use two oil pumps. The main engine pump and an extra pump to lubricate the clutch.



Most of these oil pumps can be removed with the engine in the frame, but you may have to remove the clutch basket to get at them. Some, like the DR350 Suzuki single have one pump on the outside of the crankcase and the other inside. It just depends on how dumb the designers where.

Oil pumps are normally very reliable, but if the engine has blown up, it's a good idea to check their screens and pump clearances in case debris has gotten into them. If the engine is a dry sump, check and clean the oil tank too.



Often, there will be restrictors in the oil passages. This is to control the oil pressure, in the engine, before or after the restrictor. Make sure you check these restrictors for gook, bits of metal, or anything that would plug them up. Also check and see where the Oil Pump Screen is. Lots of times, these screens can only be checked and cleaned with the crankcases split or the clutch cover off. Don't find out the screen is plugged after you put everything together !

Sometimes there will be an external oil line to the head, and they will brag about how easy it is to clean. Then they put the oil route up one of the cylinder studs and brag that it can't be damaged by a rock or some such thing. Seems to me it's six of one, half dozen of another. Just make sure the passages are clear !

GASKETS

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: But when I became a man, I put away childish things." 1 Corinthians 13:11

If you are going to be a good mechanic you've got to put away childish things. One of these things is using gasket cement everywhere. Gaskets are made to expand just a little when oil hits them. This makes a good, oil tight seal. If your sealing surfaces are smooth and you have a new gasket, you simply do not need gasket cement. A real sign of an amateur is lots of slobbery gasket cement. So do you put the gasket on dry? No, you use plain ordinary wheel bearing grease. I use grease on all new gaskets except the ones that come from the factory with a special coating already put on. The grease serves several functions.

1. It will hold the gasket in place as you put the two pieces together.
2. It allows the gasket to move around a bit as you put in the screws.
3. It starts the swelling process that the oil will finish.
4. It allows you to disassemble things easily if an error is made and allows you to reuse the same gasket after you fix that error. Not that I ever make errors... well... I did once. I thought I had made an error, turned out I hadn't!
5. It allows easy disassembly in the dim, dark future.

Is there a time to use gasket cement? Yes indeed. If there is a gouge or nick in the sealing surface, it will need to be filled in gasket cement. Sometimes no gasket is called for and the two parts are sealed with a gasket cement. There are many types out there. Get several that are sold in your area and see which one you like. I prefer the non hardening kind and I don't like any of the silicon seal types. The silicon seal types tend to ball up inside the engine and come loose plugging the oil screens and choking off the oil flow... not good. So what do we use?

I really like YamaBond #4. It's a gray gooey cement used to join the crankcase halves of Yamaha 2/strokes. It doesn't ball up. Any excess inside the engine seems to flatten out and sticks to the side of the crankcases. I use it for any metal to metal sealing jobs where there is no gasket. I use it even if another sealant is called for because it works so well. Works good with gaskets too. You used to be able to get it from Yamaha but not anymore apparently. The good news is ThreeBond has a replacement that seems to work just as good. It is ThreeBond Liquid Gasket #1194. I don't use the silicon seal stuff at all. Not any brand... too many baaad experiences!

Always use new gaskets. They are not that expensive. Reusing old gaskets is not a good idea but can be done in an emergency if they are in good condition. Here you can and should use gasket cement.

Gaskets come in different thickness. Sometimes the gasket thickness is used to set the side clearance on the shafts that pass through a crankcase. So if you make your own gaskets be sure to match the thickness of the old to the new.

You can make your own gaskets if the shape is not too complicated. This works quite well for something like base gaskets. In fact, if you make and stack several base gaskets it can lower the engines compression ratio so you can use lower octane gas. However, I don't suppose anyone wants to do that any more.

To make a gasket simply lay a piece of gasket material on to the part, like a clutch cover or cylinder. Take the ball end of a Ball Peen Hammer and tap along each edge gently. You will find this cuts the pattern of the part into the gasket. It helps if you have a set of hole punches too. If you are careful you can make a fairly complicated gasket. It can take quite a bit of time. All in all, just buy them.

It goes without saying that all of the old gasket must be removed and that you don't want to nick or gouge the metal surface. A big help in this is liquid gasket remover. You can get it in a spray can or in a brush on can. I like the spray. It just seems to work better. Just spray it on and wait awhile. If the gasket is still hard, spray it several times and wait overnight. Try not to get any on you. It is somewhat caustic. A special gasket removal tool will help too. Sometimes it helps to use a circular wire brush mounted on a bench grinder. Be very careful. The steel wire in the brush can eat into the aluminum if you push too hard. ALWAYS wear eye and face protection. The circular wire brushes spit out strands of wire and they do it a lot.

Unfortunatly, some bikes are going to leak no matter what. Like the old British bikes. I did everything you can think of to my Norton Atlas 750, except for welding the cases. I got the leakage down to 300 miles per quart. The dealer wanted to know how I got it to be so oil tight ! Some bikes are just going to leak oil, period.

So remember, new gaskets, grease, and clean metal surfaces equals oil in the engine and not on the floor... most times anyway!

GREASE

Bearings, such as wheel bearing, are often lubricated with different kinds of grease. Grease is oil, carried in some kind of base (Carrier) material. This base material holds the grease in position, but the oil is what does the actual lubrication. The types of bases and oils allow the oil to lubricate the bearing in the manner the designer wanted. Greases come in many different types for different temperatures and conditions. Some gear boxes, like the British Burman, use only grease for lubrication. They take a certain type of grease. The bearings on a drum brake wheel take another. Disk braked wheels still another. The trouble is, the base of one grease is not always compatible with the base of another. That is why we need to use the type of grease that is specified in the shop manual. If we do use another type of grease, it MUST be compatible with the old grease. If it is not there will be problems ! If you must use a grease that is not compatible with the old grease, you will need to clean out ALL the old grease before using the new grease.

GASOLINE

First things first--

"DO NOT EVER WASH YOUR HANDS IN GASOLINE."

That is because static electricity can and will light you off! One cupful of gas has the explosive power of two (2) sticks of dynamite. Modern gas also has benzene and other nasty stuff in it thanks to the EPA (but no lead!). Gas, years ago, had octane and lead and was safer to handle, but no more. Humm, In the old days (1967-68) I could actually taste gas and tell you if it was hi-test or regular. Humm, I'm still alive ! Humm, I would never do that now with with benzene in the gas. Humm, but we have safer, better gas now... right ? ? ? Are you sure ? (Thanks EPA!)

Gas is neat stuff, but it has one bad habit (other than burning you up)... it rots, decomposes, turns into varnish and goos up your carburetors. A small amount of gas, like a pint, can go bad in as little as two weeks. A large amount, say 20 gallons, can stay good for a year or so.

This means that if you let the gas sit in a carburetor for any length of time you could be in for an expensive repair. Cleaning those carbs, on a four cylinder engine is a real pain. Some Japanese V-twins are even worse. To top it off, on some of the Constant Velocity Carbs (sometimes called Constant Depression Carbs), almost any thickening of the gas will plug those little idle jet passages... not good!

The cure? Real easy... put fuel stabilizer in the gas. Any of the different brands will do. Just follow the directions on the bottle. It's a real life saver. If you have engines that sit for long periods of time between uses just use stabilizer, in the gas, all the time. It won't hurt anything. Then when you need the engine, just fire it up and go. Once a year I would change the old gas for new, just for GP (General Principal). Pour the old gas in your car gas tank, so you don't waste it. Remember to put stabilizer in the new gas too.

There is a lot of misinformation on gas octane out there. So let's take a look at it. If you have a high compression ratio, you are squeezing a lot of air into a little space. Whenever you compress air it gets hot. Lots of compression equals lots of heat. When you heat an explosive mixture it tends to explode. Now this explosion is what we want, but we want it to occur at the right time. That is when the spark plug fires. If the fuel mixture starts to burn before the spark plug fires you end up with two flame heads. One from the spark plug and one from wherever a hot spot developed in the combustion chamber. When these two flame heads hit each other there is a lot heat and pressure, and it goes PING ! This is called pre-ignition. Also known as knocking or pinging. When you hear that ping it's kinda like someone is hitting your piston with the round end of a ball peen hammer. The piston can handle it for a while, but not for long. Sooner or later it will put a hole in the piston. What can you do ? You can retard the ignition a bit and lose your horse power or you can use a fuel that will not fire off as easily. The higher the octane number the harder it is for the fuel to start burning. This reduces the chance that a hot spot, in the combustion chamber, will pre-ignite, causing pinging. Lead worked really well for this, that is, lead helped raise the octane numbers in gasoline. Lead also helped lubricate the valve seats. But lead is bad, bad, bad. Or so we are told.

So they put in other stuff that does not work as good. Now that other stuff is getting into our water supply. Do you think maybe the cure is worse then the disease ?

Because of this octane thing, it is always a good idea to try different brands and/or grades ( regular, hi test, premium, etc. ) of gas, especially if pinging is a problem. I can think of at least one bike ( the old, old Honda 50's ) that ran better on low octane, regular gas. Oh yes, most of those oxygenated fuels are just gas with up to 10% or so alcohol added. Alcohol can damage carb bodies and rubber parts in older machines. However, it is good to take moisture ( water ) out of the fuel system.

A word of warning here. On any 2/stroke that uses pre-mix oil in the gas. Water is heavier then gas and goes to the bottom of the tank. Alcohol mixes with the water and makes it a burnable mixture. BUT it does not always mix well with the pre-mix gas. As it is heavier, it can go through the carb and into the engine to be burned before the pre-mix. No oil, no lubrication on the 2/strokes big end bearings, no more running 2/stroke. 4/strokes and oil injected 2/strokes should have no problem. Something to think about.

If you use starting fluid use only a VERY SMALL AMOUNT, if you use too much it can BLOW your muffler, engine, and maybe YOU up...Not Good ! If the engine does not start, find out why. Do not pour more starting fluid down it !

GASOHOL

"Thou hast shewed thy people hard things:
thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment."
Psalm 60:3

The EPA and all the Green Environmentalists seem to think Gasohol is just the greatest thing around. Astonishingly, or perhaps not, the truth is a bit different from what the powers that be say it is.

Story time! About thirty years ago I was, like always, making a big push to save money. I was reading about the all the supposedly great virtues of running alcohol in my car and motorcycle engines. It was really very easy. At the time, the government permits were cheap and man has been making booze for many thousands of years. What could possibly go wrong?

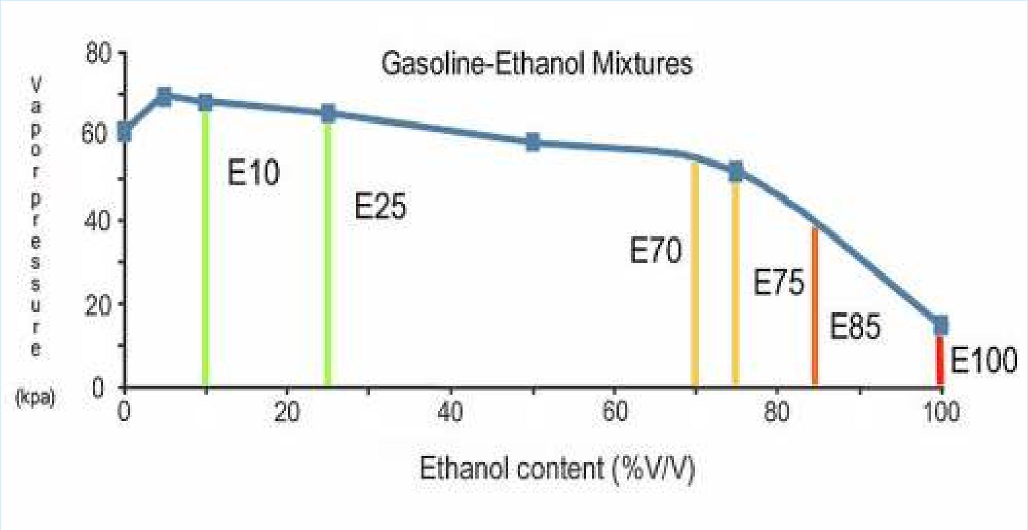
So I bought a bunch of do-it-yourself books from Mother Earth News. I was just about to start buying the tubes and tanks and everything else when the truth hit me. While Gasohol can work on a very small scale, there are just too many problems they do not tell you about.

1. Alcohol only has about 66% of the energy of an equal amount of Gasoline. One US gallon of gasoline contains 114,000 BTU's of energy. One US gallon of Ethanol only has 76,100 BTU's of energy per gallon. When you use an Alcohol/Gasoline mix you will lose gas mileage.

   Yes, yes, I know the MythBusters said you get lots of power running with pure Moonshine but...?

2. If you use straight Alcohol you must rejet your carburetors or remap your fuel injectors to run 40% richer. Otherwise your fuel/air mix will run way too lean.

3. All the hoses, carburetors, gas tanks, everything that the Alcohol touches must be specifically made for Alcohol.



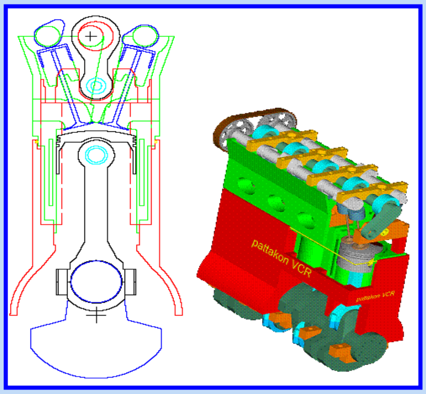
4. To fully utilize what power it has, Alcohol has to have a high compression engine. Alcohol is knock free. That means you can have very high compression ratios without any detonation. This is why you see SpeedWay bikes and Indianapolis 500 engines using Alcohol. SpeedWay engines have very high compression ratios and the Indy engines have high boost from their Turbo and Super Chargers which effectively raises the compression ratio. More compression equals more power.

   If you have these high compression ratio engines you cannot run Gasoline because it will detonate and destroy the engine.
5. Alcohol loves water and will suck it right out of the atmosphere. This causes all kinds of problems. Rust in gas tanks and stuff like that. When they first came out with Gasohol they found that if you used it in two stroke engines it sometimes would suck in moisture from the two stroke fuel mix, and drop to the bottom of the gas tank. The fuel/oil mix would float on top of the Water/Alcohol mix. Then the Water/Alcohol mix with no oil would be burned in the engine. NO OIL going to the crank and piston on a two stroke engine produces an engine that goes BOOM.

6. Gasohol costs more to produce then Gasoline. The only reason it does not cost more at the pump is because it is heavily subsidized by the government.

7. Unintended consequences. By using all this cheap corn for Gasohol we cut off food from many poor countries who used to buy our cheap corn. Nothing like contributing to world hunger so we can be Green and politically correct. Sort of like all those Wind Towers killing birds and bats like crazy.

One of my Yamaha shop manuals tells us that there are two types of Gasohol. Gasohol containing Ethanol and Gasohol containing Methanol. Yamaha says Methanol can cause problems. You can use Ethanol but do not exceed 10% (E-10). Some newer car engines are made to run Gasohol in mixtures of up to 85% (E-85) but it seems you can't go much higher then that for a variety of reasons. One of which is hard cold starting with high Ethanol/Gasoline ratios because of low vapor pressures. In other words the stuff just will not vaporize to burn at low temperatures so it will not start the engine in winter.



The EPA tried to raise the percentage of Alcohol in our fuel this year (2014) to 15% (E-15) but enough engine manufacturers complained about it that they stopped.

Because of all these problems I decided not to make and try to use Ethanol as a fuel. But Dan, you say, we are using Gasohol right now, are we not? Yes, we are and the EPA wants us to use more. However, Gasohol will NEVER replace Gasoline because we simply can't grow enough corn or beans to produce enough Ethanol to fuel all our engines. Why? We have enough land to grow it and we have enough seeds but we do not have enough water to even come close to producing enough for our needs. Bottom line is this. Gasohol is not a workable solution to our energy problems unless we develop a variable compression ratio (VCR) engine which Honda and others were working on a few years back. However, even if we had the right engine we still don't have enough water.

Pattakon Engine

Pattakon Crank

This is a Gasohol tester. You can get one from Amazon.com for ten-fifteen dollars. You can make one using a 6 inch long by 3/4 inch diameter test tube. Make a line one and a quarter inch (1.25") up from the bottom of the test tube. This is the water line. Make another line five inches up from the bottom of the test tube. This is the Gas line. Fill the test tube to the Water line with Water (Duh!) Now fill the test tube with Gasoline to the Gas line (double Duh). Now shake the test tube to mix the Water and Gas. Oops! Clean yourself up and refill the test tube with more Water and Gas. Cap the test tube this time. Good thing you weren't smoking right? Shake it again.

Let it stand there for ten minutes.

Look at the tester and locate the Water/Gasoline separation line. If the line in the fluid is above the water line you have Alcohol in your fuel.

If it is about .19" above the Water line you have 5% Gasohol (E-5).

.38" above the Water line-10% (E-10).

.56"-15% (E-15)

.76"-20% (E-20)

.95"-25% (E-25)
1.15"-30% (E-30)
Et cetera, Et cetera.

You get the Idea and please don't go E-mailing me that my math is not spot on. All of this is very approximate, give or take, up or down, right or left, whatever. This just gives you a general idea of how much Alcohol is in your gas.

All the Greenies in the world wanting it so will not make it so. We just do not have enough water to grow the beans to make it.

In reality, Gasohol is a dead horse and it is just starting to smell.

GAS TANKS

¶ Gas Tanks. Every bike has to have one somewhere. Gas Tanks come in three different flavors.

1. Steel Gas Tanks.
2. Plastic Gas Tanks.
3. Fiberglass Gas Tanks.

Steel Gas Tank
Yamaha

Plastic Gas Tank
Honda

Fiberglass Gas Tanks
Montesa & Bultaco

Most all Gas Tanks are steel. Steel has one problem. It rusts. They tell me that BMW is the only motorcycle manufacturer that puts an internal coating (Red) on the inside of their Gas Tanks. I've seen a lot of rusted Gas Tanks but none from BMW, so this must be true. If you have a rusted tank, you are between a rock and a hard spot. The best fix is a new tank. This is not always practical because rusted tanks are usually found on old bikes. A new tank can cost $400 to $500 dollars if you can find one. Most old bikes aren't worth it. Sooo... what to do?

No Rust in Gas Tank

BMW Coated Gas Tank

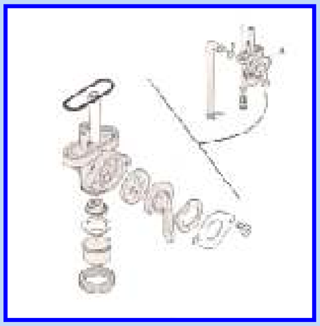
Rusted Gas Tank

There are several kinds of tank coatings offered for sale. I've only used one, the most common major brand, and I was not impressed. The tank I used it on was in like new condition with a small crack in the bottom that seeped gas. The tank had no rust in it. I cleaned, acid washed, and coated the tank, per factory instructions. I let it dry for two days with a very low pressure air hose circulating air to the tank. I put gas in and guess what?

It leaked right at the crack. I then soldered the crack and that fixed it. I figure that if it will not seal a good clean tank what chance will a rusty one have. Others may have had better luck, but I don't like paying $30-$35 for nothing. It is also true that I have not tried all the coatings on the market. The choice is up to you. One thing else to consider... I've seen a number of tanks where the coatings have come loose and it ends up quite the mess.

So what to do? If rust is the only problem here is what I do. I put some large nuts (off bolts, not the eating kind.) in the Gas Tank and shake it vigorously for a while. Then wash out as much rust as you can with gas. Now put the Gas Tank back on and put a see through fuel filter in the gas line to the carb. This will keep any rust or dirt from getting into the carb. When the filter fills up with rust, change it for a new one. This is the cheapest way to go.

If you have a small rust pinhole you may have a really bad problem. The tank may look good on the outside, but odds are the inside is all rusted out. Clean it out enough to solder or weld it and lots more holes magically appear. The only real cure is a new or different tank.

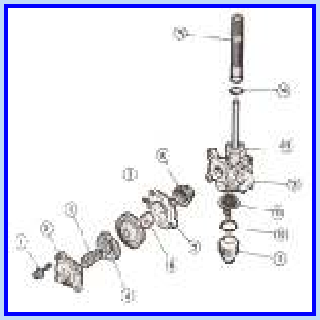


If the leak is caused by a crack or puncture you can repair it by soldering or welding the tank. The only problem is gas tanks tend to blow up when a flame is applied to them. Not good! The cure is pretty easy, but might be hard to do for the average person. You will have to have a tank of some kind of inert gas that will not burn. Simply fill the gas tank with inert, non-flammable, gas (Like Nitrogen) under slight pressure and weld away. No oxygen, no blown up Gas Tanks. Just make sure the tank is purged of any air!

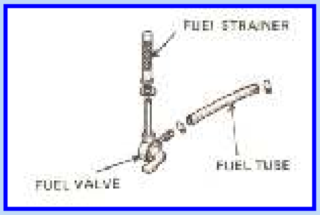
I'm always surprised at how many good welders don't know this. They try to fill the tank with water, flame off any gas, and BOOM they still blow up. Right idea, wrong filler. For the average guy it might just be best to take it to a good welder who knows the trick. You can get a two part epoxy made especially for gas tank repair. I've used it a couple of times and the fix held. Just remember that these epoxies work good for a limited time. Sooner or later they will fail. Sometimes they seem to last forever... other times the same glue doesn't last at all. On an old bike or in an emergency they do seem to work well.

If you have to get a newer, unrusted Gas Tank, try a Motorcycle Salvage Yard. Take your old Gas Tank with you. You may be able find a Gas Tank off another make or model that will fit with a little bit of modification.

Now about fuel petcocks. Again there are three flavors.

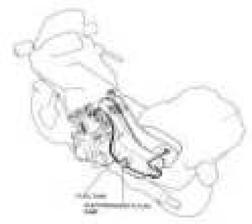


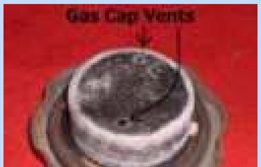
1. Standard Fuel Petcock.
2. Vacuum on/Off fuel Petcock.
3. On/Off fuel Petcocks.



The standard petcock has ON-OFF-RES (RESERVE). OFF is, well, off. ON takes fuel from a tube that sticks up from the petcock body into the tank. When the fuel level goes below the top of the tube, the carb runs out of gas until you turn on the reserve. The RES (RESERVE) draws fuel from the bottom of the tank. Both tubes usually have fine wire filter screens on them and another screen in the petcock itself. Not all Fuel Petcocks have all three screens but, almost all Fuel Petcocks have at least one screen.

The Vacuum on/off type of petcock has a diaphragm that automatically shuts off the gas when the engine stops. You will see a hose going from a fitting on the petcock to a fitting on the intake manifold of one of the carbs. This supplies vacuum to one side of the diaphragm, opening the fuel valve inside the petcock. These petcocks have three settings. ON-RES-PRI. ON is on. Reserve is RES and PRI is Prime. Prime bypasses the diaphragm so you can fill the carbs with gas after they have been drained. Set it on PRI, fill the carbs and put it back to ON. Sometimes, ON is called MAIN.



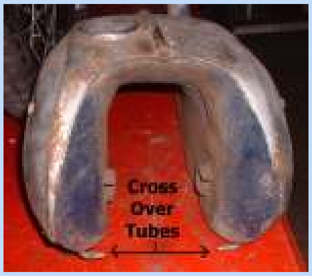


The third type is just an ON-OFF valve. These are used mostly on racing machines which have no need of a reserve. Most fuel petcocks are fairly expensive to replace, considering what they are. Some are screwed together with tiny screws and can be taken apart and fixed. Others can be taken apart, but you can't get parts for them, and some are riveted together. The riveted ones seem to be on newer bikes and can only be replaced.

If there is fuel flowing but the valve won't turn it off, the fix is easy. Just get a plastic inline valve from a lawn mower dealer and put it in the fuel line going to the carb.

If the factory doesn't have any replacement parts (like the vacuum diaphragm) you can, sometimes, get after market parts. I haven't used any because by the time the petcock gets this bad the bike is so old no one wants to spend the money on it.

Some motorcycles have the Gas Tank under the seat. This gives the motorcycle a lower center of gravity and better handling. That's the idea anyway. Because of the low position of the Gas Tank, these Gas Tanks have an electric fuel pump to pump the fuel, through a filter, to the Carburetors.



There has to be some way for air to enter the tank as the fuel flows into the carb(s). If the vent becomes plugged the gas will not flow. Most times there is a small vent hole in the gas cap. Now that the EPA is looking at bikes, those caps may have one way valves in them or be sealed completely and the tank have a vent tube. Some of the Harley-Davidson tanks have two caps and one will be non-vented.

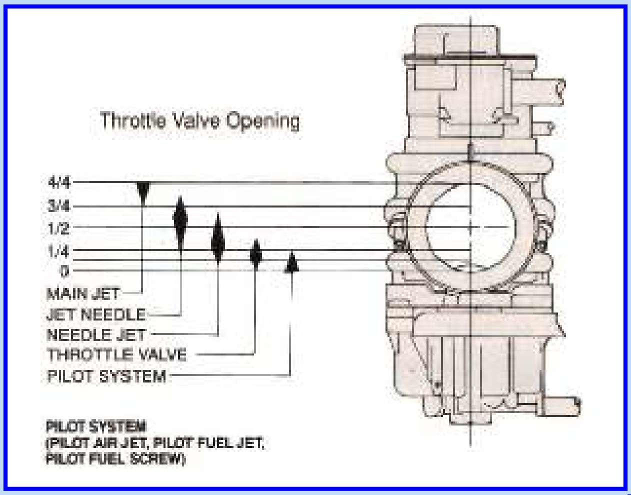
Older (1960s-early 70s) Japanese bikes and bikes with two piece gas tanks (some Harley-Davidsons) will have a crossover tube. These are a real pain because you must drain all the gas before you can take the tank off. Some crossover tubes are in the front of the Gas Tank and some are in the back.

Back in the day (1968) I was working in a Honda shop in Salt Lake City, Utah. The Honda Factory trained lead mechanic said the best way to get the Gas Tanks off was this. Loosen the tank from the front fittings, pull one side of the crossover tube loose but not off. Jerk the rear of the Gas Tank straight up. Now you could lift the Gas Tank off the bike and empty it into a gas can through the Gas Tank fill hole. It seemed to work with a minimum of gas spillage. The newer tanks are much better.

A lot of dirt bikes now have plastic tanks, which are real neat until one gets a hole or crack. They do have some plastic glues out but I would not trust them on a gas tank. It is a good idea to keep the plastic tanks (and any plastic) out of the sun as much as possible. Plastic Gas Tanks and fenders, that are supposed to last forever, fall apart after years in the sunlight. I speak from much bitter experience.



I don't know of any motorcycle manufacturers that are currently using fiberglass Gas Tanks. I'm not sure how fiberglass will handle all the E-10 and higher oxygenated fuel mixes being sold now-a-days. Depending on who you talk to, it works good or does not work good. Take your pick.

Carburator Theory and Tuning

For some reason everyone seems to think tuning a carb is just real easy. Change a jet or two and boom, your there. Yeah, right ! There are quite literally millions and millions of jet combinations. A rough check on Bing carbs shows there are at least 13,860,000 different combinations of jets. If you are going to change carbs you'd better be prepared to spend some time and money on the job.

If you look at a carburetor, you will notice a rather large hole going from one side to the other. This is called a Venturi. Air passes into the engine through this hole (Venturi). As the velocity of the air entering the carb (and then the engine) increases, it's pressure decreases, creating a low pressure or vacuum in the venturi. This vacuum moves around in the venturi, as the throttle is opened, and sucks gasoline through the different jets in the carb. The gas then mixes with the air going through the venturi. The way the jets are made causes the fuel to vaporize as it goes into the venturi. Where the jets are placed in the carb and where the jet's outlet is located in the venturi, determines what part of the throttle opening that jet controls. The idle jet system (comprised of pilot air jet, pilot fuel jet and pilot fuel screw) controls from 0% to about 25% of the throttle opening. The throttle valve controls 0% to 35% of the throttle opening. The needle jet and jet needle control from 15% to 80% of the throttle opening and the main jet controls 60% to 100%. This means that when you open the throttle about one eighth of the way open, all of the gas/air mixture going into your engine is controlled by the idle jet. As you can see, the different jets over lap the operating range of each other. That is, the jet needle starts to effect things before the effect of the idle jet ends. This is something to remember when working on carbs... everything is interconnected. Change one thing and it will effect other things.

OK, let's go over the different systems in the carb and see what they do.

1. Fuel level. The fuel level is controlled by the fuel floats and the fuel float valve. The floats are hollow or made of something that will float on gasoline, such as cork. Part of the float presses against the float valve, sometimes called a needle and seat. Most times the part of the float that touches the float valve needle is bendable so you can adjust the level of the fuel in the floatbowel. All plastic floats are not adjustable. If this level is way too high, gas can leak out the carb overflow tube or into the engine. If fuel gets into the engine it will thin out the engine oil, ruining it's ability to lubricate. This will, sooner or later, blow up your engine ! If a full tank of gas in the evening turns into a half tank by morning, check your oil. If it's thin and smells like gas, change it and replace your float valve and/or check your fuel level. If the oil is OK, check under the overflow tube. If it's OK, then check where you are parking your bike 'cuse someone is walking away with your gas !

If your fuel level is just a bit high, the mixture will tend to be a bit rich. If it's low, the mixture will tend to be a bit lean. This is because a high level takes less vacuum to suck fuel into the engine and a low level takes more vacuum to do the same.

2. Pilot or idle jet system. The idle jet controls the idle and on up to quarter throttle, give or take a bit. On some carbs, like Mikuni there is an air jet too. In conjunction with the idle jet there is an idle jet air screw. This screw leans or richens the fuel mixture for a smooth idle and on up to one quarter throttle. From the idle jet, there are little passages cast into the carb that lead to holes just in front of the throttle valve or plate. There can be just one hole or there can be several, depending on the carb design. They effect the mixture as long as the vacuum, in the venturi, is over them. As the throttle opens further, the vacuum moves to the needle jet and jet needle.
3. The Throttle Valve. The big slide that opens and closes your throttle has a bevel angle cut in one side of the big round (can be flat, too) slide, toward the air cleaner. This angle comes in several sizes and helps control the fuel mixture from idle to about 35% open throttle.
4. Needle Jet. This jet doesn't really even look like a jet, but it is ! It controls the fuel mixture from 15% to 60% open throttle. It sets in the center of the carb, right over the main jet.
5. Jet Needle. This is the needle that rides in the throttle slide and goes into the needle jet. This needle controls the fuel mixture from 20% to 80% open throttle. It can come in many different sized tapers. Sometimes, one needle can have several tapers on it. The top end of the needle has grooves cut in it, usually five, and you can move the little clip on the end up or down to lean (down) or richen (up) the mixture. Most late model bikes have needles with only one groove cut in them. This is so you can't richen the mixture, thereby keeping the EPA happy.
6. Main Jet. This jet controls the fuel mixture from 60% to 100% open throttle.

We want nice clean acceleration from idle to full throttle, with no stumbling or flat spots. This can be quite a tall order if we are starting with a new carb. Actually, it can be a real challenge to get things to carburate right after something as simple as an exhaust pipe change.

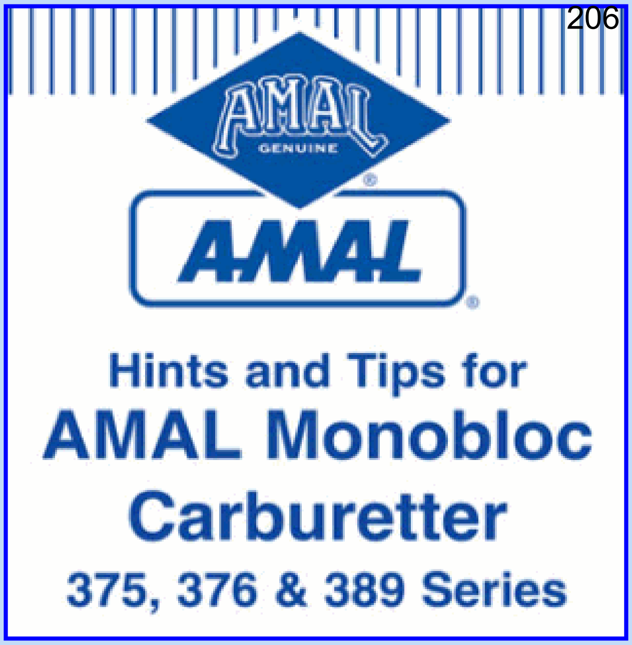
Now, I wish I could tell I'm the great carb man, but, well... no one has ever been dumb enough to hire me to really work over a carb. Well, there was that one time with that Kaw 650 and aftermarket pipes. It had some kind of weird stock carbs that looked like Mikunis but really were not. It had TDK or KDT or DTK, something like that, carbs. It had aftermarket exhaust pipes and was running too lean, and stumbled at one point under acceleration. Worthless pig ! The jet needles where not adjustable, so I put little washers under the needle clip, to raise the needles. The main jet only came in one size, so I drilled it out with ity-bity, expensive, jet drills. I could move the miss around, but I could not get rid of it. From the beginning I told the guy it wouldn't work and that he was wasting his money, and that at the least we needed carbs we could get parts for, but nooo. Just rise the needles, drill the jets he said... $200 later he finally gave up. I guess I shouldn't complain, I did get paid... but !

But you want to try it, don't you ? OK, the drill really isn't that hard. Simply run the engine at whatever throttle opening you want to test, for a mile or so, and look at the spark plug. Is the spark plug reading lean or rich ? Now look for the jet that controls that particular throttle opening and exchange it for a richer or leaner one. Now that doesn't sound very hard, does it ? Oh yes, the throttle transition from one jet to the next must be smooth too ! Go back over the areas that each jet controls. They overlap each other. Some a little, some a lot. Make sure you have a good selection of jets ! Most carb manufacturers have tables of specifications on the jet needles and needle jets, and other jets that you will find very useful. With these specs you can make a better guess as to what jet will work best. Some places use motorcycle dynamometers for testing. These can be a big help to get real close to the best jet setting. Working out the best main jet for a 170 MPH bike can be quite unhealthy if you only have a freeway to test on ! Just remember one thing. A dynamometer is not the real world. A fact more then one factory has found out the hard way when their super hot, dyno tested, race machines didn't run so fast in the real world, on real pavement, in real air with real bugs on the windscreen !

Anyway, what I'm trying to get over to you is that just because your buddy said he got new carb, changed a jet or two and now his bike gets 100 miles per gallon and has double the horse power, doesn't mean you can too ! It just might require a lot more work than you bargained for.

Look on the bright side. Carbs used to be real simple at the turn of the century, but they didn't work as good as today's carbs.

Oh, one last thing, seeing how we are talking carb theory. When an engine is cold, like when you first start it up. It doesn't evaporate the gas well. Liquid gas does not burn, so you have to put in lots of gas, because a lot of it does not vaporize. The choke helps the carb to put into the engine a very rich mixture, and at least some of that mixture will vaporize and burn.



I had one guy tell me that the reason for a rich mixture when starting was so the pistons would be lubed by the raw gas and spin the engine over easier so it would start ! He felt very strongly about this, so I didn't say a thing. Like the Bible says, don't cast your pearls before swine. (Matthew 7:6)

CARBURETORS

"Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet for any work?"
Ezekiel 15:4

Without fuel for the fire that motorcycle engine will simply not be "meet for any work".

First things first. Go get a working fire extinguisher and put it in easy reach. Like right beside the bike you are working on. Trust me... if you work on carburetors and engines long enough you will light yourself, or an engine, off sooner or later.

Play it safe and have a fire extinguisher close by...
If you don't... It is OK... I DON'T CARE!
IT'S NOT MY BODY AND IT WON'T HURT ME AT ALL!

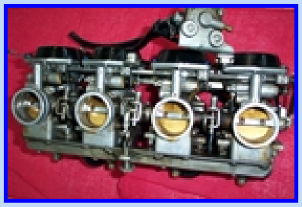
Dirty Carburetor



Exploded Carburetor

Dirty Carburetor

Most carburetor problems seem to come, as you might guess, after the machine has set idle for a while.

The real cure is to use Gasoline Stabilizer in your gas whenever the bike is going to sit, unused, for a long period of time. However it happens, if you have compression and spark but it still won't start. If the engine only runs with the choke on or the enrichening lever pulled out, you have one or more jets plugged. Notice I said enrichening lever... most of the motorcycle carbs have enrichening passages inside the carburetor that, WHEN THE THROTTLE IS CLOSED, provide the rich air/fuel mixture to start the engine. If you open the throttle any at all it cuts this enrichening out of the system. So if you are having trouble starting, and everything looks ok, see if closing the throttle helps. This does not apply to carburetors with a butterfly choke.

To get to the jets you will have to take the carburetor(s) off the engine. A shop manual will be very helpful here for float settings and exploded pictures of the carburetor. Use some Gunk engine cleaner and clean off the entire engine and carburetors before you start. After you get the carburetor(s) off, if necessary get some solvent and clean again the outside of the carburetors. DO NOT go ripping everything down to individual parts. Work smart, not hard. If you take everything apart you risk breaking or losing things that are not broken and that are working just fine. POW, there goes a spring you thought you had a hold of. It is in orbit now and you will never see it again. Then you find out it is not available, except on Ebay in a complete four carburetor assembly for $500 and no, they will not sell it alone.

Multiple carburetors are normally bolted together as an assembly. This makes the connections between the carburetors very stable. That in turn allows easy adjustment of the throttle slides so each slide opens and closes the same as all the others. If you take everything apart the adjustments will be lost. These settings are pretty stable and only change after many miles of wear. Remember you are not replacing worn out parts. You are fixing plugged up parts. Yes, some of the parts will be worn like the Fuel Inlet Needle and Seat but most parts are just plugged and/or dirty. I like to take a tray, one for each carburetor, number the trays, and then put the parts from each carburetor in it's own tray. That way you don't mix up the parts from each carburetor with parts from another.

I like to take the top off the carburetor(s) and look at the slide and jet needle first. Usually the slide and Diaphragm are not too bad. I check for holes in the Diaphragm and clean the slide with a shop rag with some spray carburetor cleaner on it. Be careful not to get any cleaner on the rubber Diaphragm.

Now take the float bowl(s) off and remove the jets. Sounds so easy doesn't it? Sometimes it is, and other times it's a mass of gook. If it is, scrape as much of the gook out as possible, and boil out the rest with carb cleaner. Now don't throw the whole thing in the cleaner, Look at it first. Does it have rubber seals on the throttle shafts? Look close... sometimes these seals are hard to see and are not shown in the parts books, meaning you can't get them so you do not want to ruin them. If they are there and you can't get them you will have to scrape and clean the carb body carefully by hand and not soak it. Use a small wire brush, a small screwdiver and some spray carburetor cleaner. Keep at it and sooner or later you will get it clean.

Again, for these reasons most multi carburetor assemblies do not and should not be completely disassembled and dumped into carburetor cleaner. Just disassemble them far enough to do a good cleaning job.

Before you remove the air screw, turn it in till it bottoms, counting the turns. When you replace it, set it at this setting to start. there are many different styles of air screws. Sometimes there is a rubber o-ring and steel washer under the air screw spring and sometimes not. Look for it and if there is one, dig it out with a needle BEFORE you spray carburetor cleaner in there. The air screw may be covered by a plug similar to this one. You will have to remove this plug to get to it. I usually set the air screw about 1 & 1/4 turns out, if I don't have a setting.

When the engine is warm, turn the screw in till the engine stumbles, then out till it stumbles, and leave it at half way in between. Adjust the idle with the throttle stop screw as needed.

Throttle adjustment screws, sometimes called the throttle stop screw, are normally located at the center of the carburetor on most single cylinder motorcycles. Multi cylinder motorcycles have numerous ways of adjusting the throttle and are usually adjusted on the side of one the carburetors and sometimes in the center between the carburetors.

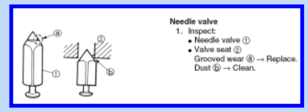
You will need to remove the Main jet and the Needle jet. The Main jet is usually screwed on to the lower end of the Needle jet, locking it into the carb. Remove the main jet and tap out the needle jet. Do this very carefully. It can break very easily. Sometimes the needle jet will have an O-ring. Remove the O-ring and soak both main jet and needle jet in carburetor cleaner. When you put it back in, there is a pin in the carb body that fits in a grove on the needle jet. Make sure they match up.

Be careful not to strip or break the small idle jet when you try to remove it. It may be necessary to grind the end of a small screwdriver to fit the jet just right. Be aware that some idle jets are pressed in and cannot be removed.

Even after soaking, the jet may still be plugged. If so take one wire out of a wire brush and gently push it threw the jet. The wire brush shown has wires that are .013" in diameter. The smallest jet drill you can get is a #80, which has a diameter of .0135". So you can use the wire and not enlarge the hole, at least not by much. Yes, I know all the books say not to use anything to clean out the jet hole. However, they live in a world where you can always get a new jet easily and cheaply. This is not the world I live in. Be sure that you can see light, or squirt carburetor cleaner, through each jet. If you can't, it is still plugged.

Compressed air works good too, only hold the jet in a shop rag so you do not give yourself an air embolism. I usually squirt some spray can carb cleaner into the carb passages, then blow it through with compressed air. I then look down the throat of the carburetor, as I blow it out, and make sure it comes out where it is supposed to come out, and that those small idle passages are clear. Wear goggles and don't get so close that you get that stuff in your eyes!

Sometimes the shafts that hold the carburetor floats can be badly gooked up or rusted. Use a penetrating oil of some kind and let it set awhile. By awhile I mean several hours, maybe overnight. It took many months for it to get gooked up. Seems only right it should take some time to remedy it. The oil will loosen up the parts so that you can drive out the pin with a very small punch. If necessary, tap on the punch very, very gently. The posts that hold the floats are very weak and break easily. Carburetor bodies can be very costly to replace! If necessary make supports to back up the posts. Also the float pin may (or may not!) be serrated on one end so you have to pull the pin out from the serrated end. The serrated end cuts into the float support, locking it in.



Spray penetrating oil also works good to free up stuck throttle slides too. If the slides have a rubber diaphragm on them, spray carburetor cleaner on a rag and wipe the slide clean. Do not get any carb cleaner on the Diaphragm. It will ruin it. While you have the Diaphragm out inspect it for holes. If you have an engine that has good compression, starts well, but just has no power and revs up, ever so slowly... check that rubber diaphragm... I'll bet it has a hole in it!

When you put the fuel inlet needle back in, put one drop of light oil on it so it will move freely in it's seat and not stick before the gas first starts to fill the bowl.

Don't clean the outside of constant velocity carburetors with spray carburetor cleaner unless you are sure they are not the Rubber Diaphragm type... the cleaner will eat the rubber! There is an all steel piston type of CV carburetor but it's still not a good idea to use the spray because of rubber float bowl gaskets. Notice too, the top seal is a Labyrinth seal.

If you turn on the fuel petcock and gas pours out the overflow tube, tap lightly on the carburetor body with a plastic hammer(or something like it). That will jiggle the fuel inlet needle loose. Same thing if there is dirt holding the needle open. If it doesn't work you need a new needle & seat. The tips of the fuel inlet needle can be either steel or rubber. Tips with a groove worn in them should be replaced.

Floats control how much gas there is in the float bowl. The Tang of the float presses on the float needle (fuel inlet needle) letting gas into the float chamber when the level is low and shutting it off when it gets too high. If the Tang is metal, you can adjust the float level by bending it up or down. If it is plastic, it is normally not adjustable. Sometimes, you may run across a plastic float that has a metal insert that is adjustable.

Float levels are different for each bike and are found in the bikes shop manual. If you don't have the float setting and can't find it anywhere, set it so the fuel level is a bit below the top of the float bowl. Make sure no gas comes out of the Float Over Flow Tube/Hose. The Float Over Flow Tube is at the bottom of each carburetor. That should get you in the ballpark. Adjust the fuel level down from there as needed.

There are many styles of floats. If you have Copper Floats, and the bike has been sitting out in the cold, with the temperature down below freezing, it's possible for water to get into the carb and freeze. This can crush the floats and make the carburetor overflow, when you turn on the gas in the spring. Too high of fuel level can cause the carbs to leak too.

Part of the enrichening circuit is in the main carburetor body and part is in the float bowl. The Enrichening Plunger basically, when it is raised, uncovers a passageway to a very small cast in jet in the float bowl. This little jet can get plugged so when you clean the float bowl, make sure it is clear. I like to put some spray carburetor cleaner down the large passageway and see if it comes out the lower hole. Remember, don't get your eyes too close and "Goggles are your friend." The jet is cast into the lower part of the passageway, hard to see and not removable on most carburetors but not all. Sometimes they are screwed in. Sometimes the jet is in a tube that sticks into the Float Bowl. If it is plugged, the choke will not work.

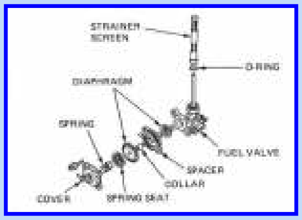
If the rubber boots and tubes, that connect the carburetor and the air cleaner housing, are old and hard, you should get new ones. However, sometimes they are not available. Try soaking them in carb cleaner. Soaking them will make them soft and pliable. You can soak them from several minutes to twenty minutes or more. Keep checking them till they look and feel right. Too long and it will ruin them. Of course, they are already junk anyway! You can also heat them in boiling water. This works real good, but they harden up real quick when they cool, so work fast. Because of old, hard rubber manifolds and tubes you may have to lever and pry the carburetors off. Be very careful when you do this. Carburetors are pot metal, very weak and easy to break. Lubing things up with Armor All and warming things up gently with a hot air gun can help.

You can sometimes rejuvenate a rubber part by soaking it in Armor All for a day or two. This seems to help the rubber tips of some fuel inlet needles, provided they are in pretty good condition to start with. You can squirt Armor All on the insides of the air box tubes to help them slip onto the carburetors too.

On the side of some carburetors there is another diaphragm that temporarily closes the slow speed jet air passage when the throttle is closed. This richens the fuel mixture, to reduce backfiring, when coming to a stop. Check it for holes and hope you don't have any. They are quite pricey.

At the bottom of some carbs is an accelerator pump, to pump extra fuel when the throttle is opened. On multi-cylinder bikes usually only one carburetor has a pump and it is connected to the throats of the other carburetors by passages or tubing. Check this Diaphragm, also, for holes or cracks.

All new Diaphragms can be expensive and hard to get. I have heard of people using a spray on rubber coating called " Plasti Dip " to fix diaphragms. I have never used it but I hear it works. Get it from NAPA part # 765-2527. Worth a try anyway.



The throttle slide can go in backwards...this jams the throttle wide open... Not Good...make sure it goes in the right way.

There are only two adjustments that you can make from outside the carburetor. The idle screw (Throttle stop screw) adjusts the speed of the idle. The idle air screw adjusts the idle mixture. This is only at idle and does not effect anything above idle. Here is another method to adjust it. Screw the air screw in and out until you get the highest idle speed. Then lower the idle speed with the idle screw and do it again until you get the best idle. The air screw can be located on the right or left side of the carburetor. It can also be on the top or bottom, in the front of the carburetor too! To top it off, if you have a 1980 or newer machine, it may have a cover over it to keep you from messing with it. You will have to drill or pry it out somehow. EasyOuts work good for this. Watch out, it may be illegal for you to do this, depending on where you live and whether this is a racing motorcycle or not.

If you can't get it to idle, or rather the idle stays real high then drops off and dies, check for an air leak at the carburetor manifold. Squirt some gas or starting fluid on the manifold and see if the revs change. If they do, you have a leak. If your valves clearances are too tight, it will also effect the idle.

You can make your air /fuel mixture a bit richer or leaner by moving the carburetor needle clip up or down. Move the clip down a notch to raise the needle, to richen the mixture. Move the clip up to lower the needle, to lean out the mixture. The needle is located in the throttle slide.

You should always turn the fuel off. If you don't and the carb inlet needle fails, it will fill your crankcase full of gas. Not good. If you have a four stroke, it thins out the oil and parts start to weld together... really not good. If you have a two stroke it will fill up the crankcase with fuel and can cause it to hydraulically lock. But at least it will not overheat the engine. A lot of newer bikes have a fuel petcock with a Diaphragm that only lets fuel into the carb if the engine is running. It operates on vacuum pressure. Normally you have three settings. On, reserve, and Prime. Prime bypasses the diaphragm to let fuel into the carburetor after it has set a long time.

Finally, a word on parts. Use only the carburetors manufacturers brand of parts. Such as Mikuni, Keihin, Bing, Amal, ETC. Do Not use aftermarket carburetor kits or parts. Their quality control is lousy (all of them!) Trust me on this, I speak from way too much experience. I have installed no less then sixteen aftermarket carburetor kits and there will not be a seventeenth. Yes, you are right I am a slow learner (But man, the kits are so cheap!). Oh, how many hours did I waste figuring out which "New" jets were bad? I don't even like to think.

How do you tell if a jet is Genuine Keihin or Mikuni or Bing or Amal or whatever? Simple, each jet will be marked with the Logo of the manufacturer. A "K" for Keihin or a "square within a square" for Mikuni. Bing has a "B", Amal has, well. "AMAL" and so on an so forth. I think you get the Idea. They are proud of their parts. If there is no name... how proud is that?

BALANCING CARBURATORS

Let me be weighed in an even balance that God may know mine integrity.
Job 31:6

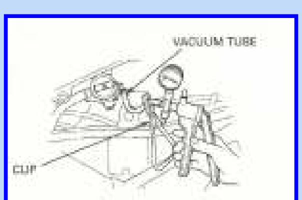
If you have more than one carburetor you want them to have an even balance. If they are out of balance the cylinders fight each other causing vibration.
No Balance equals no Integrity.

The best way to balance your carburetors is with some form of Mercury Manometer. The manometer measures intake manifold vacuum pressure. You want the pressure to be the same in all of the carburetor manifolds. In the carburetor manifolds, or on the front of the carburetors themselves, you will find small tubes that you can push a rubber hose over, or little threaded holes that you can thread a fitting into. You attach the hoses from the Manometer to these tubes or fittings.

With the fittings attached and the Manometer connected, start the engine. It is a good idea to have a large fan blowing on the engine to help cool it. With the engine warm, adjust all carburetors to read about the same manifold pressure. Normally, this is within 2 cm Hg of each other. Just get all the carburetors reading within 2 cm of each other. The Manometers are marked in 2 cm increments. Usually there are only three screws to mess with. You match carburetors 1 and 2 to each other, then 3 and 4 to each other, then match carburetors banks 1/2 and 3/4 to each other. When you are finished, blip the throttle several times and let the throttle snap shut each time. Now check and make sure all the cylinders are still matched. If you wanted to do this several times, it would not hurt!

One Cylinder out of Sync

All Carburetors are in Sync



Carburetor Banks 1 & 2 out of Sync

The adjusting screws are between the carburetors and hard to get to unless you have a Special Tool. Some carburetors do not require a special tool and can be adjusted with just a long screw driver. You have to work fast. Once the engine gets too hot, it will be hard to get good readings. If this happens, stop the engine, let it cool down then re-test. As always, a shop manual is very helpful.

Carburetor Tool in use

Carburetor Tool Tip

You really must have the Manometer if you have CV type carburetors. However, I have noticed that if the CV carburetors are in balance, the engine will rev up smoothly with no stumbling, when you whack the throttle open hard, from an idle, with the engine in neutral. If it stumbles, they are probably out of balance. Be careful and don't over-rev the engine. If you do this with an engine that has normal slide carburetors, the engine will die. This is normal. With too big of throttle opening at idle the vacuum disappears. With no vacuum, no gas is sucked from the carburetor. No gas... No run!

Speaking of gas. Many machines have a fuel petcock that is vacuum operated. Honda says "If the motorcycle is equipped with an automatic fuel valve, disconnect the vacuum tube from the intake manifold of the carburetor, draw vacuum and pinch the tube with a clip as shown." However, they don't bother to mention that you better plug that hole in the intake manifold or you will get some funny readings off that carburetor. I prefer to remove the gas tank and, after pugging that manifold hole, use a remote gas tank to feed fuel to all the carburetors while you perform the balancing tests. I use an old lawn mower gas tank but any tank with a hose will do. Just make sure the tank is made to hold gas. Milk jugs and things like that will fail and create a big time fire hazard.

Some carburetors have no Manometer fittings. If you have one of these, you will have to invent a way to make sure the throttle slides rise and fall together.

1. Take the air cleaner off and stick your fingers in two of the carburetors and feel the slides move (Engine off, I would hope!).
2. Listen to the slides hit the throttle stops.
3. Look at them. See which throttle slides move first.
4. Put pencils under the slides and see if all the pencils move the same as the throttle opens.

Lots of funny ways to do it. Maybe even try looking in the shop manual! If the carburetors are normal slide carburetors, that is, with a solid connection between the throttle cable and the throttle slide, you don't absolutely have to have a Mammometer... but it sure helps. They do make a Manometer that fits on the carburetor bell, but I'm not impressed with the one I have.

I prefer to use a mercury manometer. The reason they use mercury is because it is very heavy and usually will not be sucked into the engine. I have heard of that happening but it has never happened to me. It also helps dampen the intake pulses. If you run a search on the Internet you will find lots of plans for Manometers using different weight oils and the like. I have never tried to make one but I see no reason why you could not. You may have to put some kind of restrictors in the lines to the carburetors to dampen out the intake pulses. I have seen people use a set of vacuum gauges with success too.

I am surprised at the amount of E-Mail about my little Mammometer typo! I think I shall leave it just because it seems to bother so many men. Strange, no women have complained... only men! I mean really guys, it does kind of look like the right tool, doesn't it! But I don't want to disappoint anyone so here is a PDF file of a patent for a real Mammometer. There you go guys... have at it!

The Idle Circuit

"But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."
Matthew 12:36

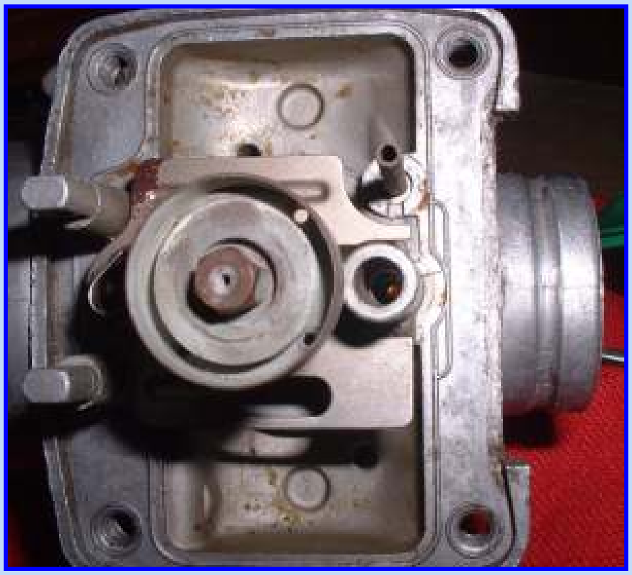
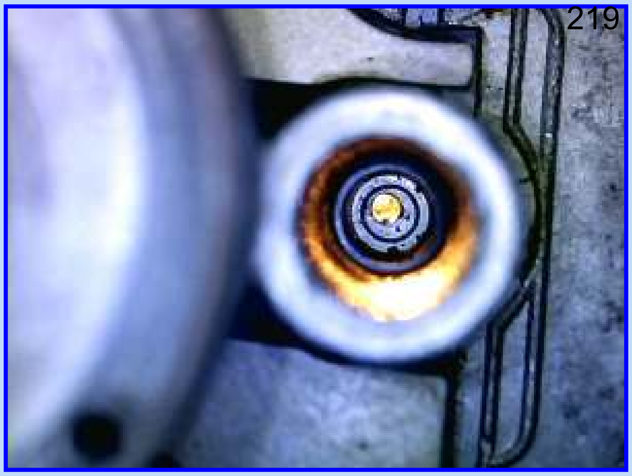
¶ Idle words seem to abound these days, especially in Government circles. I think they all are in for a big fatal surprise. Lots of Idle words are spoken about Carburetors too. People say just change this jet or that jet and boom, you get lots more horsepower and 100 miles per gallon. People believe this because there are so many different Jets available. In addition they are relatively cheap and easy to get to so people figure, "Why Not Change something." Motorcycle Factories spend many hours and lots of money to get the carburetion just right. Then "We the People" come along and try to make things better. We usually end up with a bike that does not run as good as it did before we started. However, not always. We should leave well enough along but you are going to do it anyway, aren't you?

In an effort to help you do this, and avoid that surprise, I will now bloviate about the different circuits in the Carburetor. I will cover Mechanical Slide Carburetors first. We will start with Idle Circuits.

The Idle Circuit controls the engine speed from Idle to about one quarter throttle. Humm, I guess that covers it... or maybe not! Things are a bit more complicated then what it might first seem. The Idle Circuit has an Idle jet, a screw that adjusts it and an idle stop screw of some kind to adjust the Engine Idle Speed. You set the Idle Adjuster Screw one and a half turns out from bottom. Then start the engine, let it get warm and adjust the Idle Speed with the Throttle Stop Screw till you get the lowest idle. Then turn the Idle Adjuster Screw in or out till you get the best idle. Then do it all again until you get the smoothest Idle at the idle speed you want.

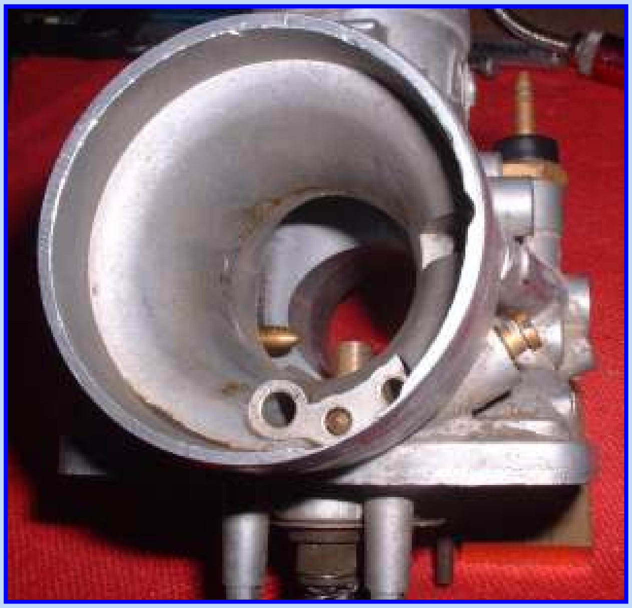


Throttle Closed

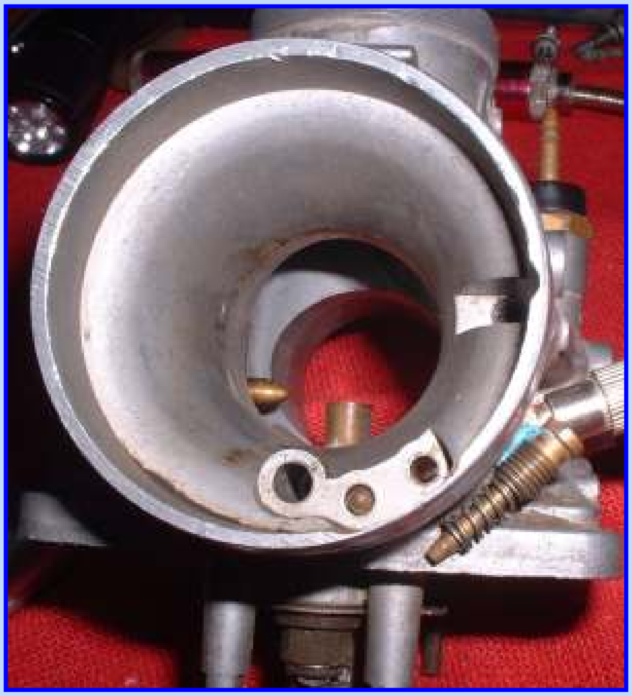


Throttle Quarter Open

As you can see above, there is a small Idle Port in the throat of the Carburetor. This port is controlled by the Idle Adjuster Screw. As the throttle opens, The Throttle Slide uncovers another Idle Port. This second port has a straight shot from the Idle Jet to the throat of the Carburetor. This helps smooth the transition to the next Carburetor Circuit. Most Throttle Slide Carburetors have these two ports. Some Carburetors have three Idle Ports. I have only seen three ports on Constant Velocity type Carburetors. Most Idle Jets Screw in to the Carburetor. Unfortunately, I'm starting to see Idle Jets that are pressed in and are not replaceable in some of the newer Carburetors.



Idle Jet Installed



Idle Jet Out

trusty Microscope

Now there are two ways the fuel mixture is mixed before it leaves the idle ports and goes into the engine. In the first and most common way, air is taken from the front, air cleaner side, of the carburetor. Sometimes called the Carburetor Bell. Then the air is mixed with the fuel from the Idle Jet. It then goes out through the idle port(s). In other words, the amount of air in the air/fuel mix is adjusted by the Idle Adjustment Screw. This type of Idle Adjustment is used on Carburetors that go on both Two-Stroke and Four-Stroke engines.

Air Adjust Idle Screw 2

The second way is for fuel to be taken from the Idle Jet and channeled directly into the Idle Port, in front of the Carburetor Slide, on the engine side of the Carburetor. Here, the Idle Jet Adjuster Screw controls the amount of fuel that is introduced to the Carburetor Venturi. Some people have called Carburetors that use this type of Idle Jet adjustment "Four-Stroke Carburetors". While I have never seen a Two-Stroke engine use this type of Carburetor, I see no reason why you could not use one on a Two-Stroke.

Fuel Adjust Idle Screw 1

Fuel Adjust Idle Screw 2

Air Adjust and Fuel Adjust Idle Screws

Sectioned Idle Jet
About 3/4"/ 19 mm long
That is one little, tiny, jet!

The best Air/Fuel Ratio, for a motorcycle engine, is around 14.7 parts air to one part fuel. The adjuster screws reflect this. If you look at the Air Adjuster screw you will see it is a lot more gross than the Fuel Adjuster Screw which is a lot more precise.

You probably will not need to change the Idle Jet much. If you do want to change the Idle Jet you are in luck. (????) There are dozens of Idle Jet sizes. You will need to change the Idle Jet to the desired size. Adjust the Idle Screw and set the idle speed. Then take a new or cleaned spark plug and put it in the engine. Run the engine at an idle long enough to color the plug. Don't overheat the engine. You want a good idle, a smooth transition past quarter throttle and good spark plug color. Don't like the color of the spark plug? Can't get it to idle good? Pick a different Idle Jet and do it all over again.

§ On to Throttle Slides §

Top

Throttle Slide

¶ Throttle Slides, sometimes called Throttle Valves, control the mixture from Idle to about 35% open. Yeah, I know, the Idle Circuit is supposed to control that. Well, it does and so does the Throttle Slide. Think of it as a relay race. As the racers on the different teams approach each other they sort of overlap so there is a smooth transition, of the baton, from one runner to the other. So it is with the Carburetor Circuits. We want a smooth transition from one Circuit of the Carburetor to another. Other then the cut out size, the slides can have a bevel cut out for left or right throttle stop adjustment. On some racing Carburetors there are no idle bevel cut out.

Throttle Slide Cutaway

Throttle Slide

The Throttle slide has a cut out on the inlet, Air Cleaner, side of the Carburetor Throat. This cut out makes the fuel mixture leaner or richer. Most people never change the Throttle Slide because the Slide is somewhat pricey, ranging from $50.00 to $80.00 and up. Also, I suspect most people don't even know that the Slide changes the fuel mixture. They think it just controls the throttle opening which, of course, it does in addition to controlling the just off Idle fuel mixture.

Come to think about it, in the last 50 years, I may have had about a million Carburetor Slides out of a million different Carburetors in my grimy little hands. I can't remember ever replacing one. Not even once. If you are smart enough to figure out that you need a 3.0 slide instead of the 2.5 slide you now have and you replace it AND the engine now runs better. Well, you are way above my pay grade. Why are you even reading this?

§ On to Needle Jet §

Top

Needle Jet

The Needle Jet is located in the center of the Carburetor. The Jet Needle enters into the top of the Needle Jet and the Main Jet screws into the bottom. Poor, little Needle Jet. It sort of gets shafted and screwed at the same time. Needle Jets controls the fuel mixture from 15% to 60% open throttle. There seems to be three basic styles of Needle Jet.

1. Mikuni Primary style
2. Mikuni Bleed style
3. Keihin style

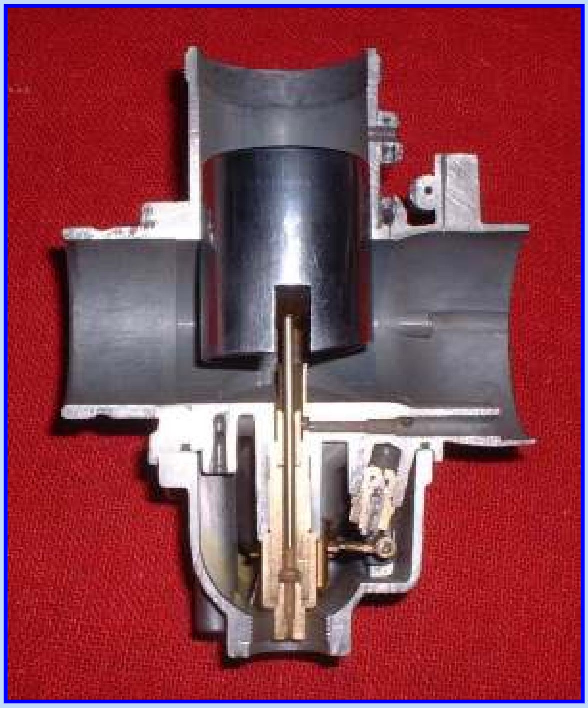
The Mikuni Primary style seems to be the most common. At least most all of the Carburetors I have worked on and have lying around are of this style. Next comes the Keihin style and then the Mikuni Bleed style. I am sure there are lots more styles out there but these seem to be the most common. Another thing they all have in common is that they all use an air bleed. Also, for the most part, they come in different sizes. At least the Mikunis do. I'm not totally sure about the Keihins. I haven't found any numbers on them.

Mikuni Primary Style

Keihin Style

Mikuni Bleed Style

If you look at the example below you will see the Primary style Needle Jet. that there is a round tube pressed into the top of the Needle Jet. Also notice there is a hole cut into one side of the Needle Jet. This hole is an air bleed from the Air Cleaner side of the Carburetor. It can just be a clear passage to the air in the Carburetor Bell or there can be an Air Jet screwed into that passage.



Needle Jet Center Tube

Needle Jet 1

The Needle jets are installed in the Carburetor in one of two ways. Both the Mikuni Primary and Bleed type Needle Jets are put in through the throat of the Carburetor and are held in the proper position by a pin and locked in position but the Main Jet and a washer of some kind. The Keihin type Needle Jet is held in by screwing the Needle Jet into the Carburetor. The Main Jet then screws into the bottom of the Needle Jet.

I'm sure there are other different Needle Jet styles but this probably covers 95 % of what is out there.

Jet Needle

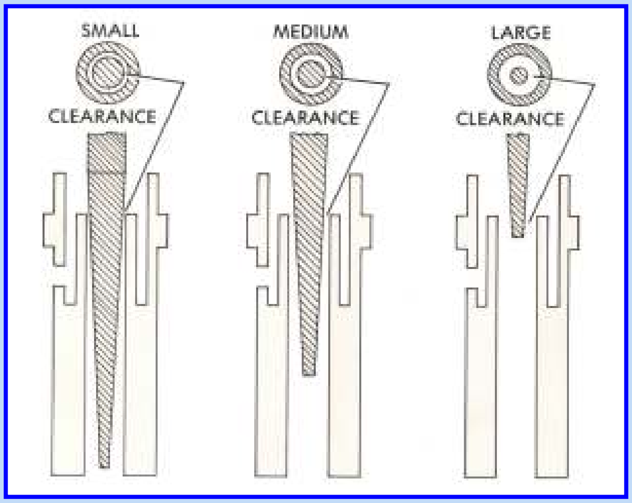
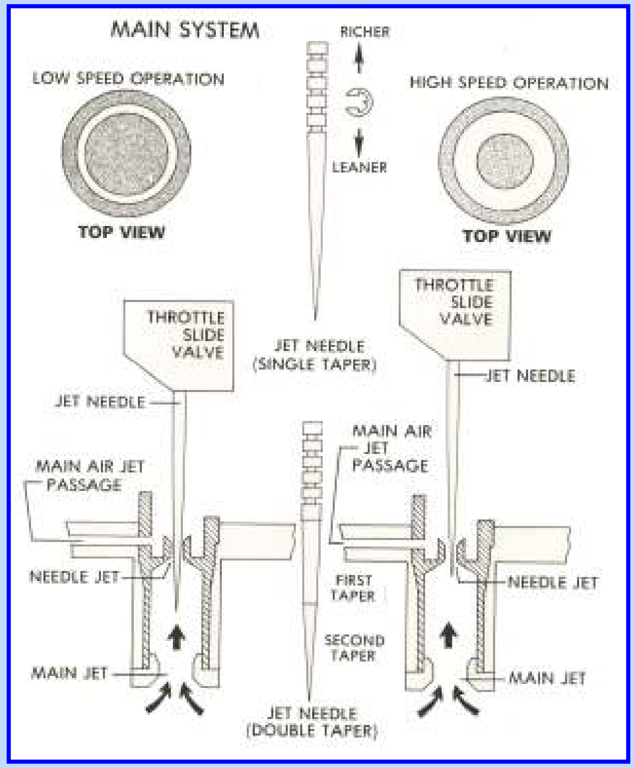
Jet Needles. Probably the most useful jet of all, at least to your average motorcycle tuner. The Jet Needle rides in the throttle slide. Jet Needles Come in lots of different sizes but the real beauty of the Jet Needle is it's adjustability. There is a clip and five little grooves that move the Jet Needle up (richer) or down (leaner) in the Needle Jet. Bad news is that many newer bikes have only one clip position. If you have a non-adjustable type, measure it and you may be able to get a replacement of the same size but with the five grooves. Another way is to place a small washer under the Jet Needle clip to richen the mixture. If you want to lean the mixture I guess you are out of luck. However, you probably will want to richen things up, so you should be OK.

The Jet Needle is held in the Throttle Side by a lot of different ways. Clips holding the Jet Needle to the slide seem to be popular. Also a little screw or even a plate held in by the throttle spring work good too.

Jet Needle clip



No Clip Needle Jets



Different Jet Needle Retainers

Jet Needles can be a simple taper or a be tapered in several stages. It controls the fuel mixture from about 20 % to 80 %. Jet Needles are easy to change, just move the clip. If you move the clip to a higher groove you lower the needle in the Needle Jet and make the mixture leaner. If you move the clip to a lower groove you raise the needle in the Needle Jet and make the mixture richer. Jet Needles cost around five dollars so you can afford to experiment with different sizes. All in all a very handy jet.

Main Jet

¶ Main jets control the top two thirds to full throttle more or less. Main Jets are easy to change. They are probably the second most useful jet in the carburetor after the Jet Needle. Many Carburetors have a cap covering them so you can easily replace them without pulling the Carburetor off the engine. They can usually be removed with either a small screwdriver or a small wrench. Main Jets can be made of Brass or Plastic.

Carburetor Floats

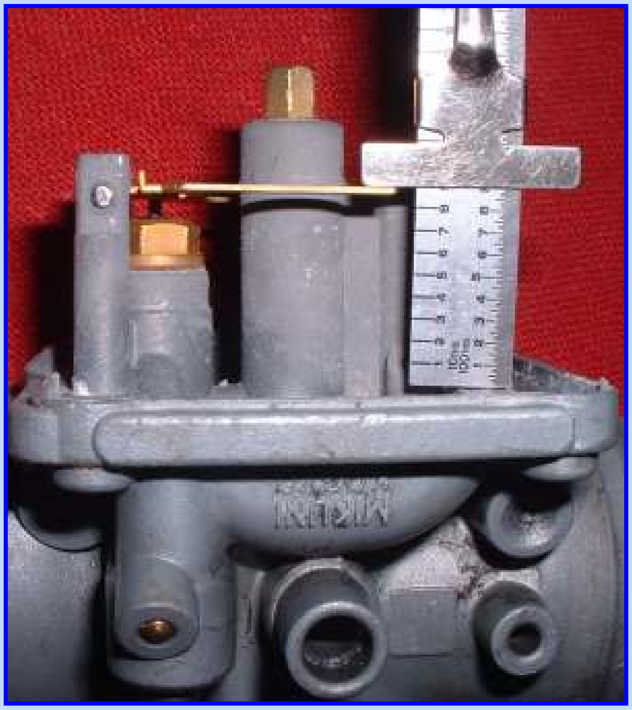
¶Carburetor Floats. They... well... Ah... float. Floats can be made out of metal or plastic or both. Back in the day they made them out of cork. Your Shop Manual will give you the correct height for each Carburetor. The Shop Manual will also tell you if you measure the Float height with or without the gasket. If you do not drain your Carburetors for winter you run the risk of water in your fuel freezing and crushing your Floats. Nothing like Gasohol to suck in that water. Think of it as the government's giving you one more reason to Winterize your engines.

Floats can be one piece or two piece. The theory being two piece Floats help keep a more accurate level when accelerating, decelerating and cornering.

One Piece Float

Two Piece Float



Find the float height specification in your shop manual. If it specifies measuring with the Float Bowel gasket, put it on. If not, leave it off. Turn the carb over and measure the distance from the Carburetor surface to the top of the float. I usually put a piece of tubing on the fuel inlet and very, very, gently blow in some air. With one finger very slowly raise the float. When you feel the air just start to release That is the float height. Measure that height and compare it to your Float height specification. Bend the Float Tang up or down to match that specification.

If you have double Floats you usually just make sure the Float lever is parallel with the Carburetor gasket surface. As always, check your Shop Manual.

2. Rubber Tip

Steel Tip Needle

Needle and Seats also come in different flow sizes. There are an astounding number of different Fuel Valve Needles. You would think four or five types would do it but no. Rubber Tip, Steel Tip and maybe a big one and a little one for more or less fuel flow but no. There must be a reason for so many seemingly similar Needles. However, if there is, I sure don't know what it would be. Maybe it is just to sell more parts, you think?

1.5 & 2.0 Needle Seats

Different Needles

Needle Clipped to Seat

I only know of one really innovative Fuel Valve. The Grose-Jet. I have only used it on one or two Carburetors and they worked just fine. You can still get them for some Carburetors but they are getting hard to find. The company who made them is still around but I don't know if they are still making them.

Grose-Jet 2

About the only thing you need to watch for on Jet Needles is wear on the end of the Needle. When you see the ring it is time to replace them. Another thing to remember is that very small bits of rust or dirt, from a dirty gas tank, can get caught on the seat of the Fuel Valve. This makes the Carburetor over flow. If this happens, take a plastic hammer or the plastic handle end of a screw driver and tap the Carburetor sharply. This will dislodge the obstruction and allow the Needle to seal against the seat. If, after tapping the Carburetor, it still leaks you need a new Needle & Seat.

¶ Air Jets control the air that goes into the Needle Jet's air bleed. Air Jets come in three flavors.

1. Screw-in Air Jet.
2. Pressed-in Air Jet.
3. No Air Jet.

Air Jets control roughly the same range as the Main Jet. Sort of fine tunes the Main Jet. I doubt that you will be changing it much but you might.

§ Carburetor Tuning §

Top

Carburetor Tuning

¶ OK, the drill is this. Make sure the engine is at normal operating temperature, not too hot or too cold. Now, with a new or very clean spark plug, run the engine, at the throttle position you want to test. Run the engine for a mile or two on a flat road. Now kill the ignition, chop the throttle (turn it off!), pull the clutch in and coast to a stop. Take the spark plug out and look at it. Does it read rich, normal or lean? Now comes the fun stuff. If you are not happy with the spark plug reading or how the engine performed you need to change a jet. You want smooth running in all throttle positions, with good plug color.

To help figure out which jet, throttle position is most important. Put a piece of masking tape around the throttle housing and a small piece on the throttle grip it's self. With the throttle shut, make coinciding marks on both pieces of tape. Now open the throttle wide open. Make another mark on the throttle housing matching the one you already made on the grip. Measure the distance between idle and full throttle. Divide that distance in quarters and put more marks on the tape. Now you can tell at what throttle settings the problem is occurring.

Now all this is real phony baloney as far as preciseness is concerned. Don't waste your time getting minute of arc accuracy although I suppose it would not hurt. Remember everything overlaps. You just want to know the general area or throttle position where the problem lies. Then adjust the jet(s) that control that area. Then Retest.

This can be a great (?) way to spend your yearly two week vacation. I once watched a friend do exactly that. He put a gigantic Mikuni Carburetor on a 350cc Honda single. It came pre-set supposedly. That was a joke. It ran as smooth as stock when he finished. No extra power but it was one BIG Carburetor. I told him it would not get him any extra power but no one ever listens to me. I'm used to it.

Yeah, I know, this might take forever... or not! Who knows. Some people get it on the very first try but not me. The factories have Dynamometers and other fancy stuff. This makes everything a lot easier, not to mention safer. Roaring down the road at 120 MPH trying to get a Main Jet reading is not as fun as it might first appear.

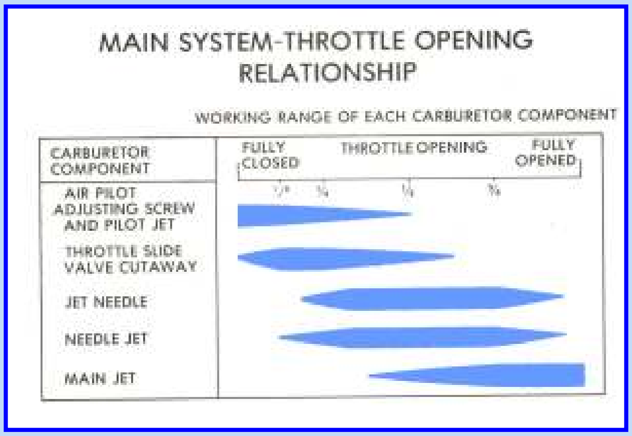
Another thing to consider is the fact that engines change over time as their parts wear and engine compression changes. As the engine compression goes down, over time and miles, the suction or vacuum in the Carburetor Venturi is less then it was when the engine was new. Because there is less suction there tends to be less fuel mixture pulled into the engine so the engine may run a bit lean. The cure is bigger (Richer) jets. This can happen in reverse when you put on a big bore kit. The bigger engine can suck too much fuel mixture making the engine run rich. Smaller (Leaner) jets cure this.

Make sure the engine is a normal operating temperature. If the engine is too hot or too cold it will run funny. If you just need a touch more richness try running the fuel level at the highest level. Usually the float level specifications have a plus/minus range. If the level is just a bit higher it is easier for the engine vacuum to suck in the fuel. Same with if it is a bit lower, it will be harder to suck in the fuel. This effect is very, very, minimal but might be useful to you.



Basically, if the engine is not running right, it is running either too rich or too lean. Here are some vague, but perhaps useful things to look for.

Fuel mixture is too rich.

1. Engine noise is dull and intermittent
2. Things get worse when choke or enrichener is turned on.
3. Things get worse when engine gets hot.
4. If you remove the air cleaner, things get somewhat better.
5. Exhaust fumes are heavy.
6. Spark plug is fouled black, dry and sooty.

Fuel mixture is too lean.

1. Engine gets over heated.
2. Things improves when choke or enrichener is turned on.
3. Acceleration is poor.
4. Spark plug is whitish or burned.
5. Engine Speed fluctuates. Noticeable Lack of power.

Start Mixture Enrichment Circuit

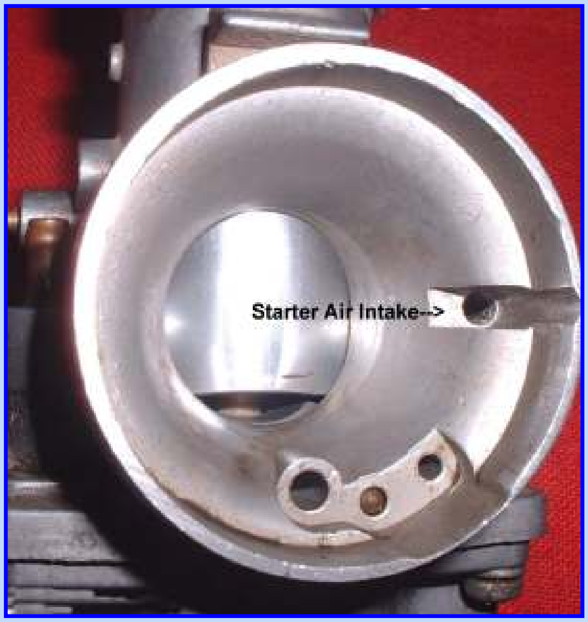
Mixture Enrichener Circuit

¶ A cold engine does not vaporize fuel well. Gasoline will ony burn when it is vaporized. Therefore, you have to put in a larger amount of raw gas then normal, so enough of it will vaporize. Then it will be able to burn and start the engine.

Mikuni Carburetors do this with a Mixture Enrichement Circuit. This circuit takes fuel from the float bowl, air from the front of the Carburetor and funnels it into the front of the Carburetor. For this Mixture Enrichment Circuit to work the Throttle Slide MUST be closed. This allows for a high vacuum to be present. If you open the throttle it lessens the vacuum considerably. This stops the Mixture Enrichement Circuit from working. The Mixture Enrichement Circuit is activated by a plunger.

Most Mixture Enrichement Circuits plungers are activated in one of three ways.



1. Plunger Knob
2. Plunger Lever
3. Plunger Cable

Plunger Knob Type

Plunger Lever Type

Plunger Cable Type

The plunger is raised. Vacuum from the front of the Carburetor pulls air, from the rear of the Carburetor. It mixes that air with fuel coming through a small, pressed in, jet in the bottom of the Carburetor Float Bowl. The fuel goes from that jet through a passage in the Float Bowl. Flows up a tube and out the Plunger orifice. Then the fuel/air mixture goes through a passage to the front of the Carburetor and into the engine.

Other Carburetor Manufacturers use a different way of getting there. If you look closely you will see the Bing uses a cable operated, round piece of metal to do the same thing the plunger does. Cover and uncover the Starter Jet Port. One way or another they all end up at the same place. We have to have more gas going in to get a cold engine started.

Carburetor Choke Plates

¶ When you choke something it means you restrict the air coming in. On a Carburetor we do this with a plate of some kind that drops down and restricts the air coming into the engine. The thing is this. As the Electric Starter or Kick Starter cranks the engine, the engine is sucking away (Vacuum) and instead of sucking air, which is restricted (Choked) it starts sucking extra fuel from the Needle Jet and the Idle Jet Port. That extra fuel enables the engine to start. I have only seen Choke Plates come in two styles.

1. Guillotine Style
2. Plate Style

Guillotine Style Choke

Some Plate Chokes are spring loaded. The spring keeps them closed. The lever pushes them open. One thing to remember on Spring Loaded Plate Chokes. If the spring breaks, the Choke does not work right. Trouble is, it is not always obvious the spring is broken. So the Choke is not working and you crank and crank, overheat the very expensive starter and burn it out. If you think the Choke is on but the engine will not start, feel the Choke Lever with your hand and make sure the spring is not broken.

Choke Plate

Choke Plate Levers

Some Choke Plates, not all, have little, spring loaded doors in the plate. This is because some engines need a bit more air if the vacuum gets too high in the Carburetor throat.

Back in the day there were some Amal Carburetors that had the choke (Air Valve) inside the Throttle Slide. You will probably never run across one of these Chokes. Curiously enough you can still buy a brand new Monobloc Carburetor from Amal. About £134.00 British Pounds or about $200.00 USA dollars. As of March, 2015.

Float Tickler

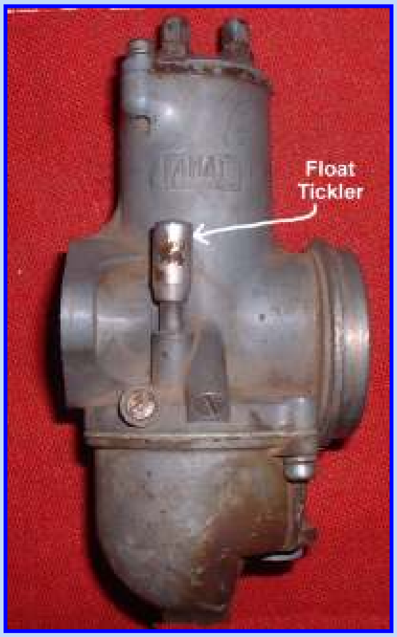
¶ You can't get a much simpler starter enriching device then a Float Tickler. Simply put, it holds the Float down until the open fuel valve(s) flood gas down the throat of the Carburetor. Push 'em down with your thumb till your thumb is wet with gas, quarter throttle, stomp that kick starter like Godzilla stomped Tokyo and start that puppy.

Back in the day, 1960s, 1970s, or there abouts. My 750 Norton Atlas always started first kick when I tickled those carbs. I have fond memories of Float Ticklers. They always worked great for me. My Norton had a choke but I never used it. You will probably never run into them but now you know what they are.



Story time. 1966, I'm riding my Trail-90 up a lonesome trail near the top of Mill Creek Canyon in the Wasatch Mountains by Salt Lake City, Utah. I come around a bend in the trail and there sits a very tired man. I stop, say hi and ask what happened. He says he slipped off the rather narrow tail and rolled his 650cc BSA Twin down about 50 feet from the side of the trail. Says it died and he can't get it started. He'd been kicking on it for over an hour. I say "Want me to try to start it?" He says go for it.

So I climb down after asking what was his normal starting drill. He says it is flooded but he usually floods it with the Float Ticklers, quarter throttle, and kick. I open the throttles wide open and kick it maybe six or eight times to clear it. then I push the ticklers till my thumbs get wet with gas and kick. Bang, pop, bang, bang, bang and off it goes. He was very excited!
We pushed it, together, wheel spinning, up the bank and then ran it out of the forest to the road. He gave me a nice ride on the 650 as a reward. It was great! Lots more power then my 90.

About a year later my family was visiting my older sister and her boy friend was storing his 750 Norton in her back yard. She said to go ahead, try to start it but it took a "REAL MAN" to start such a big bike. She never thought I would be able to start it. After all, I was only 16. Just a stupid kid, right? I got it lit with one, count 'em, one kick. Doubt me will you. Did I mentioned I always liked Float Ticklers?

Accelerator Pump

¶ When you open the throttle the vacuum in the Carburetor throat goes away. As the engine speeds up the velocity of the air through the Venturi of the carburetor goes up sucking gas out of the Needle Jet and Main Jet. There is a momentary lag in air speed that can result in a lean condition. If you add more fuel during this speed lag, it prevents this lean condition. The Accelerator Pump pumps in this needed extra fuel.

The Accelerator Pump is activated by the Throttle Linkage. This linkage pushes the Accelerator Pump Diaphragm through a rod connected to the Diaphragm. A spring pushes the Diaphragm. This causes a chamber below the Diaphragm to fill with gas, from the float bowl, through a one-way valve (first). When the throttle is opened, the throttle linkage pushes the Diaphragm rod. The rod pushes the Diaphragm against the spring forcing gas through another one-way (Second) and through the Accelerator Pump Orifice. Now that Orifice looks to me like you can change it out to a different size if you could get a different size, which you can't!

Deceleration Air Valve

¶ Your running along, doing OK and you shut off the throttle for a Stop sign and the exhaust goes pop, pop, and bang. Noisy and irritating. With the EPA pushing leaner and leaner jetting this popping was getting to be a real problem. The popping is caused by a lean condition in the exhaust. The cure is to add just a bit more fuel while the throttle is closed. We do this with an Air-Cut Out Valve. I like to call them a Deceleration Air Valve.

Under normal running conditions the two Deceleration Air Jets are both allowing air to go to the idle jet ports(s). When you close the throttle a high vacuum is produced in front of the throttle slide. This vacuum sucks the Deceleration Valve diaphragm open causing it to block air from the top (# 1) Deceleration Air Jet. Air is still drawn from the lower (# 2) Deceleration Air Jet. This makes the mixture coming from the idle ports richer and that stops the back fire in the exhaust.

Deceleration Diaphragm

Deceleration Diaphragm Plunger

Deceleration Diaphragm, Spring and Cover

In normal running there are two Deceleration Air passages. The top, # 1, Deceleration Air Jet is bigger then the lower, # 2, Deceleration Air Jet. In this example, the biggest Jet Drill I was able to put in the # 1 Air Jet was a # 64 drill (.036"). The biggest Jet Drill I could get into the # 2 Air Jet was a # 77 (.018"). The # 1 Air Jet is about 75 % bigger, in area, then the # 2 Air

Jet. That means when you cut out the # 1 Air jet, you have cut out a lot of air.

Below I put one tiny copper wire in the # 1 and # 2 Decelerator Air Jet ports and the Diaphragm Vacuum port to show you where they are.

These Air Jets and passages usually stay clear and trouble free. However, the Diaphragm plug can corrode to the Carburetor body or the Diaphragm its self can develop a hole. Some people say to plug the Deceleration Air Valve with Silicon Seal but I really don't see a need. If it is working just leave it alone.

PUMPER CARBURETORS

Pumper carbs, also called Diaphragm or Pressure Pulse Carburetors, are used primarily on chain saws, weed eaters and other small engines. The unique thing about pumper carbs is that they can work in any position because they have no float bowel and they do have a fuel pump. This is handy for an engine that is used in a lot of different positions, like a chain saw. They were used a lot on Go-Kart engines too.

Pumper carbs were also used a lot in snowmobiles in the 1960s and 70s, but have now been pretty much fazed out and replaced by regular float bowel carbs. I have never seen one on a stock motorcycle but I have seen people use them as a replacement carb. In 1969-1971 I ran across a number of articles in several different motorcycle magazines about adapting a pumper carb to a motorcycle. The people writing these articles felt there were many advantages to these carbs, especially when used to replace the British Amal carbs used on Triumphs and BSAs. Apparently no one else did, because you just don't hear of anyone using them on motorcycle engines anymore.

The reason they liked pumper carbs is this. Float bowel carbs use a venturi, a narrowing of the carb throat, to create a vacuum above the main and idle jet openings in the carb throat. This sucks fuel out of the float bowel and mixes it with air. The pumper carb uses a fuel pump to push the fuel through the jet passages and into the throat of the carb, to mix with the air. The pumper carb, they said, has no venturi and is straight all the way through. The fuel pump on the pumper carb can really push through the fuel to a fuel hungery engine. This made for easier starting and better mid-range performance. Plus, because of the hi and low speed adjustment needles, you can easily tune the carb for your particular engine.

That's the theory, anyway. However, I see a venturi in all the pumper carbs ! The way I understand it, the pumper carb uses the vacuum at the venturi to control when the fuel, under pressure, enters the carb throat. The float bowel carb uses the vacuum in the venturi to suck the fuel from the float bowel up into the carb throat.

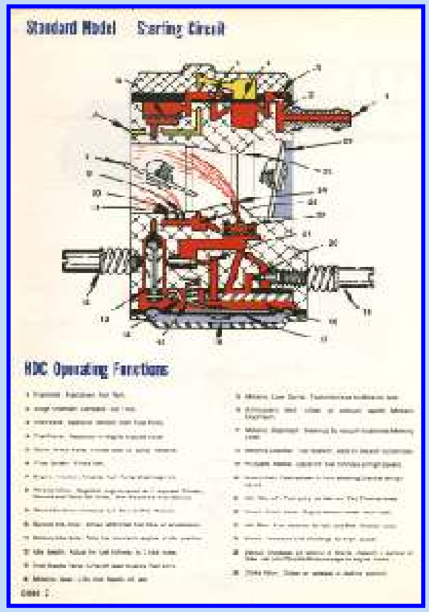
If you really want to play with one I imagine You could still get them as I think they are still used in two stroke Ultra-Light airplane engines. You will have to run a line from the intake manifold, crankcase, or exhaust pipe to get a vacuum pulse to run the pump. Also, you must prime the engine when you first start it, to get the pump going. After that, you start it normally, with the choke. A fuel return line, from the carb to the fuel tank, may be needed too. I've never run one on a motorcycle, just snowmobiles, chain saws and weed eaters. Now-a-days I make every effort to avoid working on them at all !

They were made by McCulloch (out of busness), Tillotson, and Walbro.

You adjust them by running them at full throttle and turning the high speed needle in and out till it runs best. Same for the idle. Let it idle and turn the slow speed needle in and out till it runs it's best. The high and low speed needle adjustments will effect each other a bit. In other words, richen the low speed and it will also richen the high speed just a bit, and visa versa. A lot of the newer pumper carbs don't have an adjustable high speed jet, but a fixed one. Big brother wants us to buy a new engine, not make the old one run better !

Pumper carbs seem to have one rather major problem, sort of. You never know if the carb you rebuild will work ! You can only rebuild them once or twice or so. As far as I can tell, something breaks down internally. Once this happens, they just will not adjust right. One Lumber Jack told me he only rebuilds the carb on his #1 working chain saw twice then he tosses the carb and buys a new one. I think he has the right idea. Trouble is there are a bizzilon different sizes and types. If you have a bunch of carbs in stock you can throw one on and away you go. However, if you don't, you end up buying a carb kit... it doesn't work, and then you buy a carb. This isn't so bad with a $60.00 carb, but with a $150.00 snowmobile carb (times two !) things can get out of hand, plus you're out the cost of a rebuild kit.

I once pulled out all the stops, trying to make one of these carbs, off a snowmobile, work. I pulled out all the Welsh plugs and everything. I carefully cleaned and cleaned and cleaned. It just would not work. Everything looked great, I used all new parts but, it would not adjust right. Engine ran lousy, and yes, I checked seals, ignition timing, compression... everything. The problem was those lousy carbs ! I even called the pumper carb manufacturer. Took forever to finally get to the department that designed the carb. I actually talked to a guy who claimed to be one of the people who designed the carb in question. After talking with him for a few minutes it slowly dawned on me that this guy didn't know squat.



I had told the customer he needed new carbs, but he kept saying "try to make the old ones work." He said to stop at $100.00 of labor. Well, I charged him the $100 but I put in about $400 worth of labor... and nothing worked ! Just like I said it would. No one ever listens. OK... I give up !

In the hopes that maybe you will fair better then I, here is a reprint of some literature I got from Walbro Carbs. This pumper carb is off a is off a small chain saw engine. You will notice this one DOES have a venturi. Then there is some literature on a Tillotson Carb carb off a snowmobile engine. This one has a venturi too.

Power Valves

Most if not all the two stroke race bikes sold now-a-days have a power valve in the exhaust port. A power valve is just a piece of metal that moves down and covers part of exhaust port making it smaller. Big ports mean big horsepower, but they also mean narrow power band. By making the port smaller, the power valve helps make the power band wider. It does this by keeping more of the fuel mixture in the cylinder, and out of the exhaust pipe, at lower RPM.

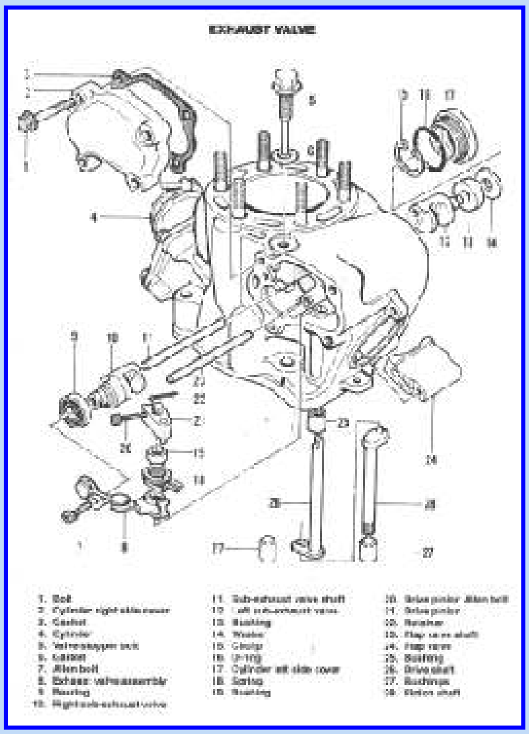
Honda CR250 Powervalve Open.

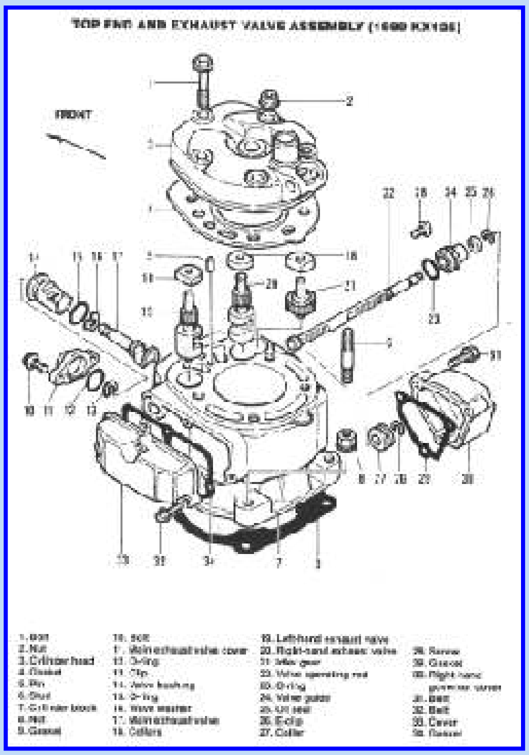
Honda CR250 Powervalve Closed.

Honda CR250 Powervalve Open.

Honda CR250 Powervalve Closed.

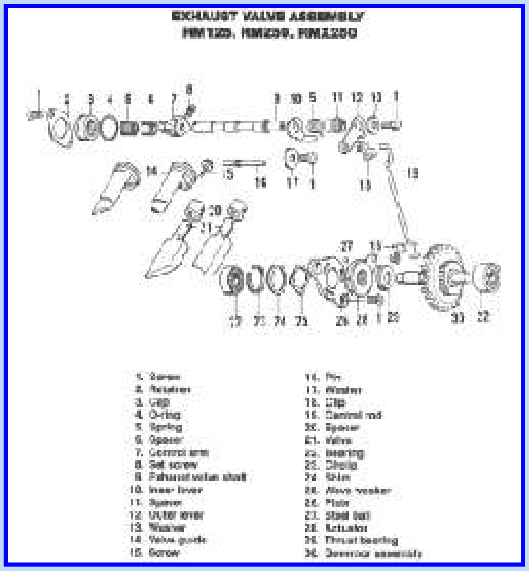
The power valve should be closed at Low RPM and Open at High RPM. The Power Valve does this with centrifugal weights (Governor) that over come spring pressure and move the Power Valve Linkage. The linkages usually are spring loaded. This is to close them at low RPM. Each manufacturer has a different way of moving the power valve. Everyone has different linkages, different styles of Governor, and different ways of adjusting them. Check your Shop Manual !





In general, the big thing to remember on power valves is that they are closed when the engine is off. That is when you adjust them. In the closed position. On Hondas and Yamahas there usually is a small hole in the cylinder and a hole or groove in the linkage arm. Adjustment is done by putting a rod, of the right size, in both holes, locking the power valve closed. Now loosen the adjusting bolt on the linkage arm, then tighten it. With Kawasakis you must align the punch marks on the exhaust valve gears with grooves on the Valve Operating Rod. On Suzukis there's a spring to set preload on (one turn). this ensures the exhaust valve returns to closed when the Governor releases pressure on it. Power Valves have a lot of parts in them. When you first disassemble them for cleaning a shop manual will be invaluable.

Also remember that these things require regular maintenance to remove carbon. On most Race bikes that means cleaning and readjusting them every seven (7) to twelve (12) hours of running.



If you have a steel cylinder liner, and not a plated cylinder, you can bore the cylinder to a bigger oversize. If you do so, you will need to grind the Power Valve a bit so it will not hit the new, oversized piston.

MOTORCYCLE REED VALVES

Reed Valves are simply a one way valve. They let air or liquid pass one way and not the other. We usually see them in the intake track of a two stroke engine. When the piston of a two stroke engine goes down it compresses the fuel mixture in the crankcase and this can push some of the mixture back out the carburetor. A Reed Valve in the carb manifold will let the fuel mixture in but not out. This allows bigger ports be used.

Reed Valves can be found on Four Stroke engines too, such as the 1982 XR500 Honda. This was to help the engine carburetion. I guess it was running too rich. I read somewhere that they call this "Intake Reversion". Supposedly the theory was that because of big cam lifts and long cam timing duration, the fuel mixture got too rich. Seems it got blown back out through the carburetor and then sucked in again. Going through the carburetor twice makes the mixture too rich. I'm not to sure how much of a problem this actually was but I guess Honda figured a Reed Valve would help.

Cylinder with no Reeds.

Reed Valve Cylinder.

Most Reed Valves will have four petals but I've seen as few as one (you've got to have at least one, well duh!) and as many as eight. Technically, I suppose there's no limit to the number. Motorcycle engines usually have four or six petals, outboard engines can have eight and small chain saws one. The stock ones are usually made out of steel. High performance ones can be made out of plastic or who knows what. They also have a curved metal plate screwed to the reed cage that limits or stops how far they can open. This prevents the reed from bending too much and breaking off.

If a reed is broken or stuck closed the bike will be very hard to start if it will start at all. They are normally quite reliable... at least I haven't run across very many broken ones.

Some fuel pumps and carburetors also use what is essentially a Reed Valve to control the fuel through the pump or carb. This reed is usually a rubber one and very thin. Pumper carbs also used these type of valves. You probably will not run into this type of Reed Valve on motorcycle engines, but you never know!

AIR CLEANERS

The LORD rewarded me according to my righteousness: according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me." 2 Samuel 22:21

Air cleaners are a real necessity. You are right to clean them and clean them often. You will be recompensed with long engine life for your righteous efforts ! I once read a test on how much dirt was needed to ruin an engine. It was almost nothing. Seems the dirt gets imbedded in the soft aluminum of the piston and then just grinds away like sandpaper. Always run your bike with the air cleaner installed.

Most motorcycle air cleaners are one of three types. Oiled foam, oiled fabric, and dry paper.

Oiled foam is very popular with dirt bikes. On Oiled Foam filters the real filter is the oil. The foam is only a support for the oil. Sort of like a skeleton. You must oil the foam on these filters. If you do not, the filter will not work ! To clean them, rinse in solvent several times or until clean. Then ring them out, and let them dry. Lastly, put on a fair amount of oil and work the oil into the foam with your hands. You can buy special air filter oil or use regular 30w engine oil. 90w gear oil also works good. Check your shop manual. Some people say to dip the filter in the oil and then squeeze out the excess. This works, but the engine will usually run quite a bit rich for up to an hour or so, as the excess oil is pulled out of the filter, and into the engine. To avoid this, I drip a good quantity of oil all over the foam, inside, outside, and on the edges. Then, I work the oil in with my fingers and add some more till all parts of the filter are coated with oil. Sometimes, there is a coarser foam filter on the outside of the fine foam filter, clean and re-oil it the same as the fine foam filter. As you clean the foam, rub it somewhat roughly. If the foam easily rips or falls apart, get a new one. This type of filter will just fall apart with age. Ozone in the air, I guess. Anyway, if it easily rips, get a new one.

Fabric filters, have a surgical type of fabric inside a metal mesh. They work very well and seem to flow a lot of air. They use a special oil you get from the air filter maker (K&N). Clean them with soap and water, let dry, and then re-oil. With care, they last quite a while.

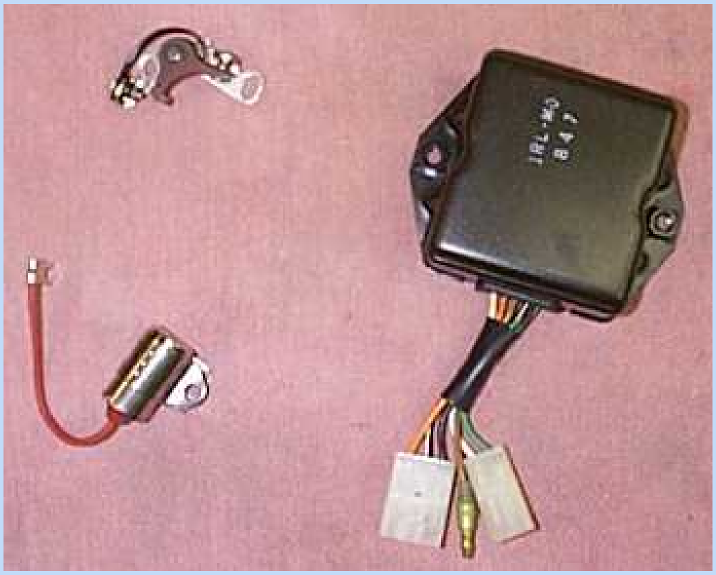
Paper filter are used on a lot of street motorcycles. They work good when new and clean. If they get wet, they stop passing air. When they dry out, they usually start working again, but don't flow air as well as before getting wet. The water seems to stick the paper fibers together hurting the air flow. If the bike has been sitting a long time, the paper filters absorb water from the air and this starts to plug them up. While you can clean them somewhat by blowing with compressed air the only real way to clean them is to replace them with a new one. These are cheap to make and you would think to replace, but most times the big manufacturers want a lot of money for a new paper filter. If you can find them, after market paper air filters work good, but they don't always make them for all the models of motorcycle out there. A cheaper alternative might be a foam or fabric air filter.

If you have an old bike and can't find an air filter for it, you can often make a copy of the original with air filter foam sheets (12"x16"x5/8"), like the one I've been cutting on to the left. Uni sells them, and the price, about $15.00, isn't bad at all. I cut out the foam pieces I want and glue them together with hot glue and a Hot glue gun. Just remember to oil them, like all foam filters.

You have to be careful changing air filter types on modern motorcycles. The seemingly restrictive airbox and air filter are often designed that way. If you change the airbox or air filter, it can make the bike run too rich or too lean. I had one V-twin Honda come in with a crack in the airbox. It would barely run, missing and popping. I replaced the air box (Quite the job !) and nothing else. It then ran perfectly. Another time I cleaned the carbs on a Kawasaki 440 twin. I tried to start it without it's pitiful, tiny, little air cleaner. It would barely run. Put the little foam air cleaner in and presto, changeo, runs great ! Same with a Suzuki GS850. Pull the air cleaner cover and it would not idle. Put it back on, idles great. So remember, if you change things, you may have to re-jet the carb, and that's not always so easy. Then again maybe not. I've run across lots of bikes both street and dirt, that don't seem to mind a filter or airbox change at all. You just never know.

Fltron and Uni also make sock type air cleaners. These are especially helpful if the rubber air tube, going from the carb to the airbox, is old, rock hard and shrunk. Lots of times, on an old bike, you can't get a new air tube. So take the air box off and put on a sock air cleaner, clamping it on to the end of the carb. You might want to make some sort of cover for it to keep water off the foam.

A word of warning here. Don't use just any rubber tube to replace an old, hard, shrunk, air tube. If the rubber isn't made for gas, (like a radiator hose) it can swell and/or flake and fall apart. You might find a rubber, gas filler tube, from an auto parts store. This is the tube that goes from the gas tank to the gas filler neck on most cars. It is made for gas. They come in a number of sizes, but most of them are too big, and they are a bit pricey. Still, any port in a storm. One might work for you. If you are forced to use something like a radiator hose, run it for an hour or two and then wait overnight and take it off and check it. If it looks OK, run it a bit longer, but keep checking it often for swelling or some other kind of failure.



As any air cleaner works, it gets dirty. For a while, on filter elements that you oil, the dirt may actually help the filter work by attracting more dirt. However, sooner or later the dirt starts to plug up the filter and this makes the engine suck too much gas. This causes rich running that wastes gas and carbon fouls the spark plug. The cure ? Clean or replace the air cleaner at a regular interval. If you live in a dusty, rural area, you will have to service the air cleaner more often than if you ride in the city.

A guy rode up to my shop on a RD350 Yamaha twin. He says it's running really ratty and that he's tried everything to fix it but it still carbons up the plugs. Says he's gone through dozens of plugs. He leaves it. So I look at the spark plugs and they are badly carbon fouled. I put in new plugs, tuned it up, checked the air cleaner, checked the exhaust, checked everything I could think of, but it ran great. I rode it all over the place and I couldn't get it to foul the plugs. He comes back to pick it up. He doesn't know what to think. Says he'll try it out. It's real hot out so he takes his shirt off, lifts the seat and stuffs the shirt under the seat and jams the seat down... effectively plugging off the airbox inlet ! After I pointed this out, he had no further trouble. Not only shirts and dirt can plug up the air cleaner. I've seen mice and wasps build nests in the airbox too. If the engine is well worn it can start to pump a lot of oil vapor out of the engine breather. This can plug up the air cleaner too. Sometimes you will need to put a filter on the engine breather hose, to keep dirt out of the engine, and plug off where the breather hose enters the airbox.

Take good care of your air cleaner. If you don't, sooner or later you will regret it !

IGNITION TIMING

¶ Ignition timing seems to be the one thing that terrifies the home mechanic most. I've seen guys leap right into gear boxes, tear off top ends without the slightest hesitation. But set the ignition timing? NO WAY... they are scared stiff of it. Others figure they can throw in a new set of points, set the gap with a matchbook cover and drive on. In reality there is no reason to fear ignition timing or to do it haphazardly. Ignition timing is quite simple and the benefits to be gained are great... namely more power, longer engine life and better gas mileage.

When combustion occurs it does not take place instantly. It requires a period of time. Depending on the RPM the power stroke can be .05 of a second at 1200 rpm to .0057 of a second at 10,500 rpm. Now even though the time for combustion at 1200 rpm is not much, it is still over 8 times what is available at 10,000 rpm.

The reason that this small amount of time is important is because the combustion process is not as much an explosion as it is a controlled burning. The time available for this controlled burning decreases as the rpm goes up. To compensate for this, the point where the spark occurs, to start the combustion process, must occur earlier Before Top-Dead-Center (BTDC) of the compression stroke. To accomplish this weights and springs are attached to the points cam. As the cam spins on its shaft, centrifugal force causes the weights to move and turn this cam on its shaft, advancing the timing of the spark, thus giving the combustion process more time to occur as the rpm goes up. Full advance is usually reached on most engines by around 3000 rpm.

Most motorcycle engines with points have only a Centrifugal Advance. A few have a Vacuum Advance. Newer engines with electronic ignitions usually have an electronic advance. Some engines have fixed timing with no automatic advance at all. The advance is fixed at so many degrees Before Top-Dead-Center (BTDC) and does not vary. The lower the compression ratio an engine has, the more spark advance it needs. This is because rapid combustion is aided by a high compression pressure. Because the combustion process takes place quicker with a high compression ratio less time is needed, therefore less spark advance. Conversely lower compression pressure slows the combustion process, necessitating more spark advance. Now why all this about compression pressure and spark advance? Simply this, as an engine wears out it starts leaking compression past rings and valves. This lowers the compression pressure (ratio).

What does this mean? You got it, we need to advance the ignition timing as an engine ages.

OK...Great...Now What? Well, if the engine is worn, lots of miles or hard use, we need to advance the point at which the spark occurs. This works best on large 4-stroke engines although it can be done on small ones too, but it is harder to do. I don't do this to 2-strokes. They are just a different breed of engine. I don't do this with flywheel magnetos ( Honda 50's, 70's etc. ) either, because it is a lot of work with that type of ignition system. On many of the newer motorcycles you just can't do it without major modification, but on almost all points ignition machines and a lot of electronic ignition ones, you can. I don't do this with engines that have real good compression because they don't need it. On these engines the stock timing marks will probably work best. This is for old, worn, tired, engines. However, I have heard of this method being used with heavily modified engines, to get a starting point in the tuning process.

Now when we increase the spark advance (the point when the ignition spark occurs, at the sparkplug, before-top-dead-center of the compression stroke [BTDC] ) we get more power BUT we also get more heat. There is a point after which we get lots more heat and very little extra power. We want to STOP before we get to this point.

The drill is this... With the engine at normal operating temperature and idling, advance the timing slowly. You will hear the engine speed up. Move the timing back and forth, advancing and retarding it till you get the highest engine idling speed. Then back it off (retard it) just a bit. The engine speed slows down just a little. You are still idling, don't touch the throttle.

Go for a short ride and make sure the engine does not "ping" under load. Then check the color of the spark plug(s) to make sure it's not running too hot and you are done!

FLYWHEEL MAGNETO TIMING

Motorcycle Magnetos are great things. They require no battery and, in general, give good reliable service. They are harder to adjust, and it is not easy to adjust them using the method I gave in the Ignition Timing Page. Basically they come in two types, the Points type and the Electronic type. Let's talk about the Points system first.

LOW TENSION MAGNETO WITH POINTS

Most Japanese dirt bikes made before 1980 had points ignition (but not all!) Most (but not all!) of the two-stroke engines had fixed advance. That means there was no variable advance of the ignition timing. Most of the four-stroke engines had a variable advance. The reason for a centrifugal advance is this. An engine is easier to start with the timing of the spark retarded from the place where it runs best. It also helps to prevent kick back. This is not much of a big deal with small two and four stroke engines but it IS a big deal with a large engine.

Kick back is when the air/fuel mixture lights off BEFORE the piston reaches Top-Dead-Center. This sends the piston backwards if you are kick starting, have your foot on the kick start lever and don't kick hard enough. In the worst case, it can snap back and break your leg.

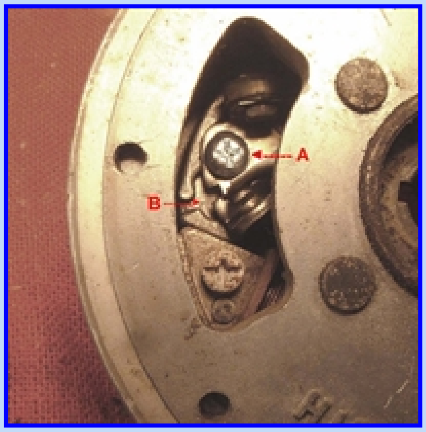
Low Tension Magneto

High Tension Magneto

When I talk about Low Tension Magnetos I mean electrical systems with a separate Ignition Coil located outside of the Magneto's Flywheel. High Tension Magnetos have the ignition coil on the stator plate under the Flywheel.

Let us start from the beginning. Pull the Flywheel cover and find the points wire that comes out of the top of the crankcase. It is usually a black wire with a white strip or a solid black wire but not always. Check your shop manual. When you find the points wire connect a Buzz Box to it and turn it on. Now turn the engine flywheel till the "F" mark on the flywheel matches the stationary mark on the engine crankcase. Listen to the tone the Buzz Box is making. The tone will change when the points open. If the marks are right on then you need go no further. If they are off or if you are getting no spark, then we have to dig a bit deeper.

Our main concern is that we have spark and that the spark occurs at the right time when the engine is at full or maximum advance. Most four-strokes, namely Hondas, can be timed in the retarded position. But some, like Harleys, need to be timed in the advanced position. A lot of the small Two Strokes made by Yamaha, Suzuki and Kawasaki have spark advances. I usually time the Kawasakis and Suzukis in the retarded position and most Yamahas in the full advance position. Obviously, if there is no spark advance you time the engine at full advance. Look in your Shop Manual (you do have a Shop Manual, don't you?) to find out what that is.



The timing marks are set up a number of different ways. Some have the advance and Top-Dead-Center (TDC) marks on the crankcase and one moving mark on the flywheel. Click on the picture to the right, and you will see two marks on the crankcase and the one on the flywheel. This engine rotates counter-clockwise, so the first mark is the full advance mark, and the second mark is TDC. You want the points to open when the moving mark, exactly matches, the full advance mark. This example is an old Hodaka 100cc engine with no automatic advance. If you do not know the direction of rotation simply push on the kick starter lever.

The example to the left has one mark on the crankcase and all the other marks on the flywheel. This Honda engine (50-70cc) is timed in the full RETARED position. This is because it has a centrifugal spark advance. The "F" mark is when the points open and the spark occurs. The "T" mark is Top-Dead-Center. The two marks on the left are the full advance marks. At 3000 or so RPM the spark will occur between these marks. To check this you must use a timing light with the engine running OR with the engine off, physically turn, and jam in position, the advance unit. Then check it. Most of the Japanese engines I time in the retarded position except for the Yamaha 2-stroke singles. They seem to have weak advance springs, making timing in the retarded position iffy. But that's OK...Yamaha was thoughtful enough to put a little hole in the flywheel which lines up with a hole in the advance unit at full advance (a lot of them, anyway!). Just put a small drill into the holes to lock it in full advance! Others have a lever you push to get full advance.

In the picture on the left, you can see "A", the points and the screw that holds them in, and "B", the adjusting groove. If you loosen the screw, you can open and close the point gap, with a screwdriver in the adjusting groove. It sounds so easy, and it can be... sometimes...and then again, sometimes not. The point gap regulates how much time the coils have to build up the spark. Some systems charge the coil with the points open and some with the points closed. We won't go in to that here. We just want the engine to run good.

Now adjust the point gap open or closed until the Buzz Box changes tone exactly when the moving mark on the flywheel and the stationary mark on the crankcase coincide. Now tighten the points screw and check again. You will find in six times out of ten, the timing has moved. Rats! Look at how much it moved and in what direction. If it advanced just a little bit, set it a bit retarded and then tighten the points screw. Or visa versa. Check the timing again and you will find it is right on when the points screw is tightened. This may take several tries to get it right.

If you want you can turn the engine flywheel until the points open as wide as they can and then measure the point gap. It should be within whatever plus or minus specification the manufacturer gives. For Japanese engines it is usually between .012" to .014" (0.3mm to 0.4mm). If the point gap is bigger or smaller then the manufacturers specification you may or may not get a spark. To get the best spark keep the point gap within the manufacturers specifications.

Not only must the points open at the right time for the engine, but they must open at the peak of the charging cycle of the coils. As the magnet in the flywheel spins around the ignition stator coils electricity is built up in the ignition coil. When the points open, it disrupts this electric field, causing the spark that fires the fuel/air mixture in the engine. This is usually engineered into the Magneto unit and you can't adjust it. If you adjust the points to the right Ignition Timing, but don't get a spark, it might be because the Points Cam Follower, or Heel (the part of the point that the points cam pushes against) is worn. Back in the day I have also heard of the Points Heel being called a Points Slipper or Lifter.

This wear on the points heel causes the points to be out of time with the rotating magnet even when the Ignition Timing is set right. The cure is a new set of points. Most of the wear on Magneto Points is not on the Contact Points, but on the Points Heel. This is because the voltage across the points is so low, around 1 to 3 volts. The low voltage takes a long time to wear the points out. Battery ignitions have 6 or 12 volts so they wear out much more quickly. Magneto points that look good can, in reality, be bad.

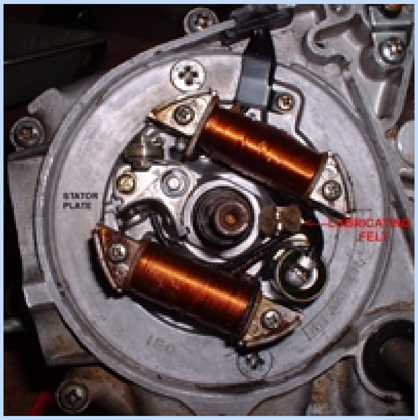
If the points are just a tad rusted you can clean them up a bit with a strip of 100 to 150 grit sandpaper folded grit side out. I prefer to use a Flex-File but I don't think you can get them anymore. Just drag the sandpaper back and forth across a closed set of points till they are shinny. When done blow the points off with compressed air and clean with acetone. They sell metal points files but I never could get them to work.



If you have a lot of miles or hours of running on a set of points or if they are giving you any trouble at all, REPLACE THEM. I have spent way too many hours of my life trying to make a bad set of points work and it never seems to work out to my benefit. If in doubt replace them. I realize that these days new points may be hard to get. I still say REPLACE THEM. Remember to lube the Points Lubricating Felt.

When you get the used, worn out points in your grimy little hand don't just throw them out. Take them apart and save the screws, washers, nuts, and insulators. For the most part these do not wear out and are very hard to find if you need one. I keep a little bottle of old screws around and every once in a while they come in very handy.

Everyone tries to sell you a new condenser but condensers rarely fail. In the last forty years I have changed out hundreds of points but only about two or three condensers. To test, charge them up with a 12 volt battery. Negative to the condenser case, positive to the pigtail wire. Then touch the pigtail wire to the condenser case. If you get a nice spark, the condenser is good. Yes, I know some are soldered to the points wire. Unsolder the condenser and separate it from the rest of the wires, then solder or clip a temporary wire on and test for spark.

To replace the points you must remove the Flywheel. Then remove the one screw holding the points to the stator plate. Now loosen the points wire screw and remove the point wire. Throw the old points out and install the new points. Screw the point screw in and hook up the points wire. Be aware there are two point contacts to each set of points. One is screwed to the Stator Plate and is grounded. The other is movable and is insulated from the grounded point. The point wire is connected to this movable point. The pivot point of the movable point, the spring and the screw connection to the points wire are insulated from the stationary point. If this insulation is worn or if the point is improperly assembled, allowing the movable point to be grounded to the stationary point, the points will not work. The two points must have contact ONLY through the round points themselves.

One thing to remember. When replacing the points wire, take a good look at how the wire is placed running to the points. Things are real tight under that flywheel and there is not much room. If you position the points wire wrong, part of the spinning flywheel could wear through the wire's insulation and short out the wire and the points. Take a good look at the points wire before you change the points and reposition it on the new points in the same way.magneto_condenser.jpg

The spark occurs when the points open. We want them to open when the piston is in the right position before Top-Dead-Center (BTDC). The mark on the flywheel and crankcase are just tools that allow us to set that opening point-of-time. It is hard to tell when the points open. We need some way to know exactly when they open. I use what is called a "Buzz Box". It makes a buzzing noise that changes tone when the points open. You can also use an ohm meter or a piece of cigarette paper. The cigarette paper is actually very accurate. Just put it between the points and pull gently so as not to tear the paper. When the points open, the paper will come loose. Remember the timing marks must match when the paper pulls loose. You can buy four packs of cigarette papers on Amazon.com for under $5.00 delivered. That gives you 128 cigarette papers. That should do a few bikes.

Now a lot of Magnetos on smaller Japanese bikes have Stator Plates that are bolted to the crankcase with screws that have no adjustment but an equal number have Stator Plates that have elongated holes and are adjustable. On these adjustable Stator Plates the drill is this. Set the points gap to the correct value with the Flywheel in place. Then check the timing. If the timing is off, pull the Flywheel off and move the adjustable Stator Plate. Install the flywheel and retest. If it is still off do it again until the spark occurs at the correct place. All this is somewhat more difficult and time consuming because all this adjustment is UNDER the flywheel.

Once all this is set, theoretically, when the points are worn out, you should be able to replace the points with a new set, set the gap and all will be correctly timed. Also you can advance the timing on a worn engine, as I explained in Ignition Theory Page, to make maximum power and still keep the right point gap.

Another way to set timing is with a dial indicator put down the spark plug hole. Most Shop Manuals give how many thousands of an inch or millimeters Before-Top-Dead-Center (BTDC), where the piston should be. When the piston is at that spot, say 1.9mm BTDC, the points should open, causing the spark to occur. If you time an engine with a dial indicator there is no need for timing marks, however, if the engine you are working on has no timing marks, you can make your own. Simply make two side by side marks, on the flywheel and crankcase. You can make these marks any where on the flywheel and crankcase but they must match each other when the piston is at the right spot BTDC and the points just opened. Some engines require the removal of the cylinder head to use the dial indicator.

To get to the points, we must remove the flywheel. to do this you MUST use a flywheel puller. You will have to get one for your engine. I have over 30 of them. All different. If you use a gear puller, you can break the flywheel....very expensive.

IF YOU DON'T...I DON'T CARE
IT'S NOT MY FLYWHEEL!

To remove the flywheel nut, you have to have a way to lock the engine. I use an air gun to loosen them and the worlds best strap wench (Briggs & Stratton part # 19372) to hold the flywheel while I torque the nut. Play it safe and torque that nut! The flywheel is spinning at 6 to 12000 RPM, between your legs. Do you really want it to break or come loose? You can also lock the engine by putting a length of cotton rope down the spark plug hole, with the valves closed and the piston coming up on the compression stroke. Any small bits of cotton left in the engine will burn up and not hurt any thing. (at least, I have never had any trouble)

Make sure you put the special points grease on the points cam, and the little Lubricating Felt that presses against it. If that little felt is real dry, put a single drop of oil on it along with the grease to sort of fill up the felt. If you do not, the dry part of the felt will pull the grease into itself, and off of the cam, giving rapid wear to the points heel.

Interesting... in the real world all things go from complex to simple. Dry and oily go to a uniform state. Two things go to one. They tell us that evolution is true, that simple goes to complex. Yet we never see it in the real world. We see the opposite... complex goes to simple. So much for the lie of evolution!

The last thing to do after you have finished setting, checking, and double checking every thing, is to clean the points off with Acetone. Do not use Gasoline because it will leave a very slight residue on the points. Acetone will not. You don't have to remove the flywheel to do this. I did just to make a better picture. It is VERY IMPORTANT to do this. Use a 3 by 5 card cut into 1/4" strips. Dip one end into the Acetone and pull it through the points. Do the same with the other end to dry them. Make sure no bits of paper get caught in the points. ANY oil on the points will cause them not to work.

James 2:10 "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

No matter how clean and well maintained you keep your bike if you offend with neglect of your points you will be guilty of all because your bike will not run.

ELECTRONIC IGNITION

"But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise..." First Corinthians 1:27

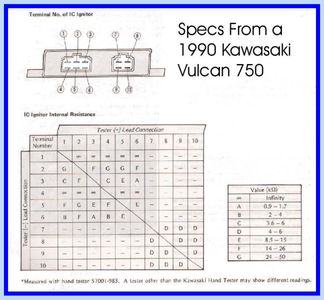
Electronic Ignition... so easy to get to, so easy to test... so easy ! I hate electronic ignition systems. At least, I hate to work on them. I wish I could tell you I know everything about motorcycle electronic ignitions, but, well, after working on these things since they first came out I can categorically state that I don't know 'nothing about them. So I'll just ramble on about them for a while, and if you read real carefully, you will know as little as I do !

Most Electronic Ignitions have four parts that can fail. trigger (pickup) coil, a source coil, a CDI unit (Black Box) and an ignition coil. The trigger coil tells the black box when to trigger the spark. It does this when a small magnet on the flywheel passes the trigger. The source coil produces the power. The black box coordinates everything and tells the ignition coil when to fire the spark plug. This is for a magneto and requires no battery, as the power comes from the source coil. Battery Ignition CDIs use the battery as a power source. The battery is then recharged by the charging system.



Now, when I say CDI I mean Capacitor Discharge Ignition, but I am also lumping in all types of ignitions that don't use points. Each manufacturer has their own design and way of thinking. However, they all seem to have those four parts. Trigger coil, source coil, black box, and ign coil. Usually, they give you specs on the trigger unit, source coil, and ignition coil. Sometimes, they give specs on the CDI box too. These specs are given as resistance values in Ohms. That means we can test them to see if they are good... sort of... most times... maybe ! Some manufacturers also give values for the black boxes too, and some don't. All this means these things are very hard to test accurately. Fortunately, most of the electronic ignition units are quite reliable and require no service, but this plus turns to a minus when they do go bad. They are very hard to trouble shoot. To top it off, most motorcycle CDIs are expensive to replace, and when they go out, the bikes are too old to justify the expense of replacement.

They say electronic ignition doesn't change once it is set. BUT, IT DOES ! Sometimes, it will change as it fails. This can give some pretty weird running. It can also cause the engine to overheat and seize. This is something to remember when you rebuild an engine that blew up for seemingly no reason.

OK, we can use an ohm meter to check most things except the black box, and sometimes, even the black box... If we are lucky ! Well, maybe things tested Ok. You have to remember, on all electrical things, they test either bad or they might be good. There are a number of very expensive testers out there, and they all claim to work great. But do they ? Let me tell you a story. I once had a snowmobile come in which would die (no spark) after 5-6 minutes of running. I had factory specs on everything including the black box. Everything tested OK, even when hot. Long story short, I finally ended up talking to the owner of a business that made aftermarket, replacement, snowmobile CDI boxes. He told me all the factory specs were wrong, and gave me some new specs that he said sometimes worked and as he was very knowledgeable about electronic ignitions I asked him what tester he used. He told me he had tried them all and none of them worked. He said for each new CDI box design his company bought an engine, and modified it so they could run it with an electric motor. They could then test the black boxes by substitution. Customers could send in their factory CDI boxes and he could test them to see if they were good. He said they had a whole warehouse full of these modified engines. This was back in 1988-89. I like to think they have something better now... however, I still can't afford a tester other than an Ohm meter.

The reason I'm telling you all this, is to give you an idea of the amount of hassle these things can be. Many times I've read factory bulletins telling their people in the field to be more careful. They're sending back, under warranty, too many "bad" boxes that turn out to be good.

*Measured with hand tester 57001-983. A tester other than the Kawasaki Hand Tester may show different readings.

All right, we have no spark. Check the resistance, in Ohms, of the Trigger coil, Source coil and Ignition coil. If one is out of spec, replace it, but first check all the plug in connectors. Check and clean all the ground connections and make sure the kill button is working right too. Also, remember some bikes have safety kill switches at the clutch lever, the side stand, and who knows where. Look for them and make sure all of them are working right. Check each Ohm reading several times and remember most specs give a temperature to check at, usually 70 degrees. So don't leave the bike out overnight at 30 degrees and expect to get an accurate reading. Sometimes there will be a spec for the black box, and sometimes not. Here are the specs on a Kawasaki Vulcan. Others, if they give any, look similar. As you can see, there are a fair number of tests to perform. Maybe this is why a lot of manufacturers don't give any specs. Honda used to give specs, but it seems they don't anymore. Yamaha doesn't give any. Kawasaki and Suzuki both sometimes give specs and sometimes defer to special factory testers. Others ? You will have to look in the shop manual.

The shop manual will give you the color of the wires to test and the correct resistance too. If everything is within spec, recheck all the connectors and the grounds. If all is OK the only thing to do is replace the black box. Sometimes you can get the part off a working bike and substitute it for the part in question. Most times this can work pretty good. Other times the bad part can take out other good parts. The reason this can happen is because these systems produce very high voltages. That voltage has to go somewhere. Sometimes it can burn it's way through the side of the plastic case. The good news is that this is quite rare in most motorcycle systems. Don't you love the way I use most and sometimes and might and maybe ? There's good reasons why electrical parts are sold with no warranty.

Another thing to check is the air gap between the trigger and the magnet on the flywheel. Usually this is done with non-magnetic, brass, gauges. You can also use a piece of plastic of the right thickness. That thickness is usually .005" to .010". Try to get the parts as close as you can, without them hitting.

Sometimes, there is no separate trigger unit. Everything is in the coils or the black box. The circuitry reads the voltage rise and triggers the spark at the right time. They do have little ignition units that are used on lawnmowers and small engines. They tell me some of these units can be used on motorcycles. I've never used them on a bike, but they do work on other small engines.

Most Dirt bikes are a CDI magneto, and do not require a battery. Most street bikes are a battery charged CDI, and need a fully charged battery. That battery also has to run the starter, lights, radio, and other stuff in addition to the ignition. Different things require different power requirements from the battery. We think of the battery as supplying a steady 12 volts and it should. But, things can vary. What does all this have to do with electronic ignition ? Most electronic ignitions require a full 12 volts to give out a good spark. If you let the bike sit a long time or the battery is weak, you may not get a full 12 volts. Now the starter may spin just fine, but the starter requires amps more than volts. Think of it like this. Amps are volume, volts are pressure. Amps won't jump a spark plug gap and volts won't spin that starter. At least they won't in the numbers that we deal with. Anyway, the starter is spinning but the ignition is not getting enough volts to fire the spark plug. The moral ? Make sure you have a good, fully charged battery in the machine before you start hunting for ignition problems.

Don't unplug anything while the engine is running. That includes the spark plug cap. These systems can produce a lot of volts, like 18,000-30,000 and more. It's got to go somewhere. Readers Digest magazine had a big expose' on bad auto mechanics. They pulled one spark plug cap loose and took it to a bunch of different mechanics. They complained that a lot of those mechanics did detailed, expensive tests, instead of just popping the plug cap back on. Those mechanics didn't do anything wrong. Pulling that plug could have fried the entire ignition system. I've seen it happen. When you check for spark, ground that plug to the engine. The spark should easily jump a 1/4" gap. If it won't jump 1/4", or more, outside the engine, it won't jump .030" inside the engine under compression. A handy tool is a spark tester. There are lots of different types. You can buy one or you can make one yourself real easy. Take a new spark plug and bend the side electrode out straight. Now solder a small clamp on the side and you are done. Clamp it to the cylinder head and hook up the spark plug cap. Crank the engine and you can easily see the spark. The engine can and will run if you connect the tester clamp to the end of the spark plug. Provided, of course, the plug is good and installed in the engine.

Remember, that spark is what sets the air/fuel mix burning. It can do the same outside the engine too.

Make sure there is no spilt gasoline or other flammable mixtures on or near that Spark Tester.
Keep a fire extinguisher handy !

What if there's a misfire at, say 1/2 throttle, but only under load ? Carburetion can cause a miss that looks, acts, and feels exactly like an ignition miss. How do you tell the difference ? Easy, Hook up a timing light. Use one of the types that does not have to be hooked to a battery for power, if possible. A lot of the old style lights were like this. Tape it to your handlebars and go for a ride. Look at the light. If the light looks bright and steady when the misfire occurs, then the problem is in carburetion. If it goes out when the misfire occurs, then the problem is with the ignition. There are all kinds of ways of doing this and you can use different tools, like plug caps with lights on them. The big thing is being able to see when the spark occurs... or doesn't occur.

Well, there you go. Hopefully all this will help. One thing for sure... you now know as little as I do !

TIMING A BATTERY AND COIL POINTS IGNITION SYSTEM

"Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine." Job 8:5

Well, if you are one of those wicked people who don't bother to maintain your points ignitioned bike you will find the spark of your fire does indeed go out. So what do we do to prevent this ?

Points Ignition is on it's way out, but there are still a lot of them out there. Most engines (but not all) made after 1980 have an electronic ignition and no points. Most engines (but not all) made before 1980 have points. To find out look under the points cover. this cover will usually have two or three screws holding it on. On most single and twin cylinder engines it is usually on the cylinder head, right or left side. On most four cylinder engines it is usually on the crank end and again it can be on either the right or left side but it seems mostly on the right. Three cylinder engines seem to be mostly on the left.

If there is any doubt as to the condition of the points, replace them. Sometimes a good looking set of points can cause a funny misfire that can only be cured by a new set. If the points are pitted badly you will not be able to get an accurate gap setting. Replace them. I have spent way too many hours trying to make a used set of points work, in vain hope of saving $10-$15. Save your time and nerves, buy a new set of points. Interestingly enough, it's been my experience that condensers almost never wear out. I have found maybe four or five bad condensers in the last 35 years. Everybody pushes you to buy them, but I never replace them unless they test bad. They make little cheap testers (at least they used too !) that work quite good. A rough and ready way to test them is to connect the pig tail to the positive terminal of a 12 volt battery and the body to the negative terminal. This charges them up. Now ground the pig tail to the body and, if it is good, you should see a nice fat spark. In some cases the condenser will have two leads. One goes to ground and one to the points hot wire. Connect them by the color coding of the wires. If both wires have the same color, they can be connected either way. Same way to test. One wire to positive and one wire to negative to charge and then touch them together. You should get a nice spark if they are good. The condenser keeps the points from arcing when they open. The condenser can be anywhere in the line (wire) going to the points. Sometimes this is quite a ways away from the points. Like under the gas tank. The capacity of a condenser is measured in microfarads (0.2 microfarads being the average capacity) and that capacity is matched to the points. If there is a big build up of material on one of the points it means the capacity of that condenser is too big or too small for that set of points. If the negative point (grounded or stationary point) loses material, with the build-up on the positive ( Moveable ) point. The condenser capacity is too low. If the build up is on the grounded point ( Stationary ) the capacity is too high. While you are replacing the points go ahead and take the points plate off and check out the automatic spark advance unit. It is usually attached to the point cam. Make sure it is working smoothly.

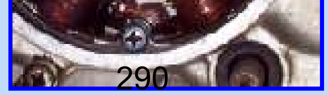
Ok, we got a new set of points and we found where they go... now what ? When you connect the points wire to the points it must go to the movable point and that point is insulated from the stationary point. The little screw that holds the point wire MUST be insulated from grounded, stationary point. There are usually several little fiber washers and a fiber tube that keep the point spring and screw from grounding. Turn the engine over until the highest spot on the points cam aligns with the points heel. This is the spot where the points are at their maximum opening. Now use a feeler gauge, of the right thickness, and set the point gap. After you tighten the point screws, recheck the gap. Most times it changes a little and it may take several tries to get it right. Point gap can be as little as .010" or as much as .022". Look in your shop manual. Most Japanese bike have a gap of .012" to .016", so use .014" and you will be about right... at least for Japanese bikes.



Now take a circuit tester light and ground one end to the engine and the other to the hot wire going to the points. Sometimes, it's easier to connect to the points spring. Turn on the ignition and turn the engine backwards with a wrench on the crankshaft nut or bolt. If the points are on the left side of the engine this would be clockwise. If the points are on the right side of the engine it would be counter-clockwise. Keep turning until the points close. Keep going till the flywheel mark, usually an "F", has moved well beyond the stationary mark on the crankcase. You go well beyond the crankcase mark so any play in the spark advance will be taken up when you turn the engine forward. Some European bikes use "O", Harleys use a vertical line for the front cylinder and a "O" for the rear, and sometimes a "O" and a "OO". Like always, check the manual.

Now turn the engine in the direction of rotation slowly until the "F" mark and the crankcase mark line up. The light in the circuit tester should come on just as the two marks line up. If they don't, loosen the screws that hold the points carrier plate to the engine and turn it one way or the other till the marks line up. Tighten the screws and recheck. If the engine is fresh and strong, time it so the light comes on exactly when the marks match. If the engine is worn, you will want to advance the timing (See the Ignition timing page.). More wear, less compression, more advance. If in doubt, just use the stock timing marks. When you tighten the points and points plate screws, the points and plate will usually change just a little. Sometimes they change a lot. Recheck the timing after you tighten everything up. If the timing was right on and then advances when you tighten the screws, loosen the screws and set it a bit retarded. When you tighten the screws, it will advance a bit and be dead on. Do the opposite if the timing retards when you tighten the screws. You will also notice two marks on the flywheel that are before (Advanced from) the "F" mark. These marks are the full advance marks. If you shine a timing light at them with the engine running four or five thousand RPM you will see that they are supposed to line up with the stationary mark. You will also see lots of oil flying everywhere if the flywheel is the "wet" type like the Honda Trail 90s, 160s, 175s, 350s, 450s and others. Unless you want to make a special cover with a window in it, you don't really need to use a timing light. Bikes of this type seem to time just fine in the retarded spark position. If the bike is one of the Honda fours, the Yamaha 650 twin and others, you don't have to worry. You can use the timing light.

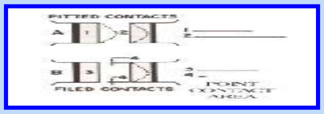
Some bikes have a timing hole. This hole is covered with a plug. You remove the plug and replace it with a special clear timing plug. This keeps the oil in the engine and off you. Examples of this would be Honda Gold Wings and all Harley Davidsons. The plugs don't seem to work all that well unless you screw the plug in so it almost touches the flywheel. Then it works real good ! You can do this with the Harleys pretty easy, just screw it in a bit more. Others are harder, but you get the idea.



These points plates all have elongated holes in them allowing you to adjust the plate. Sometimes if you need more adjustment, you can take a small rat tailed file and file more length to the elongated hole.

Point gap is not supposed to be used for the adjustment of timing, but sometimes we can use it for that. Wear, on the different mechanical ignition parts, may require us to use it to adjust timing. Other times the manufacturer designs it that way, even though that is not a good thing to do ! The gap of the points is supposed to control how long the Ignition Coil(s) is charged by the battery. The time the points are closed is called the Dwell Angle. This angle is given in the shop manual. This can get complicated because some systems charge the coils when the points are open and others when they are closed. We won't worry about that and anyway most of the points we will be dealing with charge when the points are closed and fire the spark plug when the points open. Just be aware that you can vary timing a little with the point gap, but you want to stay within the maximum and minimum specs so the coil will charge right.

Some twin cylinder bikes, like the old 350cc Honda twins, have both points screwed to the points plate. On these bikes you must use the point gap to adjust at least on of the cylinders. Usually, you can set the gap on one point set, turn the point plate to set the timing and then use the point gap to adjust the timing on the second set of points. Now check the gap on the second set and if it is within spec you are done. If not, you will need to juggle settings on the other set of points and points plate to get everything within spec. To help things out, some manufacturers use an extra plate that holds one set of points and bolts to the main points plate. It is moveable, so you can keep the gap right and still adjust the timing for that point after you have adjusted the other set with the main points plate. Most four cylinder bikes that use points have this extra plate. Some twins use them too.

Points tend to blacken with corrosion when left sitting for a long period of time. You can clean them with a points file. I don't use the metal ones that look like small files. I never could get them to work right, the metal used in points is just too hard to file good. It's also not a real good idea to file points if they are badly pitted because it cuts down on their contact area. If you do file badly pitted points you must file ALL the pits away. I use a flexible type that has grinding compound imbedded in it, or a piece of 100 grit sand paper folded back to back. This just cleans up the point surface. If the points are badly pitted, replace them. Now blow everything clean with compressed air and clean with some contact cleaner. Finally, clean the points with a 1/4 inch strip of paper cut from a 3 by 5 inch card and dipped in acetone. Also, put a bit of points grease on the points cam, points heel and the points lubricating felt. If the felt is old and dry, lube it with grease and put one drop of oil on it. If the felt is old and dry, and you only put grease on it, the dry center will pull the grease into the center and away from where you want it... on the points heel. The oil kinda "charges" the dry felt center, preventing this.

The Yamaha XS1100 is the only bike engine I know of that has a vacuum spark advance. Why have vacuum advance ? Under part throttle, air intake into the intake manifold is restricted, so a vacuum develops in the manifold. Because of this vacuum less air/fuel mixture is drawn into the cylinder. This, in effect, lowers the engines compression and slows the burn rate of the fuel mix. To get the full power out of the engine under these conditions requires more Ignition advance. The Vacuum advance gives you this advance when there is vacuum in the intake manifold. Most car engines have a vacuum advance, but it just didn't catch on for motorcycles.

If you reverse the low tension ignition coil connections it will reverse the polarity. It takes 40 % or so more voltage to fire the spark plugs on a ignition system with positive polarity. On most bikes you would have to really work at it to do this. However, some four cylinder bikes like the early Honda fours are designed this way with double ended ignition coils. One lead is positive and one lead is negative. This means two of the plugs will require a lot more voltage to fire than the other two. Not much you can do about it, but if two plugs start fouling out on these bikes, this might be the reason. To test polarity put a pencil lead between the high tension lead and the spark plug. If there is a flare from the pencil to the spark plug, the polarity is correct. If the flare is between the lead wire and the pencil the polarity is wrong.

I've found that a set of points seems to go out of time in about 2000 miles. If you are willing to live with lousy performance, they can go upwards of 8000 miles.

With the ignition on, you should have battery voltage going to the points. With the ignition on, if you take a screw driver and ground out the the moveable point, when you remove the screw diver from the ground, you should get a spark at the spark plug. With the ignition on and the points closed, open the points with a small screw driver. This, also should produce a spark at the spark plug. The spark should easily jump an air gap of 1/4" or more, to ground, outside the engine.

Most motorcycle coils are weak when compared to car coils. You can use car coils BUT you have to do a lot of modification to the points cam so you don't over charge the coils. Seems to me the old "CYCLE" magazine had quite a write up on how to do this but I guess now that ranks right up there with performance tweaks for a 486 computer !

I like points ignition systems. If they start to fail it always seems you can fiddle with them and limp home. If something needed replacing, you didn't have to get a loan from the bank to buy the part. Too bad they are fading away like old soldiers.

ELECTRICAL TROUBLE SHOOTING

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.
1 Thessalonians 5:21

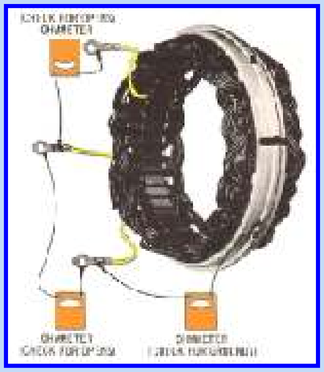
Electrical problems can pop up at any time and can seem hard to fix but they really aren't. Most of the time, anyway. Most everything can be "Proved" (tested) with an Ohmmeter and a some things can be proved with a simple circuit tester.

You can get a good cheap ohmmeter, sometimes called a multimeter, from a hardware store or an auto parts store. They generally run about $20.00. If you want, you can pay hundreds of dollars for one, but for the tests we will be performing, a cheap one will work just fine.

An ohmmeter sends a very low power electrical charge through a wire and measures how much resistance there is in the wire to the charge going through it. This resistance is measured in Ohms. Your shop manual will give you the correct resistance for each wire that you test. The multimeter will measure a bunch of different things such as ohms, DC volts, AC volts, etc. Here are a few of the basic tests. They are all performed at room temperature (70 degrees or so). The word Continuity means voltage is passing through the wire from one end to the other. No Continuity means the wire is broken and voltage is NOT passing through it. Also, if we say something is wired in parallel, it means they are wired side by side. If two 12 volt batteries are wired parallel, the negative terminals would be wired together. Likewise for the positive terminals. This would still give us a 12 volt battery, only bigger. If something is wired in series, it means they are wired one after the other in a line. The two 12 volt batteries would be wired positive to negative, giving us one 24 volt battery.

A shop manual will be very handy to give you the Specifications on the different coils and wires. It also will have a wiring diagram, that will give you the different colors of the wires you are going to want to test. Most of the specifications I give here are just general ones to get you in the ball park. The Shop Manual will give you the exact ones.



Before you do any testing make sure you have a fully charged battery, if there is a battery, in the bike you intend to test. Just because it will start and run without the battery DOESN'T mean it will run right. Time after time guys will bring a bike in and say "It runs good and then it don't. Misses on one side then the miss changes to the other side." Some of them just will not believe it's a bad battery or the wrong size battery. "But it runs." they say, "It just can't be the battery." But it can be the battery. If it needs a battery, and you take the battery out of the system, things can overcharge, overheat and burn out. If the system calls for a battery, make sure a good one, fully charged, is in there. The only time this would not be true, is when the Ignition System is a magneto and the battey is only used to run the horn and tail light. Now when I say "The right size of battery" I mean the battery must have enough amps to run all the things you want to test. If you don't have the right battery, you can use a big, fully charged battery, say from a car, BUT it MUST have the right voltage (6 or 12) and you MUST use big, thick jumper cables. DO NOT connect the jumpers to the old dead battery. Take the old, dead battery completely out of the bike. Connect the positive jumper cable to the positive cable on the bike. Connect the negative to a good ground on the bike. Now you can run your electrical tests. The fact that the battery is a lot bigger then the stock bike battery will not hurt anything. The electrical components on the bike will only draw the powerr they need from the battery. The battery will not "Over Power" the components as long as the it is of the correct voltage. If you leave the old, dead battery in the system, it will try to pull power from the bigger battery. At best this will throw your electrical tests off. At worst the battery can BLOW UP ! Usually, small bike batteries don't blow up... but, why take the chance ?

- Ignition coils. Measure the resistance between the primary (low-tension) wire and ground or ground terminal. It should be very low. Like .5 to 1.5 Ohms. The primary wire is the small wire going to the CDI box or points. Next measure the secondary (high-tension) wire and ground. (Note that on most bikes these days, the coil mounting bar, that passes through the coil and mounts it to the frame, is the ground for the coil primary and secondary wires.) This should be quite high, like 6000 to 13000 ohms. If the coil is out side the specs given in the shop manual the coil might be bad. Sometimes, a coil will work OK when cool but fail when it warms up. Let them cool and they work again. They make machines that will test coils under load. They are nice to have but can be pricey. Remember to take the plug cap off for the test. The cap can add 300 ohms resistance.

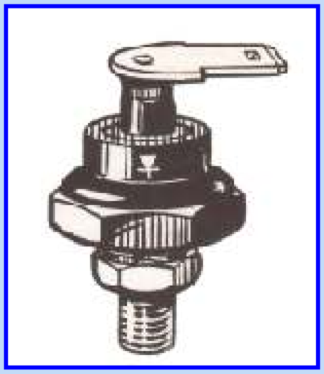
Sometimes the ignition coil can be located under the flywheel and be self contained. That is, the ignition coil and ignition stator coil are one in the same. These are usually found on mopeds and small European bikes.

- Charging Stator coils. These are the coils that are under or around the flywheel. Sometimes they are both. The flywheel has magnets on it and these magnets produce a charge in the coils as the run around them. Usually there will be three wires, all of the same color, coming out of these coils. You want continuity (connection) between the three wire with a low ohm reading, like .5 to 3-4 ohms. There should be NO continuity between these wire and the ground. At least most times, anyway ! If there is only one charging wire coming out of the flywheel coils it is usually grounded and has a reading of .5-1.5 ohms between the output wire and ground. If there is no resistance the coil may have wires short together. If there is infinite resistance a wire is broken. Check the shop manual specs. This is because some charging systems are Alternators, and some are Generators. There are also different flavors of Alternators and Generators and I'm not going to go into that here ! Get that shop manual out to be sure. Just to make things fun, some of the replacement coil sets have very short leads. You have to cut the old leads and plugins off the bad coils and use small wire crimps to hold the wire together. If you solder the wires together the wires can separate once the engine gets good and hot and the solder softens a bit. In other words, soldering may or may not work. Crimping won't come lose under heat. However, no one sells the crimps and they don't give you ANY extra wire AND you have to put something on the wires to keep them from shorting against the crankcase. Fun, fun, fun ! You can get little crimps from appliance parts supply houses or you can make your own by cutting the end off a wire fitting. Put the cleaned and stripped two wires in the crimp and crush them together with some vice grip pliers.

- IGN Source Coils. These are coils, under or around the flywheel, that supply energy for the ignition. Usually, almost always, these coils are grounded. Usually, 300-500 ohms from output wire to ground.

- On the above coils. Often, but NOT always, if you stick a Circuit Tester on the charge wire and clip the other end of the tester to ground, then kick the engine over, you will light the tester bulb briefly. This indicates you are getting some kind of juice out of the coil. But like I say, NOT always.

- Trigger, pick-up or pulse coil. These coils tell the electronic ignition black box when to fire the ignition coil. Usually two wires. Usually, one to three ohms resistance between the two wires and no continuity between them and the ground.



Rectifier. When a coil produces electricity, it sends it out in plus or minus waves. The battery can only charge on one of these waves. A rectifier has silicon diodes that only allow half the wave to get through. Back in the 60s and 70s a lot of the little bikes had these single wave rectifiers. Now most bikes have full wave rectifiers that have four diodes. All this rectifies the AC current to DC to charge the battery. To test the rectifier, hook up the ohmmeter leads to one of the wires and to the ground (mounting) stud. Note the reading you get. Now reverse the leads from the ohmmeter and note the reading again. The exact reading is not all that important, but there should be a big difference between the two if the diode is working right. Test each of the wires this way. If any wire is very close in the two readings then the diode is leaking and no good. If there is no continuity, then the diode is shorted out and no good. Be careful not to turn the bolt holding all the diodes together. This can short them out. It is possible to test the rectifier with a circuit tester by adding a D flashlight battery in line with the circuit tester. You want to see the light, light in one direction and not in the other. If all of a sudden you start blowing the main fuse, it's possible one of your rectifier diodes has failed, letting current, from the battery flow back to ground.

- Voltage Regulator. All the current from the charge coils would over charge the battery if we let it, so we need a voltage regulator to keep the battery charged at 12 volts. Your ohmmeter should have a DC volt scale. Set it at 20 volts and connect the positive and negative leads to the right battery terminals. Make sure the battery is fully charged, so we get a correct reading. Start the bike and rev it up. The volts should go up to 13.8-14.5 volts and then stay there. Much more, and it will over charge the battery. Much less, and the battery will never charge up. Some voltage regulators can be adjusted and some cannot. If you can't get it's cover off or if it is all sealed up, it's non adjustable. If you can get the cover off, you can clean the little contact points and adjust it with a screw driver till you get the right charging rate. Most, nowadays, are not adjustable.

Most of the newer bikes have the Rectifier and Voltage Regulator as one unit. If either one goes you have to replace both. AC current will light the headlight and everything else. Light bulbs don't care if it's DC or AC current. If you have a dirt bike and don't need a battery you can get an after market voltage regulator for $30-40 and it will keep you from blowing bulbs. A number of the older, smaller, bikes had no voltage regulator. I guess they thought the battery would soak up the extra current... they were wrong, so put one in. There also is a cheap after market rectifier/voltage regulator unit you can put on, if you need a battery. It will also work on some street bikes too, but you have to make sure it matches the charging system.

- Capacitors. On some older bikes (Mostly British, like Triumph, BSA, Norton, etc.) There will be a capacitor that holds, or stores electricity for the ignition. They have a limited storage life of about 12-18 months if not in use. Use it or lose it, I guess ! To test, connect a 12 volt battery to it for about five seconds. Make sure the polarity is right. Plus to plus, negative to negative, or it will be ruined. Let it sit at least five minutes, then connect a DC voltmeter (your ohmmeter set to DC volts) to the terminals. When you take the reading wait a bit for it to stabilize. A good one, should read at least 9 volts Zener Diodes. They do the same thing as a voltage regulator. Worthless piece of dog poop. Oh, do I remember zener diodes. I had one on my Norton Atlas. Long story short... it had a battery and it had one of those capacitors. Vibration would crack the battery in about 3-4 weeks of running every day. Without a good battery in the system it tended to melt one specific wire that charged the battery. Not always... just sometimes. After the first time, I separated the wire from all the others and I carried extra wire, cut to length, to replace it on the road when it went. Actually, I carried three lengths... safety in numbers ! It would fail about one a month. I could replace it in about five minutes. If I put a fuse in the line and it blew, it would not kill the engine. It would overcharge the zener diode and burn it out at $20.00 a pop. This was in 1971-74, I was in the army and didn't always have 20 bills. I found if I turned on all my lights, I could go up to exactly 69 miles an hour. If I went 70, poof... all my lights burned out and then about one minute of running overcharged my ignition coils, making it run on one cylinder, and I limped home at 20 MPH. But, I got to admit, in two years and 28,000 miles of running, it always brought me home.

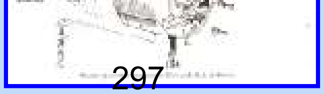
I loved that bike, but just like a bad woman, it was fickle. When she ran, she ran GREAT. she just didn't run GREAT for long. Fiddle with her, play with her, pay attention to her all the time, bring her gifts (new battery, pipes, paint, anything to keep her happy) and she would give you a taste of heaven... but only a taste ! Every six months or so, I would get her a new battery and life was good. Everything worked, and, oh, it was great ! Then the battery would crack and... ! Anyway, They need to be in a good heat sink. The best thing to do with these things is to throw them away and buy a real voltage regulator, but if you want to test them Here is the official way.



1. Disconnect the cable going to the zener diode and connect, in series, a ammeter, with the ammeter positive lead connected to the diode terminal
2. Connect a DC voltmeter between the zener diode and the heat sink. The red or positive lead of the voltmeter must be connected to the heat sink, which is then connected to the frame. Remember, British bikes have positive ground, at least the ones with zener diodes ! Gerrrrr !
3. With lights off and battery fully charged. Start the engine and, while watching both meters, slowly rev the engine up.
4. The ammeter should read zero till the voltmeter reaches 12.75 volts.
5. Increase engine speed till ammeter reads 2.0 amps. The voltmeter should read 13.5-15.3 volts.
6. If the ammeter reads anything before the volts are 12.75 or if the voltage is higher than 15.3 at 2 amps replace the zener diode... and they cost a lot more than $20.00 now !

Rotors. Some charging systems have Rotors (Armatures) that turn inside a magnetic field producing current. These usually have two slip rings separated by insulators. The slip rings can be on the nose of the rotor or on the side. There should be continuity between the slip rings but not to the rotor body (Ground). On some older bikes these double as an electric starter. These have a bunch of, what are called, commutators on the end of it's shaft. These are similar to a starter armature. If they are worn you can cut and polish them up a bit. They are tested like the slip rings. Continuity to themselves, but no continuity to ground.

- Brushes. If the system has brushes they must move freely in their holders and be long enough to always be in contact with the slip rings. If you can't get a brush for an old bike, you can sometimes take another, larger brush, and cut it down to the right size. As long as it works, who cares what it looks like ! Handle them carefully, they break easily.

- Flywheel Magnets. These are usually quite trouble free. Back in the 1930s, 40s, and 50s, the magnets were not so good. If you dropped them or banged them about they could loose their magnetism. I've never seen that happen on a modern bike, but I suppose it is possible. They had a special machine to remagnetize them.

Remember, the ohmmeter may have some internal resistance, usually .5 ohm. Hold the ohmmeter leads together to find out what that resistance is and subtract it from your test readings. Take the readings when the part has warmed up to 70 degrees or so. If you don't, the readings will not be accurate. Take several readings and, if you have several ohmmeters, use them all. The more readings you take, the less errors you will make ! Most of the specs are given plus or minus 10-20%. Of course, some of the specs the factories give out may not even be right !

Check this out. A guy brings me in a four wheeler. It won't start. Says the battery was totally dry and he filled it up with water, it ran a bit and then died for good. I try to trickle charge the battery but it has some dead cells so I put in a new one. Won't start... no spark. I test the ignition coil, it's within spec. Test trigger coil and it's within spec. Test the source coil and it reads 273 ohms. Spec calls for 347-425 ohms. Found problem, right ? No. I pull the coils and the lighting coils are all burnt up (nobody said a word about the lights being out !) but the source coil looks fine, but it didn't test right. So I replace the coils which only come as a set. Just because, I check the reading on the new, fresh out of the factory wrapping, $100.00 source coil and guess what ? It reads 273 ohms too. Still no spark. Gerrrr. I find a used black box (New are $275.00), put it on, (no specs, so you can't test them) and Bingo, spark ! All my test figures are right out of the factory book, run at 70 degrees, I used two different ohmmeters, and ran the tests several times. This is kind of normal for electronic stuff. That's why nobody wants to guarantee electrical parts.

- Sometimes the bike ignition, lights, turn signals, etc. will just stop working. Here is where the little circuit tester light can really help. You will need the wiring diagram for your bike so you can pinpoint which color wires are used on the offending part that doesn't work. I usually check all the grounds first because they can get rusted and will not conduct electricity. I then check and see if we are getting battery voltage (the light lights up !) at the dead part. If I am, then maybe the part itself, bulb, switch, whatever, is dead. If not, I go back to the battery and check again for battery voltage. If I get it, I then work my way along the wires till I don't get battery voltage. Check the different electrical plugins. Sometimes just plugging and unplugging them can cure things. if there is no plugin to check, you can still check the wire by sticking a small needle into the wire insulation till it hits the wire. When you pull it out the hole tends to close up and heal it's self. If you do it right, you don't have to tape it or anything when you are done. If it is a switch, you can sometimes clean out the corrosion with some electrical contact cleaner or by scraping the gook out. Look for anyplace the wires could be rubbing against the frame or touching a hot part, like an exhaust pipe. You may have to take the tank and seat off, or get into the headlamp shell. Remember too, that often when one thing goes, something else goes too. I don't know why... it just seems like that happens a lot. Be patent. It can take a long time to find the problem.

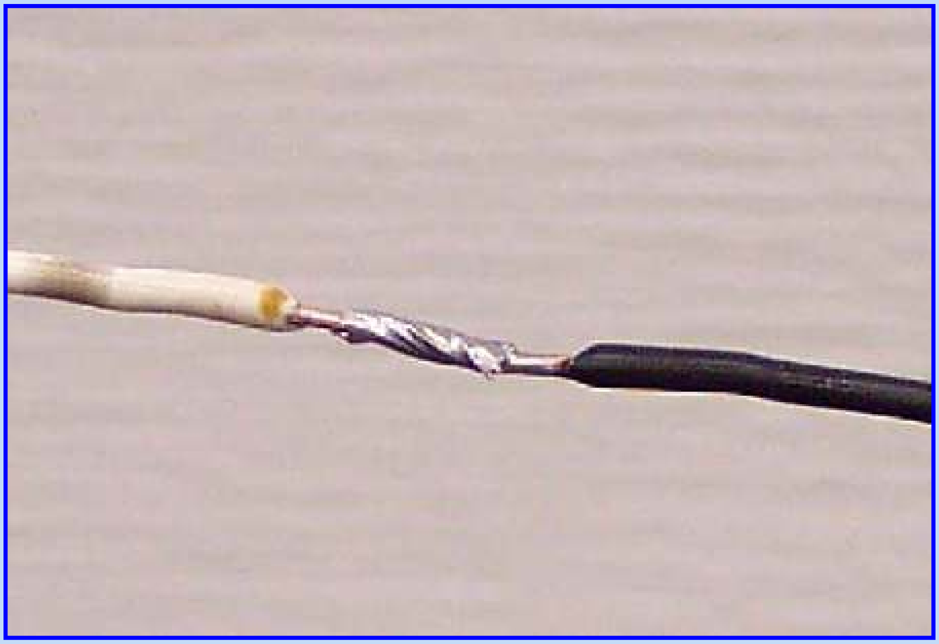
- If you replace burned out bulbs with bulbs that have a different wattage than stock it can goof things up, sometimes. It can make the turn signals blink faster or slower. If it's a charging indicator light bulb it can upset your charging rate. It might not hurt anything, and then again... !

- A lot of bikes now have safety, ignition, cut outs to keep you from starting the bike when it is in gear or to keep you from riding off with your side stand down. They seem to be putting them everywhere. If your bike will not start they must be checked. Here are some of the places I have found them.

1. The clutch lever. It must be pulled in, to start the bike.
2. The side stand. It must be up, or the engine will die when put in gear.
3. When the bike is in gear. The bike must be in neutral to be started.
4. Reverse Gear. The rear brake must be applied to shift into reverse on most four wheel ATVs.

Give big brother some time and I'm sure he will force more safeties down our throats... all for your own good, of course !

- When you check for spark, the spark must jump at least 1/4" (.250") or more outside the engine. Just laying the spark plug in the plug cap, on the cylinder head, and getting a spark across a .030" gap is no good. It takes a lot more power to jump a gap under compression in the engine then outside the engine under no compression pressure. Also, if it's electronic ignition, you must spin the engine to at least three or four hundred RPM. Any less and the anti kick back circuitry in the CDI black box kills the spark.



- Voltage Drop Testing. OK, let's see if I can explain this right. When you measure the voltage on a battery by putting the positive ohmmeter lead on the positive terminal and the negative lead on the negative terminal, you are actually measuring the voltage pressure between the two terminals. The positive terminal reads 12.6 or so volts and the negative terminal reads zero. The wiring circuitry in the ohmmeter subtracts the negative lead voltage from the positive lead voltage (12.6v-0v=12.6v) and you end up with the reading 12.6 volts. What does all this mean ? Well, if you connect the positive ohmmeter lead to where the power starts. Like the positive battery terminal, and the negative lead to where you want the power to go, like a starter. Now run the starter. You should get a ohmmeter reading of zero. If you get a reading, that is the voltage drop. This indicates resistance in the starter cable or in the connection to the battery or starter. Another way of thinking on this is that the voltage drop is the number of volts that you lost over that connection. The reading you get on the ohmmeter is number of volts you have lost. You can test the ground connection side of the starter too. Connect the negative ohmmeter lead to the negative battery terminal and the positive ohmmeter lead to the starter body. Again, crank the starter. A DC circuit should use all the available voltage, so the reading should read close to zero or not more than .4 volts.

- Lastly, and maybe this should be firstly, don't forget to check the kill button, or switch, if things won't start. I was a teenager working in a Honda shop in 1968 when Honda brought out the CB 350 twin. They didn't really have kill buttons, or rather, kill switches, as a regular thing on bikes before this. You might put one on your race bike, but this was something you did yourself, and it was a button, not a switch. Most factories put a key switch on and figured you should use that to turn the engine off. The 350 had a factory kill switch on the handlebar. Our head mechanic thought he knew everything there was to know about motorcycles. He was servicing out a new 350 and was just about to start it for the first time when I came over, said Hi, put my hand on the switch and turned it off ! He growled at me and I walked away. For the next two or three hours he did just about everything you can do to a bike to get it to start... with no luck ! He walked away from it, well, shall we say a bit irritated ? I asked if I could try and he said yes... stupid kid... so I waited till he was about 50 feet away, turned the switch to on and it started on the first kick ! I revved it up several times and turned the switch off again ! What fun ! He came running back, and wanted to know what I had done. I said I just turned it on and it ran, which was true... kinda, sorta. Kick, kick, kick. It sure wouldn't start for him. He killed a lot of time on that one. When he did figure it out he never really said anything to me about it. I mean really, what does a stupid teenager know, right ? Do yourself a favor and check the kill switch first thing, OK?

SOLDERING

Sooner or later you are going to have to join two wires together. You want to add some lights or a wire gets damaged. Lots of reasons to do it. The big question is exactly how do we do it. There are actually only two ways to do it. The right way, soldering the wires, or the almost right way, which includes all the other ways. Clear as mud, right? Ok, this is what I mean. The best way, the way all the factories use, is to solder the wires together. This makes a strong, electrically sound connection. However, there are other ways that, in my experience, work almost as good. Let's start with the best method, Soldering.

Before you start you MUST have eye protection. Any moisture in a wire will EXPLODE into steam and send the hot, molten, solder into your face. Trust me... it will hurt.

WEAR EYE and FACE PROTECTION.

If you don't, that's OK, I don't care... It's not my eyes or face!

Soldering means you melt a lead-tin metal mix and use it to connect two other pieces of metal. For our purposes those two pieces of metal are copper wire. They tell me that rosin core solder is best for soldering electrical connections. This may be true for new wire, but we will seldom be working with new. Most times, at least one of the wires is old and somewhat corroded. Sometimes corroded wire just will not take the solder, but there is a cure.

Let's start with the basics. The drill is this.

1. Strip the wire of all insulation back as far (usually about 3/4"-1") as you need from the end to be soldered. Do this to both wires to be soldered.

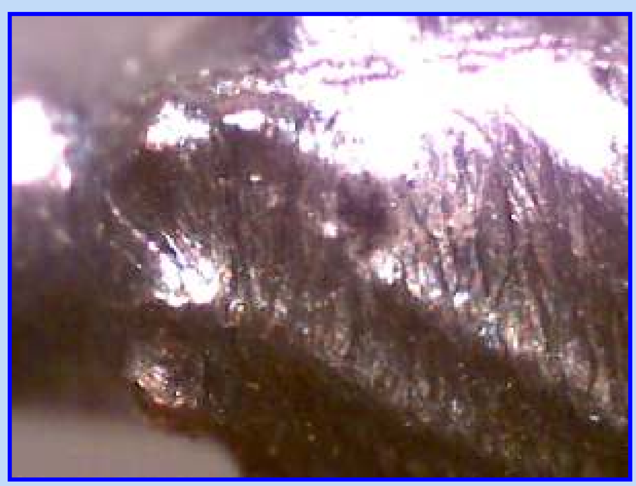
2. If you are going to use heat shrink tubing for insulation, put a length of it on the wire now.
3. Twist the wires together.
4. Apply some flux to twisted ends of wire.
5. Apply heat to the twisted tire with some kind of heat source, like a soldering iron or gun.
6. Touch the twisted wire with the solder as you heat it up. The solder will melt and flow into and between the twisted wire. When the solder looks good (nice and smooth, not balled up or with gaps in it), your done!



Sounds so easy doesn't it? But not always! Sometimes it works and sometimes it doesn't. On these times, the solder just will not stick. It won't "Flow". It balls up and looks bad. What to do now? If the wire is very badly corroded, take a knife or some sand paper and work over that wire. Scrape and/or sand all the corrosion off the wire. Now reflux the wire and try to solder it again. You will now find your success rate will now go up quite a bit, but every once in a while the solder just will not bond to the wire. When you run into the real nasties, there is only one cure... Acid. It's usually called "Tinners Fluid" and it contains Hydrochloric Acid and Zinc Chloride. Make sure you have your safety glasses on and remember it's acid and will burn you. With acid I'd say your success rate will be real close to 100%. If it looks real nice, with smooth flowing lines, you are good to go.

If you have a new tip on your soldering gun, or the old one has a dirty tip you will need to tin and/or clean it. I do this by heating up the tip, dip it in the flux (It will smoke!) and then putting a bit of new solder on it. I also like to keep a small jar of water near and dip the hot tip in it every once in a while. This pops the slag off the end of the tip. Some guys use a wet sponge. If you get too much solder on your project or want to get the old solder off, you can use a solder sucker. This is just a squeeze bulb that quickly sucks the excess solder away. Just keep the solder molten and suck away!

Here are some pictures with my trusty, garage sale, Intel, microscope.
You can see how smooth and flowing the solder is between the wire... kinda, sorta anyway.

A Good Solder Job.

60 X
A Good Solder Job.

Here the solder did not flow into the wire.
Redo with some Tinners Fluid.

10 X
A Bad Solder Job.

60 X
A Bad Solder Job.

If you are really into pretty, check out what is known as a Western Union/Lineman Splice.

Once the solder job is complete all it takes is a bit of insulating to complete the repair. Wrapping the bare, soldered, connection with electricians tape. This works pretty good but does look messy. The neatest looking insulation is heat shrink tubing. Simply pull the tubing over the joint and heat it with a flame from a lighter or match. When heated the tubing shrinks giving the repair a nice neat look. There's also other types of insulation like "Liquid Electrical Tape" and it does, indeed, work. However, it's not real neat looking. Me? I really like the heat shrink tubing.

A less pretty way to join two wires is with wire nuts. Wire nuts are just that... nuts that hold wires together. They come in lots of sizes. Just pick one that fits the size (Gauge) of wire you are working with, put the wires together and screw the wire nut on. This works very well. In fact you will find that a lot of the wiring in your house is held together with wire nuts. Not too pretty, but it does work well.

Another way of connecting wires is by crimping the wire in a wire fitting. You can get lots of different types of fittings. Fittings that connect three or more wires. Fittings that plug into other fittings. Fittings to clamp the wire to a nut or bolt. You can use special pliers to crimp these fittings to the wire or you can solder the wire to the fittings. Like wire nuts, I consider these crimped fittings to be rather gross, but I got to admit, they work well and, all in all, are reliable. They just don't look neat like a soldered fitting.

Last and certainly least, is a way I DO NOT recommend. DO NOT do it this way. I hate to admit this, but yes, I have done an evil thing. Once, many years ago, I was touring on my BMW. One of the wires going to my turn signal, on my fairing, pulled loose. So I just got in there and kind of twisted the two wires together, then positioned them so they couldn't ground out. ( the fairing was fiber glass, so that was easy. ) I was a million miles from nowhere and I had no electricians tape. So things weren't even taped. I really meant to fix it right, at the very next town, but, well, I sorta forgot. Every once in a while over the next two, three years and 20-30,000 miles I'd remember and say to myself, "you better fix that and soon." It was just other bikes had to get fixed first and, well, you know. However, it did work till the day I finally got in there and did it right. How's that saying go? Do as I say, not as I do.

"For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do."...
"O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord... "

BATTERIES

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand:
let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light."
Romans 13:12

¶ If your battery is dead you definitely have a work of darkness on your hands and a good, charged Battery does give you the armour of light, especially at night.

Motorcycle batteries have one thing in common, they are all too small. Even the biggest ones are too small for what they have to do. These days, it seems as though nobody believes in kick starters anymore, so a well taken care of battery is doubly important.

A battery will loose 1% of its charge per day just sitting there doing nothing. So you can see that you just can't park it, walk away, and come back in 4 or 5 months and expect it to work. Amazingly some of them do work after that kind of abuse, but a greater number of them don't. The cure? Trickle charge the battery at least once a month.

You can also use a maintenance type battery charger. This type of charger has electronic circuits that can detect when a battery is fully charged and cut the charging rate. When the battery charge goes down the maintenance charger senses it and starts charging again. This works very well.

If you don't, it's OK, I don't care. It's not my Battery!

I have found that it is best to use a 1 Amp or smaller trickle charger. Most motorcycle batteries are small and just can't take the high rate of charge that a 6 or 10 Amp charger gives. A general rule of thumb is that a battery should not be charged at more than 1/10 its rated amp capacity. As you can see, even a big motorcycle battery is maxed out by a 2 Amp charger.

Most of our Batteries are lead/acid types. With this type, the Battery should be charged till it is gassing (bubbling) freely, but then stop, don't boil all your water out! The temperature of a battery must not go over 112 degrees. If it does, the battery may be ruined. If the Battery gets hot during charging you are using a charger that has too high of amp rating. Change to a less powerful charger or stop charging and let it cool down.

If the electrolyte is below the plates add distilled water till the plates are covered and/or to the top of the fill line. You can use tap water but that may shorten the life of your battery because of impurities in the water. Electrolyte volume expands during recharge and excess may flood over battery covers if you fill above the battery fill line. Always unplug the charger before removing the leads from the battery and keep the battery away from flames and sparks. Remember all that gassing in the battery is producing Oxyhydrogen Gas. This can and will EXPLODE the battery, covering you with acid which will burn you like you will not believe. Baking soda will neutralize battery acid and water will rinse it off and dilute it. Mixing baking soda and water together works great. You can use it anywhere on the bike or yourself to remove and neutralize battery acid. Keep lots of both on hand.

Electrolyte Freezing Points

| Specific Gravity of Electrolyte | Freezing Point |
|---|---|
| 1.265 | -75°F |
| 1.225 | -35°F |
| 1.200 | -17°F |
| 1.150 | +5°F |
| 1.100 | +18°F |
| 1.050 | +27°F |

Do not try to charge a frozen battery. Let the battery come to 60° F before charging. Do not store a battery in a place with high temperatures. It can ruin the internal plates. A discharged Battery will freeze at a higher temperature then a fully charged one.

You might also want to make sure the water you use IS NOT salt water. It seems salt water and battery acid combine to make Chlorine Gas which will KILL you. Well, it is going to take a very strong solution of both to make any Chlorine Gas but the possibility of it happening is something to remember!

If You Don't, It's OK, I Don't Care.
It's Not My BODY And It Won't Hurt Me At All!

New Lead/Acid Batteries need to be charged for several hours or until they are freely gassing (bubbling), when they are first filled with Battery Acid. If you do not charge them, it could shorten their life in service. It is a good idea to loosen the individual Battery caps and make sure the vent tube is clear. Be sure to retighten the caps before putting the battery into service.

Lead/Acid Battery 2

Now-a-days you can get different types of batteries too. They are called all kinds of funny names like AGM, Jell type, GYZ, YTX and the like. These are all sealed type Batteries and you never have to put additional acid into them. They require special charging equipment and/or special charging technique to give them the initial charge. Depending on who you talk to, initial charging of a Sealed Type Battery should be at least 12.8 Volts to activate it but not over to 14.8 volts to prevent overcharging. However, if the Sealed battery had been charged and now has dropped below 11.5 volts and will not take a charge. You will need to charge it at 25 volts for five minutes. If it still will not take a charge, replace it. As you might guess, it is a good idea to keep the instructions that come with these Batteries and follow them. Follow the instructions that is, not the Battery. It would be very boring following the Battery. They never go anywhere interesting.

Some new Sealed Type Batteries come pre-filled and charged from the factory. They have a finite shelf life and must be put into service as soon as possible. If they sit for month or so they must be recharged. Other new sealed type Batteries come dry with a separate strange looking bottle of special high concentrate sulfuric acid. You fill them up with the acid and put on a non removable cap. Then you give them the initial activating charge.

All sealed and conventional Dry Batteries have an indefinite shelf life but only as long as they remain sealed and dry. That is, with the filler caps and red sealing cap or red sealing tape in place. Once the seals are broken or the Battery filled with acid the countdown on Battery life begins. When you remove the red caps you will usually hear a sucking sound as the Battery is unsealed.

If you want to upgrade your conventional Lead/Acid Motorcycle Battery to a Sealed Battery type make sure the stock charging system is capable of charging the battery. You need a regulated output of between 14 to 14.8 Volts. If your charging system cannot maintain that rate of charging it is not powerful enough for a Sealed Type Battery. A Conventional battery will be the only battery option for your motorcycle.

Yuasa GYZ Battery

Yuasa AGM Battery

If a battery is totally discharged, and if you goof and connect the plus and minus leads backwards you can change the polarity of the battery. Plus is minus, minus is plus. I had a customer who did that. That was a fun one till I figured it out. I just drained the battery to zip, recharged it the right way... worked just fine... go figure.

Here is a trick that works maybe 60-70 % of the time...You have a battery that is almost junk, will not hold a charge for very long. Put some Epsom salt, maybe 1/4 teaspoon, in each cell. Sometimes, not always, just sometimes, it will keep it going another 2-3 months. Won't hurt anything... the batteries junk anyway, but it might get you through till winter!

It's a funny thing, you can have a battery that reads 12.5 volts on a volt meter, but still will not light a small light bulb. Volts only tell you part of the story. The acid in the battery must be good. The Specific Gravity must be around 1.26 to 1.28 (in a fully charged battery) and you measure this with a hydrometer. The only trouble is this... there just isn't enough fluid in most motorcycle battery's to test with a big auto hydrometer. You must use one of the cheap, small, 5 ball, pencil types. Oh well, at least they work and between the two you will have the whole story.

I once worked in a shop that was responsible for a fleet of about 120 trucks and cars. Part of my job was making sure all the batteries were up to snuff on all those vehicles. I did a lot of battery charging, battery changing, checking fluid levels, checking voltages, and the like. I found that a battery could have a good volt reading and be bad. It could also have the right hydrometer reading and be bad. You needed to check both. Even with BOTH volts and hydrometer readings good, I had one or two that just plain would not crank an engine. Put a new battery in and problem solved. Perhaps they were sulfated badly. I could not tell as the cases were all black. This was quite rare. One or two out of hundreds and hundreds.

On motorcycle batteries you can usually look through the cases and see the white gook, Lead Sulfate, on the plates of the Battery. Once you see that Lead Sulfate is forming, that Battery is on it's way out.

Speaking of Lead Sulfate. I once met a guy who told me he could rejuvenate old Batteries. He told me he dumped the old acid, put in a water/baking soda mix, and waited till it stopped bubbling. He then drained the mix out and rinsed it out several times with plain water. Then he refilled the battery with new, fresh Battery Acid and charged the Battery.

Now everything I know about Batteries tells me this will not work. I tried it on an old Battery I had that was on it's way out and it did not work for me. However, get this. I know of several people who had this old guy work their Batteries over and they all reported THAT IT DID WORK. It sure did not for me but there were a lot of people that said it did for them. I never was able to watch him do it sooo who knows??? Just to really confuse you. I once has an old battery that I really needed to work 'cause I was too broke to get a new one. So I drained the old acid out and put new acid in. Nothing else. It charged up just fine and I used it for several more years. Again, go figure!

Remember too. On old British bikes, like Triumph, BSA, Norton, etc. They used a POSITIVE GROUND electrical system. It would behoove you to remember this if you have to work on one!

Batteries can be tested. They make Load-Bank Battery testers which put a load on the Battery and then read the voltage. This type of Battery Tester is around $40-$50 dollars. They also make a type of Battery tester that reads Internal Resistance within the Battery. I have one of the Internal Resistance type testers. Made by Motorola, it seems to work quite well without stressing out the Battery. I got mine back in the day from Moses brother's uncle. Actually, it was mail order from an ad in Popular Science Magazine. As I remember, I paid about $40 1970s dollars for it. I don't know where to get one today.

One last thought on Batteries. All of today's motorcycle engines have Electronic Ignition. A lot of these Ignitions require a full 12 volts to fire the spark plugs. It is possible to have enough amps in a weak Battery to turn the starter but NOT enough Volts to fire the Ignition System. So if it cranks but does not start and everything else seems good, test the Battery.

A good, fully charged Battery is needed for a lot of things on a motorcycle. It is indeed the armour of light.

SPARK PLUGS

---

Spark plugs....We can make this easy or we can make it hard. Let's start with easy. After running for a while normally, stop the bike and take the spark plugs out. They should look a light chocolate brown in color. If , black and sooty the engine is running too rich in the fuel departement or too cold of spark plug. If black and shiny (oily) they are oil fouled. If they are whitish you are running too lean a fuel mixture and/ or wrong ignition timing or too hot of spark plug. When you see this, your engine is about to blow up!!!

If you would like to see more Spark Plug Images... 29 to be exact, Click Here. Be patient, it takes awhile to load !

Now the harder stuff. A spark plug does not make your engine run hotter or colder. The terms hot or cold refer to the temperature of the tip of the spark plug itself. The plug must keep a temperature of, between 752 and 1652 degrees Fahrenheit. If it gets too hot it can fire off the air/fuel mixture at the wrong time. This can cause detonation and/or pinging which will put a hole in your piston... not good. If it gets too cold it will not burn off the carbon and fuel deposits on it's tip and the plug will foul out (stop working) not good either.

The heat range of a spark plug is controled by the length of the center electrode. A longer one is hotter because it takes longer for the heat to flow through it to the cylinder head. As you might think the cooler plug has a short center electrode.

To get a true plug color reading you must run the engine,on a level road, at the throttle setting that you want to test, for about a mile, then kill the ignition, pull the clutch in and coast to a stop. Then pull the plug and look at it. This could be a real thrill on most of the newer street bikes.

As the engine ages and more oil gets past the rings a hotter plug may be in order. If you ride at low speeds all the time a hotter plug will keep the plugs from fouling. If high speeds are your thing, a cooler plug may be just the ticket. Don't be afraid to pull that plug out and give 'er a read!

Introduction

The appearance of the firing-end of a spark plug graphically reflects the condition of an engine, the suitability of the spark plug heat rating, and whether or not the carburetor and ignition timing are properly adjusted.

This pamphlet is intended to assist you in correctly choosing your spark plugs and determining the performance condition of your engine.

■Even plugs which present a good appearance, such as those shown in Figures ⑥~㉑, can quite often be covered with a lead deposit which causes misfiring.

■Wet plug firing-ends such as shown in Figures ❶~❷ are normally attributed to one of the following causes:

(1) Excessive choking.
(2) Trouble within the ignition system.
(3) Oil pumping past worn piston rings and valve guides.

■The causes of sooty plugs like those shown in Figures ❸, ❹ and ❺ are usually the result of:

(1) A plug with a too high heat rating is being used and the plug firing-end does not reach its self-cleaning temperature (above 400~450℃) due to light load conditions.
(2) Use of a too rich air-fuel mixture of richer than 8:1~10:1
(3) Trouble in the ignition system.
(4) Improperly functioning cooling system resulting in excessive cooling.

■The firing-end burns illustrated in Figures ㉕, ㉖ and ㉗ may be a result of:

(1) Too low heat rating, permitting the plug to exceed the highest limit for optimum operating temperature of over 850~1000℃ due to excessively heavy load operations.
(2) A too lean air-fuel mixture.
(3) Ignition timing too over advanced.
(4) Abnormal combustion such as knocking.
(5) Cooling system trouble, which causes engine overheating.

■Overheating conditions shown in Figures ㉘ and ㉙ are due to intense knocking and pre-ignition following situations identical to those in Figures ㉕, ㉖ and ㉗ where increased temperature of the spark plug firing-end results in melting of the electrode.

ELECTRIC STARTERS

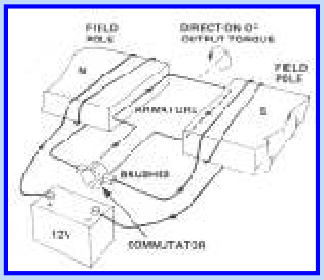
I started riding in 1965. Most of the bikes then used kick starters. Not all, in fact there have been electric starters from way back. I have a book dated 1915 that shows an Indian motorcycle with an electric starter. It's just that they were not real popular. All the movies back then had the big, bad, nasty, bad guy, motorcyclists run out to their bikes and kick start them. Now they run out and push a button... It's just not the same. Anyway, around 1968 Honda brought out the CB350 twin. I was working in a Honda shop at the time. All the New Honda 350 owners would kick start their bikes. As it turned out, Honda had wanted them to use the electric starter and thought everyone would, but they didn't ! Some of the internal kick starter parts were made too weak and broke from so much use. We did a lot of warranty work on those 350s but, from that time on, the "Button" really took off.



It seems everyone liked pushing that button. In fact, kick starters are slowly disappearing, except, maybe, for dirt bikes. I don't particularly like this trend. Every battery I've ever owned has, sooner or later, failed. That's the nature of the beast. It may take years but sooner or later it will fail. It would be nice to have a backup but, I guess we just will have to live with no kick starters.

The electric starter is just a very powerful DC electric motor. The starter usually has two or more big field coils, also called Poles or Pole Coils, bolted to the inside of the outer starter shell or Yoke. Sometimes instead of field coils there will be magnets instead. When energized, these field coils act as magnets. The inner shaft of the starter is called an Pole Core or Armature. This Armature has a bunch of wire coils. Each end of these coils leads to a commutator. Pieces of carbon, with a wire cast into them, press against these commutators. These pieces of carbon are called Brushes. The wires in the Brushes are connected to the big thick battery cable. Again, when energized with 12 volts of power, they become magnets.

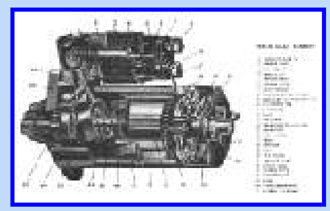
Now magnets do some interesting things. They have two poles, one on each end. One is the North pole and the other, the South pole. The North Pole is where Santa Clause lives. At least that's what they tell me, but I've looked at a lot of starters and I've never found him ! The poles attract each other if they are the different (North and South) and repel each other if they are the same (North to North, South to South). This is real handy for a starter. The coils of wire on the Field Coils and on the Armature act as very powerful electro magnets, attracting and repelling each other. The brushes send 12 volt power to the proper coils on the Armature through the commutators. All this pushing and pulling turns the starter motor round and round. The flow of DC voltage causes the starter to turn in one directon. Reverse the DC current flow and the starter will turn in the opposite direction. This is a good thing because much as I hate to admit it, pushing a button is a lot easier then kicking that old dog over.

A few years ago a guy came in with a XR350. It has a hot cam in it, high compression piston, was bored to 400 or so ccs and had a monster carb. It was in an absolutely beautiful, silver plated Reynolds frame. At one time it was a real state of the art motocrosser. The guy seemed to think there was something goofy with the carb, but I could find nothing wrong. He claimed it used to start easy but now it was hard. I weigh over 200 pounds and I'm used to kick starting big bikes. I could get it started... barely ! The owner weighed about 110 pounds and could barely turn the engine over. A little button to push would sure have been nice.

Starters take a lot of power. Just a regular electric switch will not work because the wires have to be so big to handle the high Amp load. When you think of Amps, think of Volume. Think of Volts as pressure. You can have a lot of pressure in a small wire, but it must be contained. That is why the actual wire is so small to the spark plug, but it has a lot of thick insulation around it to contain the 18,000 to 30,000 volts. Conversely the starter wire has very low voltage, only 12. However, it has a lot of volume in Amps. As much as 120 amperes, or more, of current. The insulation is quite thin, but the wire is very thick. To switch the power on and off in this thick wire we have to have a special switch, a Solenoid. The Solenoid uses a small electro magnet to draw a big heavy switch closed. This gives power to the starter through the big, heavy starter wires. The power needed to work the little electric magnet is small so a regular sized wire is used to power it from a switch on the handlebar. Other safety, cut out switches can also be in this small starter button wire.



The starter, strong as it is, is not strong enough to turn the engine over so we have to gear it down, usually about 14 to 1. It can be with just a group of gears or with sprockets and chain. The ones running a sprocket and chain will require you to pull the side cover to remove the starter because the sprocket falls off when you pull the starter motor from the crankcase. If the starter train uses all gears you can usually pull the starter without pulling the side cover. Sometimes the starters also have planetary gears within the starter Yoke or body.

Starters use two ways to engage the spinning starter to the engine. A starter clutch or a pivot and solenoid combination. The starter clutch uses steel balls or rollers that lock the crank shaft to the starter gears when turned in one direction and freewheel when turned in the opposite direction. This allows the starter to lock up solid when starting the engine, and then to release when the engine starts. Most of the Japanese bikes use this method. The pivot and solenoid method uses the solenoid to put power to the starter motor and, at the same time, lever the starter nose gear into the clutch or flywheel gears. Harley Davidsons use this method as do a lot of European makes and almost all cars. There is a third way, but I have not seen it used on motorcycles. This method uses big, wide, thread like channels cut in the end of the armature. The starter gear rides, up and down, in these channels. Because of the angle of these channels, the starter gear is thrown out to the end of the armature when the starter turns. It then engages a big ring gear, usually on the flywheel, to start the engine. When the starter stops, a spring pushes the starter gears back out of engagement. I haven't seen this type of starter used much on motorcycles. I do see it used a lot on lawn tractors and lawn mowers.

If you bike won't start the first thing to check is the battery. Is it in good condition and fully charged ? See the Battery Page. If the battery tests good and the solenoid clicks at you, the solenoid might be corroded inside. To check, bypass the it. A real down and dirty way is to just connect the two big posts on the solenoid with a (OLD) screwdriver. There will be lots of sparks so have a good Fire Extinguisher handy. If nothing happens when you do this, the starter wires are broken or corroded, the starter is dead, or the starter is not grounded right. Try bypassing the everything. Hook a heavy jumper cable straight from the battery to the starter. If nothing happens, most likely the starters dead. You can also run a voltage drop test, to test the starter cables. See the Electrical tests page. If the starter works when you jumper the two terminals then you need a new solenoid. If the starter works and the solenoid does not click, the solenoid might be dead or it might be that the starter button is corroded and not making good ground or the wire going to the button may be broken. Sometimes there is a fuse in the starter system, be sure to check it. Also, on new bikes, big brother has now put in all kinds of "Safety" switches to protect us from ourselves. I don't particularly like them, however, I do have at least one rather vivid memory of trying to turn left with the side stand of my Norton down ! Anyway, check all those switches before you go and replace starters, solenoids, etc. They are usually on the clutch lever, side stand, and neutral switch. Older bikes don't have these "Helper" switches so their wiring is a bit simpler.

Starters are usually held on with two bolts. Remove those two bolts, give a pull and out it comes. Most of them have a rubber O-ring seal to keep the oil in. so it may take a bit of a pull to get them off. Be sure and check in the shop manual to see if you have a chain drive type. If you pull the starter on them, the sprocket and chain will fall down in the side cover. You must remove the side cover to get the chain and sprocket back on.

After you have the starter off look at it. There should be line markings on the top and bottom and on the yoke. This is so on reassembly, everything on the inside will match up right. This is important. If there are no marks that you can find, make your own with a felt tip marker. More then once someone has brought in a non-working starter, assembled wrong. They gag at the price of a new one, and then think I'm a genius when I turn an end 180 degrees and it works.

As you take it apart look for:

1. Oil, water, or rust in the starter. If there is, clean it up and replace all the seals, o-rings and Gaskets.
2. Wires not connected right or not connected securely.
3. Carbon dust or dirt from the brushes short circuiting things.
4. Armature is not concentric.
5. Brushes too short.
6. A rough or dirty Commutator.
7. Is the Mica gap, between the segments (Bars) of the Armature, filled with carbon ?
8. Is the spring for the carbon brush weak and not pushing the brush against the Armature ? You can check this with a spring balance. Normal pressure is about 500 grams or 1 pound, give or take, up or down, more or less, kinda sorta.

Now I could go into turning the commutator (In a lathe) and undercutting the Mica gap (Hack saw blades work good, go down about 0.3mm or .012", and chamfer the edges a bit so the brushes don't get damaged.) but unless you are rebuilding lots of starters, you just will not need to do this. Here are some things to consider. Starters today are made of good quality materials and are quite reliable. If treated right they will last a long time. In times past, materials where not quite as good and the motorcycle was looked upon as a legitimate form of everyday transportation. Today that's no longer true. What do I mean ? Well, in the old days Bikes where use as regular transportation. They where run every day. If you had an electric starter, it would have been made out of the best materials available and you would be using it a lot. Trouble is, those materials where not as good as we have today. Normal wear would have occurred more rapidly then would happen today. This would have necessitated the truing up of an out of round commutator, cutting the Mica gap, etc. Today, we ride our bikes a bit when the good weather hits and then stick them in a corner and forget about them. When we do go to start them, the carbs are all gummed up and we crank and crank and crank that puppy and it still won't start. All this cranking tends to burn out the coils in the starter before there is a lot of wear on the Armature. Our starters, today, wear out from rust and abuse. Not from good, honest wear. So what does all that mean ? Simply this. If your starter goes on the blink, check the cables, solenoid, take it apart, clean the rust out, but odds are a new set of brushes is not going to fix it. If, with a good battery, it will just barely turn the engine over, you probably need a new or rebuilt starter... and they're not cheap. To top it off, a lot of motorcycle manufacturers don't sell the armatures or the field coils separately.

Check the continuity between all of the commutator segments. There should be continuity. If one pair gives a high reading (No continuity) there may be an open circuit. Now check for continuity between the segments and the armature shaft. There should be none. In the old days, they had a tool called a "Growler" to test the armatures, but again, if your not doing a lot of them, it's not much use to have one. If the commutator looks a bit dull or burned, it won't hurt to shine it up a bit with a fine grade of sand paper. They say don't use Emory paper. There is a chance the hard particles will become embedded in the surface of the commutator and wear the brushes out (Like sand paper has no hard particles ?). However, I'm sitting here looking at three different starter manuals and one says use Emory paper (Chilton), one says don't, use sandpaper instead (Haynes) and one says don't use any (Honda Factory). Instead use a file ! Me ? I usually use sandpaper. It's cheaper, but if the truth be known, I really use whatever fine paper my hand hits first when I reach inside my sandpaper storage box. However, the file thing sounds even cheaper, provided you don't file any flat spots on the commutator ! Take your pick, I really don't think it matters which method you use.

Check for continuity between the starter cable or terminal bolt, on the side of the starter, and the brush that is wired to the end of the stator coil, also called field or pole coil. That is the coil (s) bolted to the yoke or starter body. If there is no continuity, the wire is shorted and the coil needs to be replaced.

Most starter motors have four poles (field coils) and four brushes. Some have only two brushes, but that really loads the brushes heavily. Some sparking, while running, at the brushes, is normal. Heavy sparking should be looked into.

Starter brushes need to be measured and compared with the minimum measurement given in the shop manual. If you don't have this spec, just look art them. If they "Seem" too short, be they probably are ! If they "Seem" long enough and there is good spring pressure, pushing them against the commutator, they should be OK. If you can't get the right replacement brush, try to find ones that are a about the right size, only bigger, and file them down. Carbons carbon so they should work OK. The important thing is that the carbon brushes press tightly against the commutator. If they don't, the current will not pass through them properly.

Don't run the starter, on the bench, more then a second or two without a load on it. They can really rev up and they are not designed to run at high speeds.

Don't ever run an electric starter, under load, for a long period of time. Run them no longer then five or ten seconds. They heat up and can burn out one of their coils. Run it for five seconds and then stop and wait for one minute before running it again. This lets the starter cool down. If it won't start, find out why. Don't just keep cranking it.

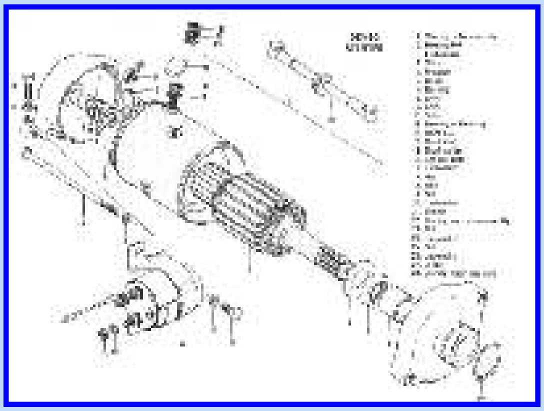
Lastly, a starter can be used as a generator too. Push current through it in one direction and it's a starter, spin it and it's a generator. Yamaha, Suzuki and others used them, not to mention that 1915 Indian. Yamaha used a lot of those on their AT1 125cc dirt bikes with electric start. They were made back in the 1970s but I'm still seeing them, even now in 2004. The page that covers them is Here. I've seen them on Suzuki's too, and read about Kawasaki's having them, so you just might run into them.

Here are some exploded starter views for you to study.



Double lastly, here are some thoughts on the old Yamaha Virago starter problem.

GENERATOR/ELECTRIC STARTERS (DYNAMOS)

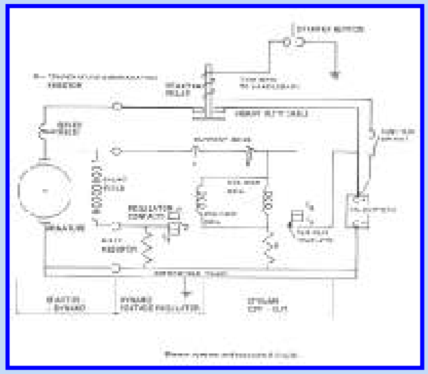
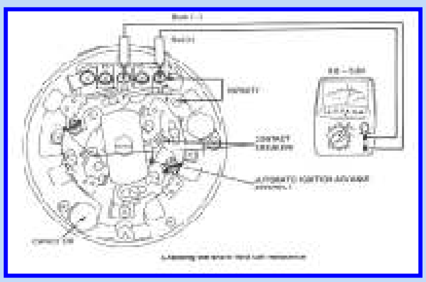
These little 100cc-185cc bikes are real easy to kick over. I can see no need for electric starters on them, but a lot of them do. The factories must have thought this was a good selling point. The starter/generator (sometimes called a Starter/Dynamo) is located on the end of the crankshaft and has the ignition points mounted to it too. You will only find these on small bikes because there is no gear reduction and they don't put out a lot of power. They are quite complicated. They were seen on these little bike up to the mid 1970s. It would seem they are quite reliable because I'm still seeing them, but they are starting to disappear.

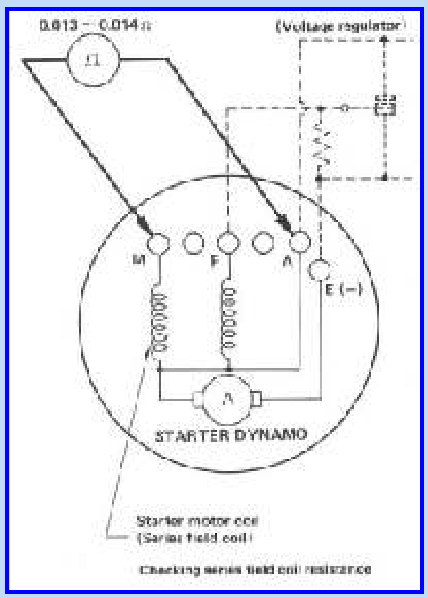


Usually you will only run into these bikes as a cheap kids bike. If something major is wrong, you will not want to pay the money for the part. Why pay $200 to get a $100 bike going? You probably can still get a lot of the parts but, it's just not worth it.

If you do get a hold of one of these bikes you will need a good, fully charged 12 volt battery, in the system, for it to run. Hit the button and away you go. If nothing happens check and make sure the brushes are in good condition. Also check the grounds and all the wire connections for corrosion. Below are some wiring diagrams, showing how this starter works and how it changes from starter to a Generator/Dynamo.

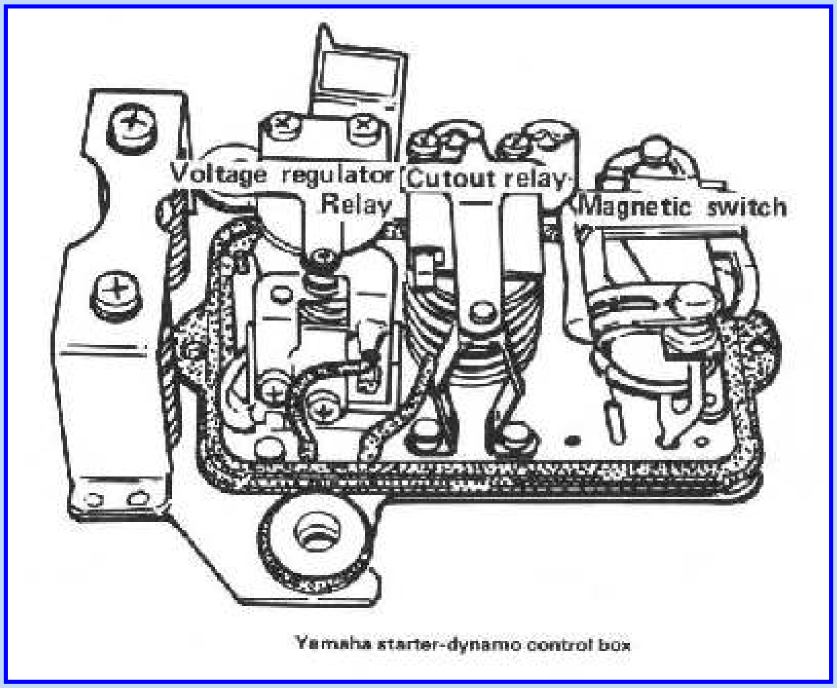


Starter/Generator (Dynamo) Wiring.



Starter/Dynamo and Associated Circuits.

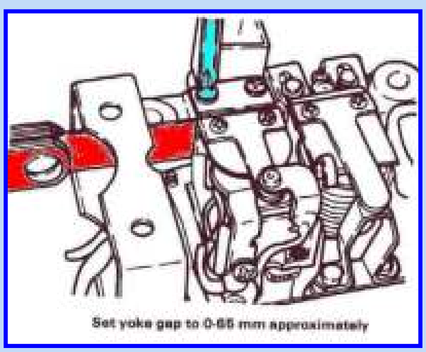
The starter/generator has coils wired in series for the starting of the engine and then it also has coils wired in Parallel or Shunt, to generate power once the engine is running. All this means, to us, is that there are two sets of coils to test. The coils can't be grounded (Shorted out) to the housing they ride in or have a broken or burned out internal wire that prevents current from passing through them.



Checking the shunt field coil resistance.

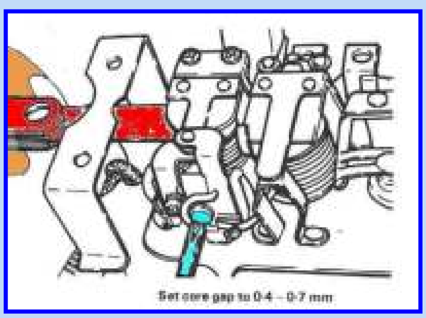
Checking series field coil resistance.

The armature is tested like any armature. Continuity between the commutators and no continuity to the armature shaft.



There is no rectifier because this thing generates DC current but a lot depends on the voltage regulator. It keeps the DC volts to the battery under control and charges and changes the different coils in the starter/generator/dynamo unit.

Yamaha starter-dynamo control box



Now things start to get kind of complicated. You can change the settings in the voltage regulators because most of these things were made before anyone ever thought of solid state electronics. They usually come set right, from the factory. If you have to get into them, it usually means something is worn out, broken or goofy! You really need to run down a new one but, the bike just isn't worth the expense, unless you are restoring one. Yeah, right. We're going to win best of show with a great Yamaha 125cc AT1?

OK, if you really are going to restore one, you need to find an original factory shop manual so you can get all the settings, wires to the correct connectors, and everything else, set right. If not, and you still want to get the bike running 'cause the kid's buggen you for a cheap ride, Here are some settings you might want to try.

Now if everything just does not work, and the rest of the bike looks pretty good (Good compression, carb clean, tires OK, rear chain looks good, Gas tank doesn't leak, etc.) let me suggest another way. The crank on the old AT1s was the same part number for the electric start model as the magneto model. Just pull off all the electric start stuff and put on the flywheel, coil plate and coils and the ignition coil off another magneto Ign. AT1. There are still a number of these old dogs lying around. Look for an old broken one you can get parts off of.

I've always been able to get the electric starters to work, so I don't know for sure that everything will fit but, I'm 90% sure it will work and it's really the only cheap way out. Ignitions off a Yamaha 175cc CT1 might work too. I have pulled the head, piston and jug off a 175 and put it on a 125 and it worked just fine!

Switching the Ignitions might work on the Kawasaki's and Suzuki's too, but I can't say for sure.

VIRAGO ELECTRIC STARTERS

Starter clutch – XV750 and 920 models

A lot of Yamaha Virago models have a problem with their starters. Especially the twin rear shock models. Hit the button and it sounds like a bunch of marbles are knocking around in your crankcase. Yamaha put out all kinds of cures that sometimes worked and sometimes didn't. Most of those cures involved adding shims to the starter or changing this gear or that. The factory has a shim kit and apparently it does work on some bikes. It seems they've changed the starter too. I took some pictures of the Yamaha updates on my micro-fiche and here they are. They are big files because I wanted to give you the best picture, so give them time to load. It would seem that you must add these shims in the starter. Yeah, I know. But you're the one wanting to quiet this pig down... and a lot of guys and gals really love these bikes !

Virago Starter Update #2

Now I have never really worked over a Virago starter because everyone wants it done quick, cheap, and with an iron clad guarantee. That just ain't gonna happen, at least not with me. So no one has ever wanted to pay me to really do a job on one.

But you have one, and want to fix it cheap, so here goes. Blind leading the blind, I guess. I'd start by making sure all the usual stuff is right. Battery charged, cable connections clean, that kind of thing. Then I'd put in the shim kit from Yamaha. If the noise is still there, I'd try a little trick one Internet reader sent to me. He claimed this did the trick. Add a very small hose clamp to one of the friction clips, to give it a better grip on it's shaft. Now the only trouble with this is that he didn't say which clip to put the hose clamp on... there are two of them. I guess I should have asked, but I didn't because I don't really care. Nobodies ever going to pay me to fix one and I'm sure not going to get one... well, probably not, anyway. Have you run an Internet search on this problem? There sure are a lot of pages up about it. I haven't run across this particular hose clamp fix so I present it here. Have fun!

ENGINE COMPRESSION TESTING

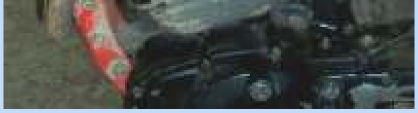
¶ You can have the hottest cam, perfect ignition timing, clean carburetor, and fresh gas, but without good compression... that engine is not going to run. The first thing I do, when a non running bike comes in, is to run a compression test. If the engine does not have at least 100 PSI (Pounds per Square Inch) in each cylinder, I won't work on it, except to rebuild it. It would be a waste of the customers money if I "Tried" to make it run.



100 PSI is the minimum. It should be 125 to 150, and some engines have as high as 170 PSI or more. Yes, an engine can run with lower compression, but it will run very poorly. I've seen old, big, multi-cylinder outboards run with as little as 65 PSI and some lawnmowers run even less. However, for motorcycle engines 100 PSI is really on deaths doorway. Use your time to rebuild the engine, not to get another five or ten hours of life (maybe!) out of it.

The drill is simple. Remove all the spark plugs, ground all the spark plug wires or turn off the ignition, if possible. Screw or push the end of the gauge into the spark plug hole, open the throttle wide, and kick away. I like to kick (or turn the engine over with the electric starter) about four to five times and then check the gauge. Remember the reading, release the pressure on the gauge, by pushing the little releases, and do it again. If the reading changes, do it till you get several readings that are all the same. That would be the correct pressure.

When you remove the spark plug, it might be a good idea to loosen the plug a bit and then blow out and around the plug with compressed air. This is to blow out any bits of dirt that might fall into the engine through the spark plug hole, as you remove the plug. This is an especially good idea on dirt bike engines with deep, forward facing, spark plug holes.

Technically, You should do this when the engine is hot, but I don't like burning my fingers, so I always do it when the engine is cold. A hot engine would probably read a few pounds more, but a cold reading will tell you what you need to know. Run the test on each cylinder. All the cylinders on an engine should be within ten pounds of each other. In other words, a four cylinder engine reading 145 PSI, 150 PSI, 147 PSI, and 155 PSI would be considered good. If it had 135 PSI, 150 PSI, 150 PSI and 155 PSI, it would not be considered good. Something is starting to go wrong with that first cylinder.

People tell me "I have a mis-fire on my four cylinder Motorcycle. I cleaned the Carburetors three times and it still does not run right. What gives?" This gives. If one cylinder has low compression the engine will NEVER run right. Run a Compression Test first. Always, always, always run the Compression Test FIRST.

OK, you have a cylinder that reads low. Is it valves or rings, leaking that compression? A quick, down and dirty test is this. Squirt some oil, maybe a teaspoon's worth, into the cylinder through the spark plug hole. Now run the test again. The oil will hold compression for several turns of the engine. If your retest with oil gives higher compression, you will know the rings are worn. If there is no change in compression, it's the valves that are leaking. If you think it's the valves, it's always a good idea to check the valve tappet clearance. If the valves are tight, they could be leaking compression. If the valves are tight, reset them to the proper clearance and test again. if your compression comes back don't thank your luck, thank Jesus! He just saved you an engine rebuild.

Just to make things interesting, a number of the newer, big single, dirt bikes have an automatic, spring loaded, Compression Release located on the Exhaust Camshaft. These bikes will have a normal compression pressure that is quite low, because of the Compression Release. For example, the Kawaski KLX650A should read 50-85 PSI. Kawasaki KLX650C is 57-87 PSI. Honda XR650R is 87 PSI with decompressor applied and 160 PSI with decompressor not applied. It jumps all over the place so check your shop manual before you rip the top end off thinking the compression is too low.

Once the engine starts, the compression goes way up as the centrifugal force acts on the spring loaded Compression Release giving the engine full power. With a low starting compression the engine can be easily Kick Started. Same with an Electric Starter. The stress on the Electric Starter is far less so a smaller, lighter Electric Starter can be used.

Automatic Compression Release #1

Automatic Compression Release #2

This test is one of the most important tests you can make. Time and time again, I see people work for hours trying to get an engine to run or to run good. I ask "Did you run a compression test?" they say "Oh, it has compression" I ask again, "Did you do an actual test? What was the PSI?" They say "It feels like it does." So they run a test, and guess what? No, or little, compression. Don't waste you time on a dead engine. Run a compression test first thing.

If you have an engine with Constant Velocity carbs the test is still done the same, with the throttles wide open. You might think they would read different, but they don't seem to.

Sometimes the spark plug holes are kind of weird in the size department and you will have to use an adapter on the end of the compression tester gauge. You can get a lot of different types of adapters, but sometimes you may need a special adapter that no one sells. You can try to use the push type of tester. It has a rubber tip that fits into the spark plug hole and is held there by hand pressure. Sometimes, due to the position of the spark plug, that will not work. If you can't buy the right adapter you can make one out of an old spark plug.

To make one, simply take a spark plug that fits the engine you want to test and remove the part of the metal base that is crimped over the ceramic portion of the spark plug. You can do this with a hack saw, and the crimped part will come loose like a ring. Now you can knock the ceramic part of the plug out with a drift from the nose end of the plug. This leaves you with just the metal portion of the plug. Now you can cut threads inside the end with a tap, like the one above, or weld it up with metal and redrill it to the right hole size if the plug is too big to tap as is.

If you don't have a compression gauge handy, all is not lost. A down and dirty way to do it is to simply press your thumb over the spark plug hole and hold it there tight. Now have someone kick the engine over. No matter how hard you push your thumb, the compression pressure should blow it off the hole smartly. If it won't, you don't have enough compression to start the engine.

Four Stroke Compression Releases

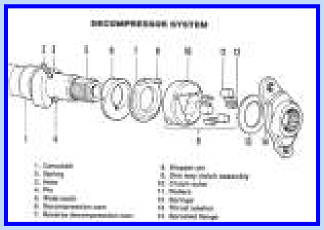
A compression release allows you to ease the piston over Top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke. This allows you to kick the engine over easier. This is usually done by a lever that prevents the exhaust valve from fully seating. Then the compression pressure, of the compression stroke, leaks out through the partially open exhaust valve. This allows the piston to easily move past Top-Dead-Center and into the correct position for easy starting.

The compression release always opens the exhaust valve and not the intake valve. There is a reason for this. It's not a real good idea to vent possibly hot, and explosive gases, back into the intake track where very bad things could happen.

There are many ways to activate a compression release.

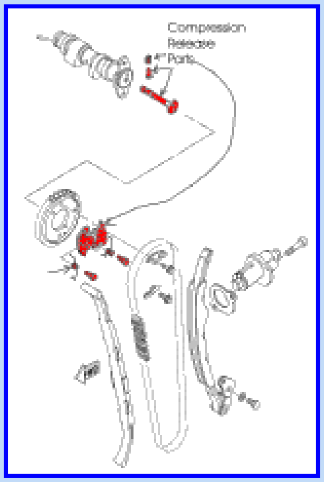
1. A lever on the handlebar, connected by a cable, to the exhaust valve lifter.
2. A cable connected to the exhaust valve lifter, that is automatically operated by a cam on the kickstarter.
3. Both a handlebar lever and an automatic cam on the kickstarter, lift the exhaust valve, by a cable.
4. A lever on the cylinder head connected directly to the exhaust valve lifter.
5. A spring loaded cam or lever on the main exhaust cam.

Exhaust Valve Lifter.



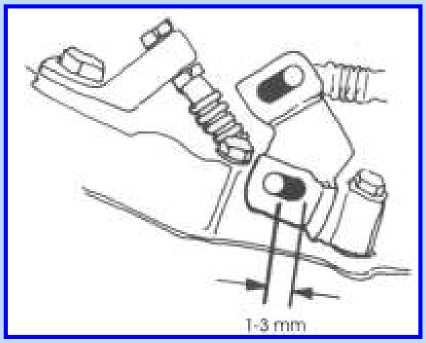
Kickstarter Cam Compression Release.

Cam Marker.

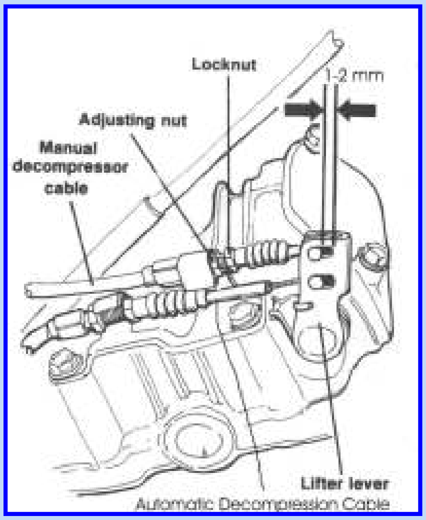


Removable Exhaust Cam Lifter. [Yamaha 650 Twin]

To Make it easier to set the piston in the right position Yamaha even put a cam position marker on the cylinder head of their 500cc singles. Just bring the piston up on the compression stroke, pull the compression release lever and continue pushing the kickstart lever till you see the cam marker in the window on the side of the cylinder head. Then release the compression release lever and kickstart the engine.



Some engines like the Honda XR400R and some Yamaha ATV engines have a spring loaded compression release right on the camshaft. When the engine stops, a spring moves a special cam to slightly open the exhaust valve. When the engine starts, centrifugal weights move the special cam, releasing the exhaust valve to run normally.



Internal cam spring and centrifugal compression releases may or may not have adjustment. Check your shop manual.

All cable activated compression releases need about one to three millimeters of free play. Check for this play when the cables are in the relaxed position. In other words when the compression releases are not activated. If there is no play in the cables, the exhaust valve may be held open. If the engine will run at all it will run with poor engine performance and this running will cause the valve seats to burn out.

Honda XL500

Some of the three and four wheel ATVs have a lever operated compression release located right on the cylinder head.

If you engine does not have a compression release it sometimes is possible to add an aftermarket one. This may require you to remove the cylinder head, machine a hole and trim some cooling fins. Take care where you put this hole. The compression release will vent hot gases if used when the engine is hot. If the hot gases hit a painted surface it will ruin the paint. There are also aftermarket compression releases that require no machining but they are bigger in size. These aftermarket compression releases are usually fitted to modified Harley-Davidson engines.

Top

Two Stroke Compression Releases

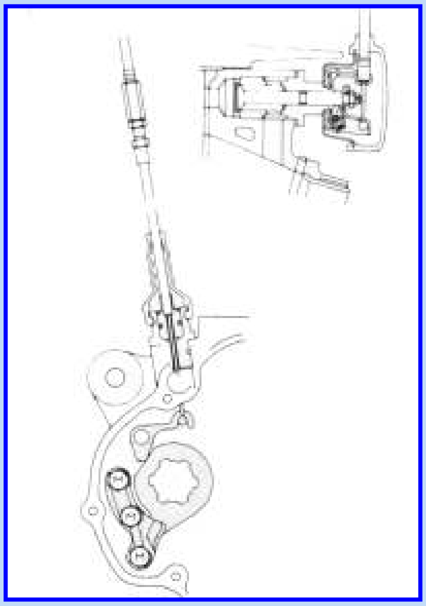
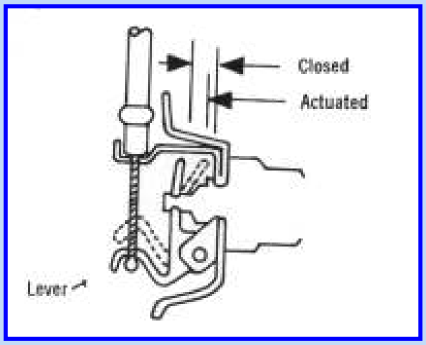
A two stroke compression release allows you to bleed some of compression pressure off from a big bore two stroke engine. This allows you to kick the engine over easier.



On a two stroke, three ways are used to accomplish this.

1. A lever on the handlebar, connected by a cable, to an exhaust valve screwed into the head.
2. A cable connected to an exhaust valve on the cylinder, that is automatically operated by a cam on the kickstarter.
3. A lever on the handlebar, connected by a cable, to an exhaust valve screwed into the cylinder.



You will notice that the two stroke can use a compression release in the cylinder OR the cylinder head. When the compression release is in the cylinder it will release the pressure in the cylinder until the piston covers the port hole in the cylinder. This cuts the compression in direct relation to where the port is in the cylinder. The closer to the cylinder head the hole is the less compression there will be. The further away it is from the cylinder head the higher the compression.

Decompression Valve Assembly

Kickstarter Cam.

Compression Release Adjustment.

Yamaha DT360-400 singles used this type of compression release. The Maico 501 and some Suzukis' had something similar too. You could also make it fit other big two strokes that didn't have compression releases by cutting some fins out of the way and drilling and tapping a hole in the cylinder.

Some 1960s and 70s two stroke engine heads have two spark plug holes. You can put a compression release in the extra hole.

The compression release can be used for something else on two stroke engines... an engine brake. This was all the rage in the late 1960s and early to mid 1970s. By putting in the right kind of compression release the engine would act as an engine brake if activated when the engine was running. There were problems with this. If you did not have the right design, the engine could draw in dirt and the hot engine gases could weaken the decompresser spring.

All this talk about two stroke compression releases and engine brakes is not real relevant to the new two strokes we have today. This is because the modern two stroke has absolutely gigantic ports. This keeps the compression pressure at slow, kickstarting speeds quite low but once the engine gets revving things really pick up and high horse power is achieved through high engine RPM and the unique port design of the two stroke engine.

The new, super efficient, disk brakes also work much better then the old drum brakes. This makes any extra engine braking with a compression release not worth the extra maintenance. However, it is good to know about them. A lot these engines are still running out there and you may run into them.

Leak Down Testing

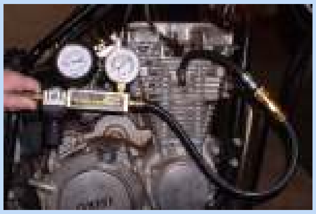
Leak down testing is simply measuring the rate of air leakage past the rings and valves of an engine. The less air leakage the better. Aircraft mechanics have used this test for a long time.

The drill is this. Set the engine at Top-Dead-Center and attach the leak down tester hose to the sparkplug hole. Lock the crankshaft in place. The tester is attached to an air supply and set at 100 psi (Pounds per square inch). You then connect the tester to the tester hose and read how much air is leaking out of the cylinder. If it is say, 10 psi, that is good. It's holding 90 %. If it's leaking 30 psi, that is 70 %. That is not so good. Sounds easy, doesn't it?

Like I said, mechanics have been using this type of test on piston aircraft engines for many years. With that big propeller on one end of the crankshaft it's much easier to lock the engine in one position for testing. Also, because of insurance concerns, aircraft engines tend to be somewhat static in their development. In other words they want tried and true, not hot and new. This means the aircraft engine types have been around a long time and are very well known. You run the leak down tests on a regular basis and if one cylinder on an engine tests low it is pulled and new rings or a valve job fixes the problem. Also aircraft engines run at low engine speeds, around 3-4 thousand RPM. The test is a routine part of a ridged scheduled maintenance program that all aircraft engines follow.

Motorcycle engines are a bit different. The cylinders are much smaller and the RPMs much higher. Each cylinder may or may not be easy to remove. Regular maintenance? Yeah, right, sure!



So does that invalidate the test? Absolutely not! It just makes it harder to make an accurate test and to interpret it.

On motorcycle engines locking the engine can be fun. If the engine is in the frame you can put it in gear and apply the rear brake. If the engine is on the bench, things are a bit harder. Now you have to lock that engine. If you use a wrench on the crankshaft bolt be sure to use a long one with lots of leverage. If you used a regular sized wrench you will find that the 100 psi of air pressure will apply a tremendous amount of twisting pressure to that wrench. You must be ready for that!

Even if you are ready, with a tight grip on the wrench, the crank might turn. Yes indeed, it might turn and cut your hand on the crank case like a scissor and you might get mad, say some bad words and throw that wrench across the room and stick it in the wall! Of course, a master mechanic of my stature would never do that and besides it did not stick in the wall. It bounced off. If I had thrown it which I did not! Anyway, you get the idea!

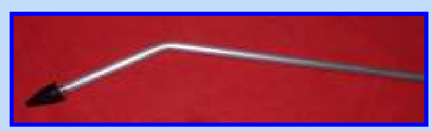
Some leak down testers use low pressure. They work on the same basic idea as the higher pressure testers but have the advantage of low pressure. You don't have to lock the crank.

So now we have a test figure and it is probably lower then what we would have likes to see. What exactly does it tell us? Lycoming engines say the orifice which the air passes through must be .040" in diameter and have an entrance angle of 59/60 degrees. That is what is right for their engines. The real question is, what is right for your engine. If you start when your engine is new, run the test with the same test equipment and test at regular intervals you will get accurate test figures for your type of engine.

Alas, no one ever does this. The question is do you need to? I don't think so. Motorcycle engines are not aircraft engines. Trying to get useful, meaningful figures and then to interpret them accurately, is not so easy. If you are figuring on making a test and then going back in and regrinding valves and rehoning cylinders if the numbers are not to your liking I think you are wasting your time. At the very least you need to run a new engine for a while so everything settles in. Then you need regular testing to establish a base line to judge wear from.

So what does all this mean to you. Well, I think this is an interesting test that isn't really necessary for most motorcycle engines. However, if you ignore all the percentages and green/yellow/red zones, it does give one piece of very valuable information. It tells you where the leaks are and you don't even have to have the gauge to do it.

The test is simple. Apply air pressure to the sparkplug hole and listen. You will probably have to take the exhaust pipe and carburetor off plus remove the oil fill cap. Other then that, just listen. You will need at least fifteen or twenty pounds of air pressure. Higher pressure will make the sound louder but too much and you will need to lock the crankshaft to keep the engine from turning. A hissing noise at the carburetor manifold indicated a leak at the intake valve(s). Hissing at the exhaust, leaking exhaust valve (s). Hissing at the oil fill or at the engine breather tube, leaking past the rings.



For air pressure you can use a fancy spark plug hole attachment or just a rubber tip on a blow gun. You might need an extension for these hard to reach plugs too.

Spark Plug Attachment

Rubber Tip Blow Gun.

Rubber Tip Extension.

Cheap, easy, and accurate. What's not to like?

One last thing. I would NOT use this test on a two stroke engine. It could be done but you run a risk of blowing out the crankshaft seals if the piston is not positioned just right and I don't see any advantage over a Crankcase Compression Test.

Top

Two Stroke Vacuum/Pressure Testing

A Two Stroke Engine must have compression above and below the piston rings. We all know about taking engine compression readings from the spark plug hole but a lot of people seem to forget that a two stroke engine must have a sealed bottom end that will hold both compression and vacuum.

To test a two-stroke crankcase all you have to do is plug the intake and exhaust, then pressurize the crankcase, through a fitting in the sparkplug hole, to whatever pressure the manufacturer specifies (usually six to fifteen pounds per square inch). Then see if it will hold it for five or six minutes. For a vacuum test apply five to seven inches of mercury (HG) and see if it holds for five or six minutes.

When the piston in a two-stroke comes down it compresses the air/fuel charge in the crankcase and pushes it, through the ports in the sides of the cylinder, into the combustion chamber. As the piston rises a vacuum is created under the piston. That vacuum sucks the air/fuel mixture through the carburetor and into the crankcase.

Some guys will use this test after a crankshaft rebuild to make sure the bottom end is sealed right. Call me bad but I never do. I just have never had trouble with crankcase sealing. I always use new seals and I make sure the case sealant is spread evenly and completely on the crankcase edge. I used to use Yamabond #4 but they don't make it anymore so now I use ThreeBond #1194 Liquid Gasket. It seems to work good too. If a center crankcase gasket is called for, instead of sealant, I always use a new gasket.

A word of caution here, if the manufacturer calls for a liquid sealant DO NOT change and use a gasket. Likewise, if a gasket is called for DO NOT discard the gasket and use only liquid sealant. This would cause side clearance problems with the gearbox main and counter shafts not to mention the crankshaft.

The test can be useful for troubleshooting too. If there is a leak it can cause hard starting and poor running. Old seals can become hard and leak. This can cause difficult starting but once started the seal warms up it will work OK. The rest of the day the engine will start fine but if it sits over night, the seal will harden up again. If it leaks on the Magneto side it could be sucking air, leaning out the fuel mixture. This can cause a number of problems ranging from hard starting, poor idle, poor running to overheating the engine and possibly causing a piston seizure. In addition to all these problems, if the seal on the Power-Take-Off side (Clutch side) is leaking, transmission oil can get into the engine causing lots of smoke while running.

The cure for all this is new crankshaft seals. I don't think I have ever seen a leak from the center seams of the crankcase. If there is a hole in the crankcase careful inspection should reveal it. If there is a hole you will need to get new crankcases. I've seen people try to weld holes in crankcases but it almost never works. The heat from the welding warps the crankcases. The one time I did see it work the crankcase required a lot of careful grinding to get the shifter drum to turn. I never did find out how long that engine lasted either.

Just to make things more fun there have been manufacturers in the past who have mounted their seals on the PTO side inboard of the main crankshaft bearing. This is good for main bearing lubrication because the bearing is running in oil. It's bad because to change the seal you have to split the crankcases and pull the bearing. Of course most of the engines that are designed this way are race engines and the seal is easily replaced when you have the crank out for regular maintenance. You do follow Factory maintenance intervals don't you? Good news is most of the newer two-stroke engine designs don't do this any more.

The only problem I have with vacuum testing is that it takes as much time to run the test as it does to just put in new seals. I might feel differently if I got lots of newer bikes in but it always seems that by the time I get the engine it's ten or fifteen years old. Why waste time and money (My time, your money) on a test when it needs new seals anyway? I use the vacuum/pressure gun from my vacuum tester kit all the time... to bleed hydraulic brakes! If you want to run a crankcase compression test that is just fine. I just don't think it is necessary.

Maybe I'm just not a good vacuum tester. I guess I just don't suck good enough!

Exhaust Pipes

After combustion has taken place in an engine the exhaust gases have to have somewhere to go. In a motorcycle we aim the gases out the exhaust port and into the exhaust pipe. On four stroke racing bikes that pipe could be a long straight pipe or a short header pipe and a megaphone.

The exhaust pipe works because of the pressure waves generated when the exhaust valve opens. These waves travel at the speed of sound (Maybe even faster!) and create positive and negative pressure. Each change in the diameter of the pipe changes this pressure wave from positive pressure to negative pressure or visa versa. By changing pipe diameter and length we can time when the pressure wave is at exhaust valve and help the evacuation of exhaust gases at a specific RPM. The only problem is that this effect can only be one RPM, like 9500 or 8000 or 10,000. If you are set up for one RPM the effect does not work so well at other RPM.

On modern street motorcycles exhaust pipes are usually in two parts. The header pipe and the muffler. The header pipe is usually double or triple walled. This is so the chrome on the outside pipe will not get hot and turn colors. This, to me, makes no sense. That neat purple and blue color on the header pipes really screams "This guy rides FAST!" I guess that's just not the way people think anymore. The muffler it's self has a number of different baffles that quiet the noise of combustion. Sometimes the header pipe and the muffler are welded together. The muffler can also have a removable baffle. Street bikes also have their mufflers inter-connected. A few four strokes like Yamaha's YZF1000R have power valves in the exhaust tubing. If the engine suddenly seems down on horsepower check this power valve. They can carbon up and stop working.

By matching the length and diameter of the exhaust header pipe. The shape of the muffler. The cam timing and lift. The length of the intake track. The size of the carburetor. The shape of the air cleaner and how much air it passes. By matching all these things, the Motorcycle Manufacturer produces a muffler that keeps the noise of combustion down but still allows the engine to produce power at a wide range of RPMs. Now we come along and drill holes in the muffler, throwing everything out of whack, just because we want more noise.

Back in the day, we used Suff-or-Nots! Lots more horsepower... or so we thought. I'm not real sure we went faster, but I can tell you for sure we sounded faster ! I'm afraid those days are gone forever. Motorcycle engines, from the early 1980's on, are very finely tuned machines. The old Snuff-or-Not trick just will not work anymore.

The best policy is to leave the exhaust alone. This noise thing is really getting out of hand. There is this idea out there that the more noise you make the safer you are. People will hear you and not run you over. Having been run off the road by people who DID see me and having talked to many people who have had the same experience, I'm not so sure this is a good policy. I feel loud pipes just get the general public mad at you and the police interested in you. Neither one of which is good. The Federal government is starting to take notice and they will simply fine the manufacturers of loud pipes out of business.

The biggest problem with stock exhaust pipes is the environment they work in. For every gallon of gas an engine burns a gallon of water vapor goes out the exhaust pipe. This water produces lots of rust inside the exhaust pipe. This would not be so bad if you could pick up a cheap replacement muffler for $40.00 at the local parts shop like you can with a car. Unfortunately, you can't. Motorcycle mufflers and header pipes cost a small fortune. The stock factory muffler for a Honda Shadow can cost $970.00.

The only good inexpensive cure is an aftermarket exhaust pipe. Aftermarket pipes for that Shadow can cost as little as $300.00. Much easier to live with! Some aftermarket exhausts use fiberglass packing and are rebuildable. The big trouble with all aftermarket, non stock mufflers is that the engine you put them on may or may not run right. If they put out a jet kit for your engine, things may be OK. If not, you will need to look at the Carburetor tuning page

Here. One thing you might consider. The louder the pipe, the better the odds are that you will have to rejet the carburetor(s). That is just what I have observed. No scientific proof for that. Just my opinion.

If it is just the muffler that is rusted out you can sometimes get a slip on muffler. Super Trapp sells a 3" and 4" diameter muffler that is adjustable. You add plates to the end of the pipe. More plates mean less back pressure and more sound. Less plates less sound and more back pressure. You can tune the pipe to your engine. These work good for dirt bikes because the plates also act as spark arrestors. You need a spark arrestor anytime you ride off road. Spark arrestors stop carbon particles that have a diameter greater than 0.023". This prevents exhaust sparks from starting fires. The Super Trapp also has replaceable fiberglass packing to quiet the exhaust note. As of 2007 prices are in the $150.00-200.00 range.

The cheapest cure is to repair the pipe you have. This may or may not be a good idea. Once a pipe rusts through it usually rusts through in a lot of places. The problem is that the chrome covers a multitude of rust holes. Old car muffler repair guys like to take a big pair of slip joint pliers and try to crush the exhaust pipe. They try all over the pipe and if they can make that exhaust pipe crush in any one place they replace the pipe. Your pipe is chromed so use padding on the jaws of the pliers. If you find a weak spot or already have a hole you can take a piece of thick sheet metal and braze or weld a patch on. They sell a kind of fiberglass muffler tape which can be wrapped around the pipe sealing the hole. This is very gross and ugly but it is cheap and just might get you through one more riding season.

Bottom line? You have three choices. From expensive to cheap.

1. Replace the muffler with stock parts.
2. Replace the muffler with an aftermarket unit.
3. fix what you have.

Two Stroke Exhaust Pipes

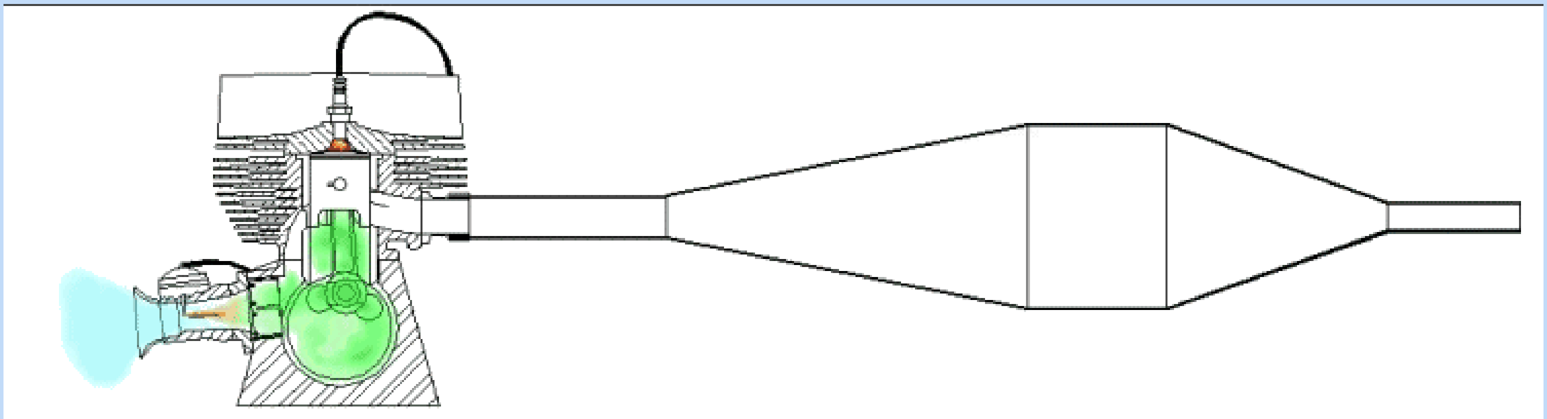
Walter Kaaden, the chief engineer for MZ motorcycles in the 1950s, is generally considered the father of the modern two stroke expansion chamber. He reportedly said "You'll know when you have the design right, because the chamber will then be impossible to fit on the motorcycle without having it drag the ground, burn the rider's leg, or force the relocation of one or more major components."

Two strokes are all about the exhaust. When combustion occurs in a two stroke, the piston is pushed down by the expanding gases uncovering the exhaust port. The exhaust gas rushes out into the header pipe and a pressure wave is created. This wave can be either positive or negative in pressure. If it is a positive wave and hits a change in diameter in the tubing of the exhaust pipe it changes to a negative wave. Hit another change in diameter and the wave changes back to positive. This wave pressure can be as high as seven pounds per square inch (Both positive and negative waves) and travels at 1600 to 1700 feet per second.



If the pipe is made just right, a wave with negative pressure reaches the exhaust port just as it is fully open. This sucks the exhaust AND part of the new intake charge into the exhaust pipe. Then, just before the piston closes the exhaust port, this negative wave changes to a positive wave and pushes the fresh intake fuel charge BACK into the cylinder. All this happens in three to four thousands of a second. This sort of supercharges the engine, giving the high power out put of a two stroke engine. Without that properly designed exhaust pipe called an "Expansion Chamber", the two stroke engine will have no real power!

There is only one draw back to all this and that is that this supercharging only happens at the specific RPM that the pipe was designed for. Running the engine at any RPM above or below the designed RPM and the supercharging effect will be much less effective. That is why two strokes have such a narrow power band.

Here is a really nice Gif animation showing how it all works. I got this from a web site, made by Joseph A. Schuster in 1997. I have tried to e-mail him but there was no response. The site is no longer online. I am assuming he would want you to have this.

One problem with two stroke exhausts is that they can get plugged up with carbon from the oil used to lubricate the engine. The bike will start easily but just will not rev up. This is especially true of quite exhausts. If the exhaust has removable baffles or is fiberglass packed, you can easily clean them and replace the fiberglass packing. If the baffles are not removable it is much harder to clean them. Many stock two stroke exhausts have non removable baffles or have only one or two baffles that are removable. The different baffles collect the unburned carbon and plug up but you can't easily get to them. There are several cures. Non of which are easy or cheap.

1. A new exhaust. This the most expensive and sure fire way to cure the problem.
2. Burn the carbon out of the exhaust. This works quite well. The problem is that you need an oxy-acetylene torch set up and considerable skill in burning it out. You must heat the pipe hot enough to get the carbon burning but not so hot that you melt the steel of the pipe and internal pipe baffles. Once the carbon starts to burn you must make sure enough oxygen gets blown through the pipe to keep the carbon burning until it is all burned out. Sometimes you can actually see the progression of the burn, as a red hot band around the body of the muffler, as it moves from one end of the pipe to the other. If the carbon goes out it is quite hard to get it burning again. This is tricky but works well if you can do it. There is a big risk of melting the internal baffling. Melt a few baffles out and the pipe will run very loud. Do this outside. It produces smoke like a smoke bomb.

3. Cut the exhaust pipe open on the back side and then burn out the carbon. Then weld the pipe back together. Again, do it outside.
4. Use caustic soda to dissolve the carbon. Simply fill the pipe with a solution of caustic soda and water. The mixture should be about three pounds of caustic soda mixed with one gallon of water. This is not a real good option because the caustic soda is, well, caustic and dangerous to use. I DO NOT recommend this method.
5. A mixture of soap that dissolves the carbon. There are several companies that sell special soap for this. I have tried some of their samples and I thought they just did not work. I filled up one plugged exhaust pipe with their soap mixture and left it for about 30 hours and nothing happened. Maybe I didn't give it enough time. At least it's harmless to use!

Valve Clearance Adjustment

Valves? I have no problems... mine are nice and quite. Maybe and maybe not. As we know, metal expands and contracts as it heats and cools. Because of this there needs to be some clearance for the metal to expand into. Sometimes it's a little and sometimes it's a lot.

So what happens if there is too little clearance? Well, for one thing the valve loses most of it's heat through the valve seat. If the valve doesn't seat fully it will start to get hotter and hotter. Sooner or later the valve starts to melt or burn. Not good. Now if the clearance is too much the valve train components will be hammered every time the valve opens. Again, not good but better then too hot.

To prevent these problems some engines use hydraulic tappets which pump up with engine oil while the engine is running and keep the right clearance. The newer Honda Gold Wings have them and so do the Honda and Kawasaki V-twins. Harley-Davidson Big Twins have them too, not to mention others. Now for some reason everybody thinks valves loosen as the miles pile up but they don't, at least they don't unless you have lubrication problems. ( So change your oil, OK? Well, at least check it now and then... maybe? ). If an engine is running right the valve will slowly wear its way into the engine, taking up clearance until the valve is held open and burns. So you need to check the valves at regular intervals until you find out at what rate they are wearing. You can use your shop manual as a guide to how many miles to go between checks but, you will need to check several times to know for sure.

Over Head Cams With Rocker Arms

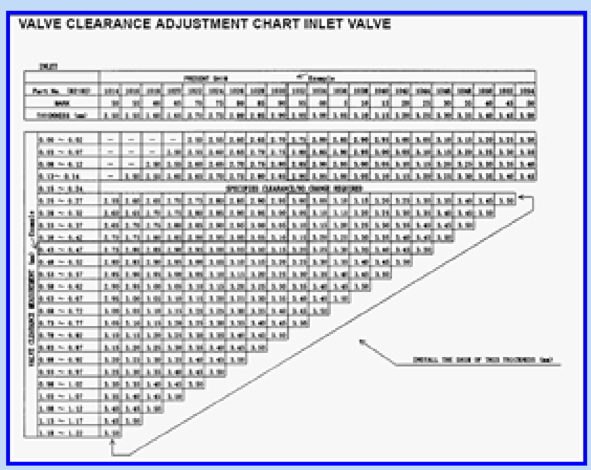
AH... now we get to the whole purpose of this page, how we adjust the valves. The engine must be dead cold before we can adjust anything, so let it sit overnight. First, we will need to find Top-Dead-Center (TDC) of the compression stroke of the cylinder to be checked. Remove the gas tank, the covers to the valves and the cover to the nut on the crankshaft or flywheel. Turn the engine over until you see the intake valve go down and then up. There will be a mark on the crankcase and a "T" mark on the flywheel. When those two marks align, the engine will be at TDC and both intake and exhaust valves should be loose.

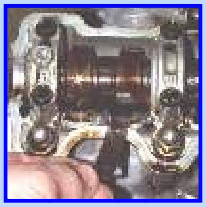
If you can't get a wrench on the flywheel nut don't worry. You can turn the engine over by jacking the rear wheel off the ground and putting the transmission in top gear. Now simply turn the rear wheel to turn the engine. If you can't find the flywheel marks look at the intake valve as you turn the engine over in the forward direction. When it goes down and then up, take a long thin screw driver and stick it down the spark plug hole. Continue to turn the engine over until the piston touches the tip of the screw driver. Continue to turn the engine. Be careful not to jam or bind the screw driver in the spark plug hole. The piston will push the screw driver up. When it stops and starts to go down, that is TDC of the compression stroke. This will work on all piston engines.

Now we are ready to check/adjust valve clearances. For engines with rocker arms and screw type adjusters, take a feeler gauge of the right size and place it between the end tip of the valve and the screw adjuster. If it is out of specification use a wrench or Valve Adjusting Tool to loosen the screw and change it. Sometimes you can use a regular wrench and screw driver to adjust things and sometimes you must have the special tool. When you push the feeler gauge between the valve tip and the adjuster screw there should be a little bit of resistance. One way of doing it is the go-no-go way. If a .003" feeler gauge fits but a .004" feeler gauge does not, the clearance must be .003". On most engines the intake clearances will be tighter then the exhaust clearances... but not always! Sometimes they are the same. ~~I have never seen an engine where the exhaust is tighter then the intake.~~



2014 UPDATE! Mark Zimmerman, Technical Editor Motorcycle Cruiser Magazine, e-mailed me and informed me I was wrong. He says "T140 Triumphs are the exception. valve lash is; intake .008, exhaust .006. Triumph did it that way to slightly retard intake cam timing, and kill some of the bottom end power, They were afraid the 750 motor would chew up main bearings if the cam timing were advanced." I went and looked it up and guess what? Mark you are right. My only excuse is that I have never had a T140 come into the shop. T120s (650cc motor) have looser exhausts then intakes and I HAVE had T120s come in for tune-ups but never a T140. The information is right there in the shop manual, next line down. Like I always say "Check your shop manual."

If you are going to make an error, error on the loose side. I've found most engines prefer their valves a bit loose but only one or two thou... not much more. I like to hear just a hint of valve noise. Complete silence bothers me. I keep seeing valves roasting. If you have one rocker arm, operating two valves, with two screw adjusters, you will get a more accurate adjustment if you use two feeler gauges. Loosen both screw adjusters, put the right sized feeler gauges in each tappet and then adjust both at the same time. When both feeler gauges feel like they have the same resistance, tighten the lock nuts, pull them out and you are done.



Remember to always double check your work. The clearance can change when you tighten the lock nut. Sometimes you have to set the tappet loose and when you tighten the lock nut it will pull the tappet into the right clearance.

Shim Type Adjusters

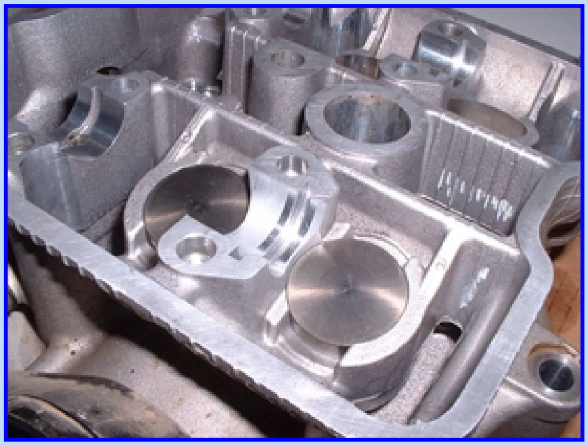
Valve Shim Table

Shim type adjusters are supposed to extend the valve check intervals. However, when it comes time to change things it can get expensive. Each shim is a certain thickness. If you need more valve clearance, you need to put in a thinner shim. So if you need .004" (.10 mm) clearance, have .002" (.05 mm) clearance with a 270 shim you will need to replace that 270 (2.70 mm) shim with a 265 shim (2.65 mm). That shim is thinner so that would add .002" (.05 mm) to your present valve clearance to give you .004" (.10 mm) clearance. Got that? No huh? Well, just remember each shim size goes up or down .002" (.05 mm). A shim numbered 265 is .002" (.05 mm) thinner then a shim numbered 270.

At $10 to $15 per shim. Let's see... a 4 cylinder , 4 valve engine has 16 shims... WOW, that adds up fast. AND you are replacing good parts. The shims rarely wear out. Good news is you can swap shims between valves. Tight one for a loose one, loose one for a tight one, and save some money.

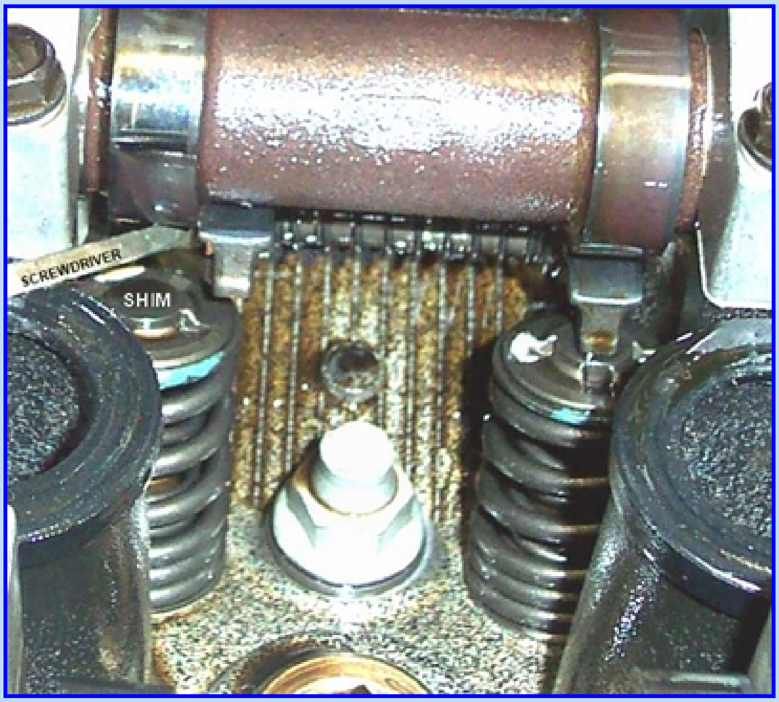


Get the valve cover off. On most shim engines that entails 10-20 bolts, a real fragile gasket that is easy to break and a big H shaped cover. Some of the engines will have a thick rubber gasket that can be a bit of a pill to get back on. On both just take your time and gently work them off and back on. If you tear or rip either type of gasket you will need to buy a new one and they can be rather expensive.

Now you will find that things look a bit different from a rocker engine... namely, there aren't any rockers. Well, except of course, when there are. They call them cam followers. More about that later. You will notice the cam and the shim are real close together. To get that shim out first put that cylinder at Top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke. Then rotate the shim bucket till the notch on it is out. Then rotate the engine so the cam lobe pushes the shim and shim bucket down. Now you use a special tool to hold the edge of the shim bucket down and rotate the cam lobe out of the way. You may have to do this several times to get it right. Reach in the notch with a small screw driver and pop the shim up. Remove it with tweezers. Look on the down side of the shim and it will give you it's size. If you can't make out the numbers, measure it with dial calipers. Sounds so easy doesn't it?

Now when you put in the special too be very careful and don't force anything. Go slow. It all should feel very smooth. If it feels like it is binding... IT IS. DON'T FORCE IT you can break very expensive parts very easily. Consider yourself warned! The Yamaha XS series of engines uses a different tool. But the idea is still the same. Naturally, there are different tools for each make of engine. The tools are not too expensive so I just buy them, but I think you could make them too. They all work on the same principle. You have to hold down the edge of the shim bucket, but not the shim, against the valve spring pressure.

Some engines, like the KX650 Kawasaki and Polaris ATV engines have the shim UNDER the shim bucket or cup. You must remove the cams to adjust the valves. There are some others that do that too. Real smart work fellows!



Shim under Cup 1 Shim under Cup 2

Sometimes, if the shim is on top of the cup (KLR600, KL650), you can remove the chain adjuster (to loosen the cam chain). Remove the cam bearing caps. Then move the cam up just a bit and get the shim out. That way you don't loose your cam timing. However, always double check the timing after you are finished just to be sure.

Sometimes they do get it right. On the ZX1100 Kawasaki getting to the shims involves pushing a Rocker Arm, also known as a Cam Follower, out of the way with a small screwdriver and popping the shim out. No special tools or nothing. Sweet!

The shims come in different diameters too. You can use the same shim in different make engines as long as they are the same diameter and, of course, the right thickness.

Always put the side with the size stamped on it in down. That is so the cam lobe will not wear the size markings off. Shim sizes usually come in .05 mm (.002") increments. Like 255, 260, 265, 270, ETC. So 255 is 2.55 mm in thickness. 2.60 is 2.60 mm. Sometimes the decimal point is not there and sometimes the whole number is not there or so faint you can't read it. Sometimes, the factory adds a letter to the mix. Why I don't know. Also, there are a lot of aftermarket shims out there in increments of .001". If in doubt measure with dial calipers. A real nice, accurate one can be bought from Harbor Freight for $10-$15. I prefer to measure them and then get the right Shim. I don't like all the factory tables and grafts and charts, Oh my!

As always, remember to double check your work. We are dealing with very small clearances here. One thousandth of an inch is not much. The shims can go in cockeyed, oil is under the shim, stuff like that can effect the clearance. Make sure the shims are seated right. I like to turn the engine over by hand several times to seat the shims and check again. If you have to error, error on the loose side.

Push Rods

Push rod engines like BSA, older Triumphs, older BMWs etc. have rocker arms and adjust just like the OHC rocker arm engines. I like to put in the feeler gauge and then spin the push rod with my fingers. It should spin freely with no up and down play. If I want the clearance to be a bit tight I tighten the adjuster till the rod spins a bit hard. Looser? Adjust till it spins real easy. Then take out the feeler gauge.

On Harley-Davidson V-Twins with solid tappets. When one valve is open the corresponding valve on the other cylinder is closed. When the rear exhaust is open, the front exhaust is closed. Same for intake. Adjust the push rod, when the valve is closed, so that it turns easy with no up and down play, both intake and exhaust.

Hydraulic Tappets

Hydraulic Tappets are filled with oil and normally require no adjustment of any kind except for adjustment when the engine is being assembled.

Eccentric Shaft Adjusters

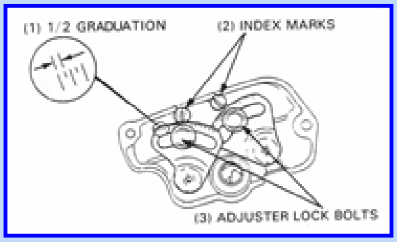
Eccentric Shaft

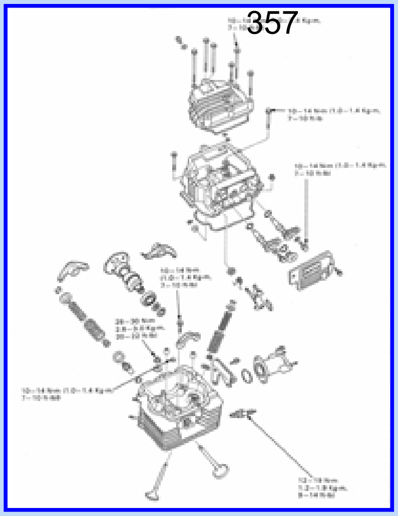
Eccentric Shaft in Rocker Arm

The old Honda 350 and 450cc twins had what are called eccentric rocker arm shafts. That is, the center of the shaft is ground off center so that as you turn it, the rocker arm that rides on it, moves back and forth. This increases and decreases the valve clearance. If you adjust the valves on these engines the regular way with a feeler gauge you will be OK But, there is a better way.



Start and warm the engine up enough so that it idles good. Loosen each valve adjuster lock nut and turn the adjuster shaft with a screw driver. The valve will get noisy and the engine RPM will go up. You want the highest engine RPM with the lowest tappet noise. Do this on each valve. You will notice that the engine RPMs go way up. Sometimes as much as 1000 to 1500 RPM gain. Now back the idle down with the throttle stop screws and do it again. We want the highest RPMs and the least tappet noise, with the emphasis on the RPM. Yes, they will be noisy but, where do you think that RPM is coming from? Stock clearance too tight? I learned this trick from a factory mechanic when I worked in a Honda shop in 1968. He said he learned it from a Honda Factory update school. I have never heard of it from any other source. It works though. I've used it on a lot of 350/450 twins with no ill effects.

Some people feel that leaves the valve clearance too loose. If you are one of those people it is OK, just don't set your tappets that way!



Honda TR200 ATV engines also use Eccentric adjusters. Set the engine at Top-Dead-Center of the compression stroke and then loosen the adjusters. Then, as the shop manual states "Move each adjuster to the left (Counterclockwise) until resistance is felt. Then move each adjuster back to the right, the equivalent of 1/2 marked graduation. Tighten both valve adjuster lock bolts. Note: 1/2 graduation on the adjusters equals 0.08 mm (0.003 in), which is the specified valve clearance."

TR200 Valve Adjustment 3

If my poor dim, dark memory serves there were some British engines, like the BSA B25, 250 cc single, that used them too. Don't worry, I don't think you will run across very many of them. If you do, the drill is still the same. Set crankshaft at Top-Dead-Center (TDC), compression stroke. Loosen the adjuster lock nut/bolt. Turn the adjuster shaft till you get the clearance you want. Tighten the lock but/bolt. Your are done.

Side Valve Tappets

Some of the Old, Old singles and V-Twins, 30s/40s/50s type stuff had side valves. You remove a plate on the side of the cylinder and adjust things from there. Just like all the rest. These are getting pretty rare now so you will probably not run into them.

The thing to remember on all these engines is that you MUST have clearance and that clearance must be checked at regular intervals. If you don't know or don't remember when they were last checked, check them now.

VALVES & SEATS

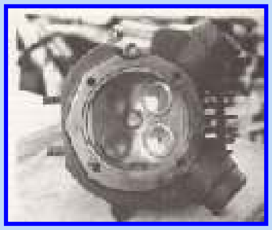
Part of any good rebuild is a valve job. If the valves leak, the engine will just not run right. So we want good valve seats. How do we get them ? Let's just start from the top.



First look at the end of the valve and how the valve keepers fit around the valve stem. Things should look like this when you finish. This is how I remove the valve keepers. It sounds wild, but it works great. Take the head, put shop towel in the combustion chamber and turn it over so the valve ends are up. Take a deep well socket that is the same diameter as the valve spring cap, and put a little ball of wadded up paper in the square end. This will keep the valve keepers from popping out. Now take the socket and put it on the valve with the square end up. With it centered and square on the valve spring keeper cap, hit it sharply, but not too hard, with a hammer. The two valve keepers will fall out and you can take the spring cap and springs off the end of the valve. This sounds quite radical, but it works great, and if done right will not hurt anything. If you are uncomfortable with this, use the valve spring compressor, but that is a lot more work and more chance of loosing parts.

I always mark everything so you can put everything back in the same position. Use an eggcrate for this. At the very least keep exhaust parts with exhaust parts and intake with intake. Measure the height of the springs, and if they have settled, and are short, replace them. Lots of times there is a thin metal washer under each spring. It can also be a fairly thick spring base. It is sometimes hard to tell if there even is a washer. Clean the spring seats with some solvent and then blow with compressed air. That will usually pop the washers out. If you don't take them out they will fall out when you least expect and get lost. If you leave them out and the spring is right on the aluminum, it will wear into the head, but not all that fast. Still, make sure they are in there. Things will work better, longer. Now push the valve out, and gently pry the valve seals off, if there are any. Seals are a nice thing, but if there are none or they are worn, it doesn't seem to be that big of deal. Like a car can pump a lot of oil if it has bad seals, but Air cooled bikes don't seem to, kinda sorta. I would still put on new if at all possible. They are cheap, so why not ? If the valves are stuck in the guides, you may have to drive them out with a punch. If the valve is just catching on a bit of metal knurled out of the valve by the valve keepers, you can take a small file and file it down so the valve will slip through the guide. Pull the valve out a bit and wiggle it back and forth. A little play is usually OK, but if there is too much play you will have to replace the valve guide. Check your shop manual for the maximum amount of play. I don't replace many valve guides. Usually they are OK and often the machines are old and don't warrant the expense. You will have to make the decision yourself. If you need to replace a guide, and have an aluminum head, put the new guides in the freezer for a couple of hours. Heat the head up to about 300 degrees and drive the old guide out. Then quickly drive in the cold new guide. After the head has cooled you will need to ream out the guide to the right size. The seat must be recut too. The guides on iron heads may be driven out cold.

I always use new valves unless the valves are very big. Most valves are stellite coated (or something like it) and that coating can be very thin. If you attempt to grind them on a valve grinding machine you might cut through this coating, and then again maybe not. I tried it once on a 4 valve CB750 Honda. It did work... sort of. It took over 1000 miles of running before the valve clearances stabilized. I decided I didn't want to do that again ! So now it's all new valves for me. At least on the small bikes and four valve engines. If the valves are big, like on a Harley or other big, two valve, twins it's OK to grind them. Speaking of 4 valves, I'll bet you think that is a recent innovation. If you do, you would be wrong. The English Rudge of 1929 had a 4 valve head ! If you do re-grind the valves make sure the edge of the valve is not sharp or thin and is the correct angle. If it is thin, the valve will overheat and fail.

Now we come to the seats. You will need to cut or grind the valve seat, at the correct angle, until it is smooth. That angle is usually 45 degrees. Some small engines use 30 degrees, but most motorcycles use 45 degrees. The tools can be quite expensive for a full set. Now the correct way is to cut the 45 degree seat then position it with 15, 20, 60 and 75 degree cutters and make the seat the right width. Some cutters are set at 46 degrees so the valve and seat will kind of work themselves together. They tell me this is the best way, and I suppose it is. If the engine you are working on, must have the very highest horsepower or is one that's going to last awhile, like a BMW, I think cutting the seats this way is beneficial. However, I feel a good smooth 45 degree seat with a new valve will work just fine even with a wide seat. I know an old line car mechanic who never thins or postions the seats on any engine he rebuilds and they all work just fine and in 50 years he's done a lot of engines. If you just want to cut it and lap that sucker in, I have no problem with that. If you want it "just so", well, I have no problem with that either. It just costs more money. I once had a 5 angle valve job done on my BMW. At the time I was running my bike pretty hard. If there was any horse power boost I would have noticed, but there was nothing. Now I'll bet some great, valve master out there will say I'm way, bad, wrong, but I actually think a wide seat might be a good thing. Most of a valve's heat loss (Cooling) occurs when the valve is on its seat. Very little heat escapes through the stem. Seems like the wider the seat the better the cooling. Perhaps this lessens the horse power. Instead of 185 MPH you now can only go 172. Perhaps this matters to some, but about 99 and 44/100 % of the riders I know can't really use 75 % of the horse power of their machines, let alone 100%. Considering the maintenance schedules most people use for their bikes, a bit more cooling, on a hard working valve, might be a good thing.

Anyway, either take it in to someone or do it yourself, but one way or another get a good, smooth seat. If the seat angle and valve angle are perfect you don't really need to lap the valve in with valve lapping compound. I still like to do it and get a nice matte finish all the way around the valve. There are many ways to lap in a valve. They make several types of special tools that press down on the valve and turn it. I like to use a piece of hose on the end of the valve so you can apply pressure and turn the valve at the same time. You will want to turn the valve back and forth, lifting the valve every once in a while to distribute the grinding compound. Pressing down from the top of the valve with a tool doesn't seem to always work on small motorcycle valves. Sometimes I can get a tap handle on the end of the valve and this works quite well too. If you can't afford new valves it is possible to lap and grind and grind and grind and eventually smooth up the seat enough to make it work OK. If it's an old cheap bike, and you're poor, and you have a lot of time, it might get you back on the road. Just something to consider. Resist the temptation to stick the valve end in a drill and really lap that sucker in ! You need to go back and forth and back and forth. You want the finish to be a nice matte finish with no lines in it.

OK, we got new valves, cut the seats and cleaned everything up real good, including the intake port. Next, I like to put some valve lubricant on the valve stem. I use the stuff Briggs and Stratton Engines sells. Watch out ! It contains lead ! Bad stuff ! Or so they would have us believe. Anyway, put some on the stem and put the valve in the guide. Put some oil on the steel shims for under the valve springs and put them on before the valve seals. Put some lube on the valve seals and push it on the end of the valve. Push it down to the guide, then on to the guide with the right sized, deep well, socket.

Now put the valve springs and cap on. Carefully compress the springs with a valve spring compressor. I always wear some kind of eye protection like glasses or goggles, just in case the compressor slips off the springs and everything goes into orbit. I also use a pair of long tweezers and a long needle to place, ease and wiggle the valve spring circlips into place. Put a bit of grease on each keeper to help hold it in place. There are two of them. You might need to modify the compressor to make it fit right, and/or work, better. It will help to cover the whole thing with a shop rag if you have to move it around for any reason. Like reaching for another tool or something. This may sound strange, but if the tool slips odds are most everything will be caught by the rag. You would think one could find small valve parts easily on a cement floor... but you would be wrong ! But, as always, if you don't... I don't care. Their not my valve parts ! Motion Pro has a tool to install the valve keepers and it works great. It's a bit pricy but after using it once you'll agree it's worth every penny.

Last thing. We want to test our work. Turn the head so the combustion chamber is up and level. Fill the chamber with solvent or gas. Let it set a minute or two and then shine a light up the exhaust and intake ports. Look for leaks or wetness. There should be none. If there is, take the offending valve back apart and relap it. Then put it together and test it again. The solvent will find the slightest leak. We want NO leaks.

One more last thing. When you assemble the engine make double sure to clean the intake manifold, carburetor throat, and air cleaner tube. It only takes a small bit of goo or dirt to lodge in the valve seat and prevent your nice new valve from working.

PISTONS, CYLINDERS & RINGS

Pistons and Cylinders are pretty straight forward. After you take the head off try to move the piston, sideways, in the bore. There should be almost no movement. look at the cylinder. If there is an obvious ridge at the top of the cylinder and you can feel it with your finger, and there is piston movement sideways, you are going to have to bore it oversize. The factory oversizes are in quarter millimeter increments. Like .25,.50,.75,1.0 and the like. .25 mm is about .010". That's enough to clean up the bore, but it is not enough to increase the size of the engine by much. If you are unsure, measure the diameter of the bore and the diameter of the piston with inside and outside micrometers. Measure the piston about 1/2" up from the bottom of the piston skirt. Now measure the cylinder bore in several places at right angles to each other. Subtract piston diameter from the biggest bore diameter. This gives you the piston clearance. Piston clearance varies due to a number of factors.

1. Diameter of the piston.
2. Type of metal the piston is made of.
3. Is it a cast or forged piston.
4. Is the engine air or water cooled.
5. Is the engine two or four stroke.

A small (50mm bore) cast piston, 4/stroke may have half a thou (.0005" or .0127mm ) piston clearance, while a big, forged piston, 2/stroke (73mm, 2.874") can need .003" (.075mm) or more. You will need a shop manual to find the clearance for your bike. Now this is the minimum. What is the maximum ? I once had the exhaust off of a 400cc 2/stroke single, and I was able to slip a .020" feeler gauge between the piston and cylinder. Why did I have the pipe off ? The guy wanted me to check the pipe out. I found several, large, rubber, air cleaner box mounts in the pipe ! The guy said he had never had the pipe off. The bike ran for several more months before the piston skirt broke. Bottom line, get a shop manual and get the right clearance. If it is an after market piston, use the piston manufacturers clearance recommendation.

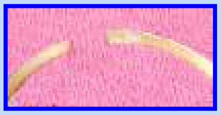
If your old piston is within spec, and you want to reuse it, you will need to measure the ring side gap. Side clearance (gap) is measured with a feeler gauge, with the ring in it's groove in the piston. Just try to fit the feeler gauge between the ring and the top or bottom of the groove. They can be .001" to .003"(.025mm to .0762mm, check the manual). If you are using a new piston and rings you do not have to check this. If the gap is too much, even with new rings, you will need to replace the piston.

Everybody seems to think a new set of rings should cure everything. I wish it was true... but it's not ! I would say 95 % of the time, on a dirt bike, you will need to bore it oversize. Sometimes, on a big street bike, the pistons will be within spec, but on most of the dirt bikes you are going to have to bore it.

It is best to have the cylinder bored on a boring machine. I have honed them as big as .040" over and I held it to spec on taper and out of roundness, but it took forever. Now, if I go bigger then 1/4mm or .010" I like to bore them on a machine. If you do try to hone them be sure to use a good hone like a Sunnen or Ammco. You will have to measure the piston and then bore the cyl to fit. Do not bore the cyl unless you have the piston to measure. If you do, the clearance may be off.

Remove the circlip and push the wrist pin out with a screw driver. You may lightly tap it but if the pin is in too tight, you will need to pull it with a wristpin puller.

If the piston has seized and smeared aluminum on the cylinder you will need to remove it before you measure it. You can do this with Muriatic acid. Just take medicine dropper and put just a few drops on the aluminum that has been smeared in the cylinder. The acid will eat the aluminum but will not hurt the steel of the cylinder. DO NOT GET THE ACID ON YOU . If you do get it on yourself, water and baking soda will get it off. Also don't get it on any aluminum unless you want that aluminum eaten up ! You can get Muriatic Acid at any home improvement store. They sell it buy the gallon, which will do about a billion cylinders. I'm not sure what they use it for... swimming pools or something.



If you have a 2/stroke, be sure to look at the top of the piston. If it looks like a rat has been chewing on it watch out. It means that the bearings in the bottom end are starting to go. If you put in a new piston it will just be ruined as more bits of bearing shed by the lower crank and rod bearings. The cure ? Rebuild the bottom end.

Be sure to check the cyl for any rust pits. If there are any you will need to bore the cyl to a bigger over size to get rid of them. If you are restoring a machine, you will find these rust pits are wherever the rings stopped in the cyl. A lot of water is created during combustion. Supposedly, about a gallon of water for every gallon of gas burned. Some of that water tends to collect around the rings.

When you get your cyl back always ask if they cleaned it. Most places do but, you never know. To check, take a clean rag, put some fresh oil on it and wipe the inside of the cyl with it. If it brings up any dirt, take your cyl and wash it in lots of hot soapy water. Immediately dry and oil the cyl so it will not rust.

The piston's rings must have a small gap between the ends when they are installed in the cyl. This end gap is given in the shop manual and can vary quite a lot. Like .006" to .020"(.15mm to .08mm). End gap is measured by putting the ring to be measured in the cyl and pushing it up with the piston to within 1/2" of the top of the cyl. By pushing it with the piston, the ring is squared up in the cyl bore. Now you can easily measure the end gap. If the gap is too small, file a bit on the end of the ring (Carefully !). Do only a little at a time, until you are within spec. If it is too big... well... ah... tough !

When I install a new ring use I like to use a ring expander if I can. If you don't have one you can do it with your fingers, just be careful not to spread the ring open too far or bend it sideways too much. Rings are very hard and brittle and break easily. Always install rings with the markings on the rings up. A word here on rings. There are many different styles and types of rings. Dykes, Keystone, Standard, you name it. You must replace any ring with the same type and size. Some people think that the spring pressure exerted by the ring on the cyl walls is what seals in the combustion pressure. That is not true. Think about it. Combustion produces several thousands of pounds of pressure. You can compress the ring with one hand, right ? It is that combustion pressure itself that channels down between the piston and ring, pushing the ring against the cyl wall. So don't put a .5 over ring in a .25 over cyl and think you are helping, your not. In fact, that ring will not contact the cyl wall right. So you could be losing compression. Another thing, after you install all the rings, with the markings up, stagger the ring end gaps about 1/3 or 1/2 apart so the gaps are not in line with each other. If you have a 3 piece oil ring stagger them this way. On four strokes, you can have a one piece oil rig or a three piece oil ring. the three piece ones seem to work better but are harder to get in the cylinder.

Before you install the piston, oil the piston and cyl up real good. Move the rings around in their grooves and make sure there is plenty of oil on all the parts. Now you are ready to install the piston. Pistons do have a front and a back. If there is a mark or arrow on the piston it always goes to the front or exhaust side. On 4/strokes there may just be an "IN" in one of the valve pockets. This goes to the intake side. (Duh !) On most cylinders I like to use a Ring Compressor. There are lots of different types of ring compressors. You can even use a regular hose clamp. The piston and rings should go on smoothly with just a little tap with a piece of wood. They say you should be able to push the piston and rings on with your thumbs... but I never can. Bad thumbs I guess. So I use a bit of wood or a lead hammer very gently to tap it in. Do not force it. If it just will not go, reposition the ring compressor. With 3 piece oil rings you just about have to use a ring compressor. If the cylinder is a big port 2/stroke you may have to reach in through the intake port, with a long thin screw driver, and push the ring so it does not get caught in the port. Also remember, on a 2/stroke, to position the ring ends to the peg in each ring groove.

I like to put the piston with rings and one circlip installed, in from the top of the cylinder and push it down till the wrist pin hole is uncovered. Then I slide the cyl down to the rod (and bearing on a 2/stroke) and then push in the wrist pin. Install the circlip and push the cyl the rest of the way down. Don't forget the base gasket and sometimes a base o-ring. Before I install the circlip I like to put a rag in any hole the circlip could go down if it gets away from me during instillation. I always use new wrist pins, wristpin bearings, and circlips, although I can live with reusing a circlip. Replace with new, everything else.

Circlips come in a number of different flavors, but about 95% of the motorcycle pistons out there are of the wire type. Older Harley Davidsons used their own funny circlip that required a special tool to install. Newer HD models and aftermarket HD pistons are sort of coming around to the wire type. If you are not sure of the type, check with the manufacturer. Circlips are NOT interchangeable between types. DO NOT just pick anything and jam it in there. Use the type the manufacturer of the piston recommends. If the circlip fails and allows the wrist pin to hit the cylinder walls, bad things will happen ! Back in the 60s and 70s some of the high performance builders used Teflon or aluminum "Buttons" in place of circlips, but that has fallen out of favor and no one seems to use them anymore.

Two, three and four cylinder engines usually have the crank pins staggered so you can put the pistons in one or two at a time... makes for lots of fun. Go slow and they will go in !

Piston oversizes are usually marked on the piston. Trouble is, sometimes the markings are printed on with ink and not stamped in or they are worn off. If the oversize is marked on the piston, it can be in thousands of an inch, like this .020" oversize piston or in quarters of a millimeter, like this 0.50 mm oversize piston. Then, just to make it interesting, there can also be a code stamped in the piston top. This code number tells what oversize the piston is and what type of rings are used. I always measure the old piston so I can order the right oversize.

It seems all the rage now to have sleeveless plated cylinders. Sometimes, it's called Chrome Plating, Nikasil, Electrofusion, Boron Composite, SCEM Composite, Ceramic Composite, or who knows what. These cylinders are bored to the right size and then plated. The pistons use a softer metal than the plating for the rings. The idea being the rings will wear and the cylinder will not. It's been my observation that this is not always true. I've seen what sure looked like wear to me, in more than one plated cylinder. Granted, it's not quite as bad as a steel cylinder but... ! If a plated cylinder is damaged, you will need to bore it out big and press a new steel liner into it. Then bore the new sleeve to the right size for a new piston.

If the damage is not too bad, you may be able to have the damaged cylinder replated. I think this is just a high tech way of doing things on the cheap. One thing to remember. On Chrome Plated cylinders you MUST use cast iron rings and NOT chrome rings. If you use chrome rings on a Chrome Plated cylinder, things do not wear so well. It will start pealing the chrome off. You can use chrome rings on Nikasil, Electrofusion, Boron Composite and some others. Check with the ring's manufacturer to be sure. I gotta admit, plating does work good if you never seize an engine up, and we would never do that, would we ?

Something to remember, if you are working on an old bike and are having trouble finding a piston. As long as the wrist pin diameter is the same and you can bore the cyl to fit it. Almost any piston will work. You might have to cut the piston skirt down or drill big ports in it. You might have to grind the piston head to fit the combustion chamber or grind inside the skirt to make it the right weight, but with some imagination you can make it fit and it will work.

For example, in High School I used to take a Honda 175cc twin cylinder piston and make it work in my CT-90 engine. I would bore the cylinder out because the 175 piston (52mm) was bigger in diameter then the 90cc piston (50mm). It also had a much higher piston crown. I would put the valves in the cylinder head and then lay a piece of carbon paper on it with the carbon toward the piston. I then pressed the top of the piston into the combustion chamber and wiggled it about. The spots on the piston from the carbon paper are the high spots. I then took a hand file and filed off the carbon marks, moved the carbon paper around, rub the piston again, and file some more ! I would mark and file until no marks showed up. I would then file just a bit more. I then assembled the engine with a small piece of clay on the piston. Turn the engine over and then measure the thickness of the clay. That told me how much clearance there was between the piston and the cylinder head. You need about .040" of an inch clearance. My 90 was stroked so I had to cut down the piston skirt too. The wrist pin was the same diameter as the 90 so I was in ! Why did I do all this when CT-90 pistons are easy to get ? Well, it gave me a measured 13.8 to 1 compression ratio. As long as I could high octaine gas I could fly ! The point is, if you can't find the right piston, lots of times, you can make another one fit !

You will find that some pistons look kind of weird. This is because engine designers are always trying to get a bit more horsepower out of the engine. Check these pistons out.

Wow, I guess there is a bit more to pistons then I first thought!

Hone Your Cylinder

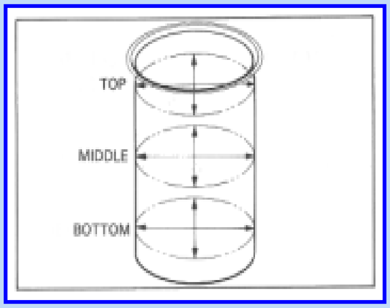
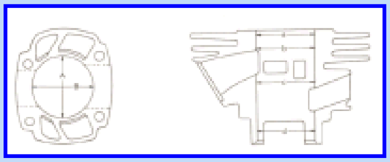
Honing a cylinder can go from mild to wild. If the cylinder is within specification and you are only going to put in a new set of rings, you must hone the cylinder to break the glaze. This will put a nice crosshatch pattern in the cylinder walls. The crosshatch pattern will hold oil and help lubricate the piston and rings as the rings wear in to the cylinder. That is mild. A cylinder hone can also be used to bore a cylinder to a bigger size and that is wild. Well... yeah, your right. I need to get a life if I think that is wild!

Cylinder hones can also be used to hone brake cylinders, clutch cylinders and most any round cylinder. Cylinder hones can be fairly cheap in price, around five dollars, or quite expensive. Ammco and Sunnen hones can cost hundreds of dollars. The cheap ones work well for cleaning up a spot of rust or breaking the glaze. The expensive ones can accurately bore a cylinder to accept the next oversize piston or bigger.



To Hone a cylinder is easy. Just stick the hone in the cylinder, slobber on some oil and have at it. Move the hone back and forth in the cylinder to produce a 45 degree cross hatch pattern and in a minute or so your done. That is assuming you don't need to bore it oversize. If the cylinder is well worn you will have to bore it oversize. In a cylinder that is grossly worn out, the piston, set at top-dead-center, will wiggle forward and back in the bore. This tells us two things. One, you need to bore the cylinder oversize and two, you are sadly lacking in your maintenance. If the piston is fairly tight you might be able to get away with just a hone job and a set of new rings. If you are unsure you will need to measure the piston clearance. You will need inside and outside micrometers to accurately make the measurements.

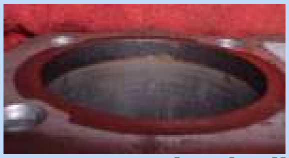
The procedure is simple but you must be very precise in it's execution.



1. Measure the diameter of the piston about one half inch up the skirt.
2. Measure the diameter of the cylinder at:
   - Both front to back and side to side.
   - Measured at top, middle and bottom of the cylinder.

Measure Piston

Measure Cylinder

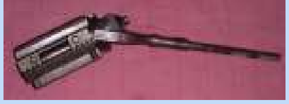


Measure Cylinder Places
Four Stroke

Measure Cylinder Places
Two Stroke.

Take the piston measurement and subtract it from the biggest cylinder measurement. Compare the result with the piston clearance given by the manufacturer of the piston. In other words if the cylinder measures 2.6114" and you subtract the pistons diameter of 2.609" you get .0024". Compare that to the piston manufacturers suggested minimum/maximum clearance. In this case that would be .0016"-.003" with a limit of .004". If it is within that specification you could hone the cylinder and put in a new set of rings. If it is OVER that specification you will need to bore the cylinder out to the next biggest oversize and buy a new piston and rings.

The reason you take so many measurements is because cylinders can wear at different rates at different spots in the cylinder. The most wear occurs at the top of the cylinder and in the front and back portion of the cylinder. The least wear is at the bottom of the cylinder. Sometimes, you can even see slight hone marks at the bottom of the cylinder, even after many miles. The cylinder wears in a taper and out of round from the top down.



Sometimes the wear is so pronounced that there is a ring worn into the cylinder just below the top of the cylinder at the spot where the rings stop. On engines that have their pistons installed from the bottom of the cylinder the ridge does not matter much for disassembly. On engines that have to have their pistons installed from the top of the cylinder there is a problem. The rings tend to catch on that ridge so you have to use a special tool called a Ridge Reamer to cut the ridge out the ridge.

Cheap Hones will brake the glaze but not much more. At least if you try to do more you are in for a real fun time. The problem is that you can't hold the taper and out of roundness with any kind of accuracy. This is not to say this can't be done, just that it is very hard to do. I once read of a man in India. He saw a young boy of about twelve years old slowly bore out a cylinder with a rat tail file. He said every day when he walked by this little mechanic shop he saw the boy working on the cylinder with that file. It took about five full days of work before he did it. That kid was a better mechanic then I'll ever be! At least he had more patience then I have. I totally believe the story. It could be done... just not in the USA.

This is not to say I haven't bored out some wild and crazy holes. In my wayward youth, for a friend, I once bored out a Briggs and Stratton cylinder, to the next oversize, with a ball hone. It actually worked too! Unfortunately, a motorcycle cylinder requires a bit more precision. Boring with a hone takes a long time. Like several hours. I once honed a cylinder .040" oversize. I held it to the right taper and out of roundness but it took a long, long time. You need a quality hone, I used an Ammco hone. Then you hone a bit and then you measure. Hone a bit and then measure. It takes hours and is very, well, boring! When you are finished you want a nice 45 degree angle cross hatch pattern in the bore. Never hone a cylinder dry. Use lots of oil when honing. Buy the special honing oil. It works much better then plain oil. Honing oil cools the cylinder and hone. It also enhances the cutting effect of the stones. Use a lot of honing oil!

The best way to bore a cylinder is to use a boring machine and not a hone. If you do use a hone you must use a high quality one like a Sunnen or an Ammco hone. Hones come in several sizes to fit different cylinder bores. Some of the Ammco hones have several sizes of stones so you can use a standard size hone in a large cylinder bore. The Ammco hones also come in several grit sizes. Coarse (60), fine (220) and super fine (320) for aluminum and plated cylinders. Some top-of-the-line hones use diamond impregnated stones but those are priced a bit out of my price range.

I suppose you could try to bore a cylinder with just about any hone but you need to remember this. You MUST hold out of roundness to .001-.002" inch OR less. Taper MUST be less then .001-.002" top to bottom. Shoot for .001" on both! The real trouble comes when the cylinder is already worn oval and tapered. A regular cheap hone will just keep wearing more taper and out of roundness. A good hone is rigidly made and if you are careful, it will pull the cylinder back into round. Start in the lower portion of the cylinder where there is almost no wear and the bore is perfectly round. From there you can work your way on up the cylinder. It is not so hard. It's just time consuming. Like the young boy in India. You have to be patient. You just have to hone a bit and measure, then hone a bit and measure. Continue till you get to the size you desire. The big problem is the time it takes. Removing .010" is not so bad but .020" or .040" takes a long time.

Resist the urge to put the hone in a drill press, kick her on high and have at it. Been there, done that. Didn't work so good. Slow, steady, and lots and lots of measurements. That is the way to go.

A better way to go is to use a boring machine. The bore job will be more accurate.

If the cylinder you are boring is from a two stroke, chamfer or break the edge of the ports with a file so the rings do not get caught on edges. A ball hone works great for this. Also remember to check the power valve. If it extends into the cylinder after boring it will have to be ground down so no part of it can touch the piston.

You can hone plated cylinders but only just a bit. All you want is to make a cross hatch pattern to help the rings seat. You may need to buy special stones depending on the kind of plating of the cylinder. Check with the manufacturer to be sure.

When you are finished, clean the cylinder with clean solvent and then wash it in warm soapy water. Then take a clean rag and put some fresh oil on it. Now wipe the newly honed cylinder down with it. If you see any dirt on the rag rewash the cylinder and wipe it down again. Do this until the rag comes up clean.

When all is said and done the best way is this. Measure the cylinder and piston. If the clearance is within specification, hone the cylinder a bit, put in new rings and drive on. If you must bore for an oversize piston, get the piston, get the correct clearance, take both and the cylinder to a machine shop that bores cylinders and let them bore it. This is the best and cheapest way to get the job done right.

Chinese Motorcycle Rings

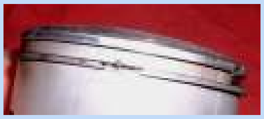
Rings have a mark on the side of the ring that goes up. This mark can be either a printed (Like with ink) mark or a mark stamped into the ring. Unfortunately, a lot of Chinese rings... well... don't! People keep asking me "If there is no mark, which way do the rings go?" I never really gave it much thought till I started working on some Chinese engines. Now, all of a sudden, this is an issue. After looking at a lot of ring sets and studying a lot of shop manuals, here is my best guess.

On four stroke engines the top ring is often chrome plated on the sliding surface. If it has a taper on the back side of the ring that taper should go up and it should be the second ring. If the front side of the ring is tapered, the taper should be up. I realize that some ring designs have a stepped or taper side that is meant to be installed down but I have not come across any being used in a motorcycle engine. Just because I have not run across them does not mean that they are not out there!



If the ring is not chromed it probably would be the second ring and again the tapered edge in the back of the ring should go up. Same on the front side. If there is a taper it should go up. These black rings have a parkerized coating that increases their resistance to wear. Sometimes the parkerized ring is used as the first or top ring too.

The three piece oil rings have no up or down side.

Some two strokes have a bevel at the ends of the ring, or the beginning, depending on your point of view. That bevel fits the peg in the piston. This bevel goes up. If there are two rings and one is chrome plated, the plated one goes in the top ring groove. If both rings are plated and one has a taper the tapered one is the second ring. Sometimes the second ring will have a ring expander behind it. Also check the thickness of the ring because sometimes the top and second ring can be of different thicknesses. I have not seen any Keystone or Dykes type rings from China but you never know what the future will bring! Make sure the ring compresses completely and smoothly into the ring groove. If it does not it is not the right ring for the groove. As far as I know Keystone and Dykes rings are ONLY used on two stroke engines. At least, I have never seen them used on four stroke engines!

To identify a Keystone ring place one side of the ring in the jaws of a vernier caliper and clamp down on it firmly. Now move the opposite side of the ring up and down. If it is a flat ring it will not rock. It will only flex. If it IS a Keystone type ring it wll rock until the Keystone edge hits the jaw of the caliper.

I have noticed that most Chinese engines, at this time (2010), don't have oversize pistons available. If an engine has run enough to require new rings and/or piston, the cylinder is almost always worn out too and requires either boring to the next oversize or replacement.

If it sounds like the Chinese need to MARK THEIR RINGS AND HAVE OVERSIZES, You would be right!

GEARBOXES

¶ Motorcycle engines do not produce all their power at all RPM's. There is very little power at idle and the power goes up as the engine RPM goes up. At a certain RPM, which is different for each engine, the power goes up quickly and continues to increase until it hits the maximum RPM for that engine. This is called the "Power Band". Generally small, high revving 2/strokes have a narrow power band, requiring lots of gears in the gear box. Large, low revving 4/strokes, have a big power band and don't need so many gears.

Anyway you go, you need some kind of Gearbox to keep the engine RPM within it's power band, while providing the bike with a good acceleration, and speed range. While there are lots of styles and types of gear boxes, I think they all seem to boil down to three different crankcase types.

1. Horizontally split...

   The crankcase has a seam on the horizontal plane. All multi cylinder I have seen are split Horizontally. This means you do not have to take the Cylinder Head off to replace a gear.

2. Vertically split...

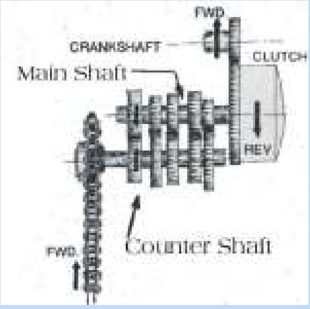
The crankcase has a seam on the vertical plane. Most single cylinder engines are split vertically but not all of them. The Honda XR/XL175 comes to mind.



3. Cassette type...

The gears are loaded in from one side. Like a Cassette tape. Triumph, BSA, and Harley-Davidson Sportsters have used this style of Gearbox.

Back in the day, say before mid 1950s, the Gearboxes were separate from the engines on a lot of machines but now-a-days the engines and Gearboxes are all one unit.

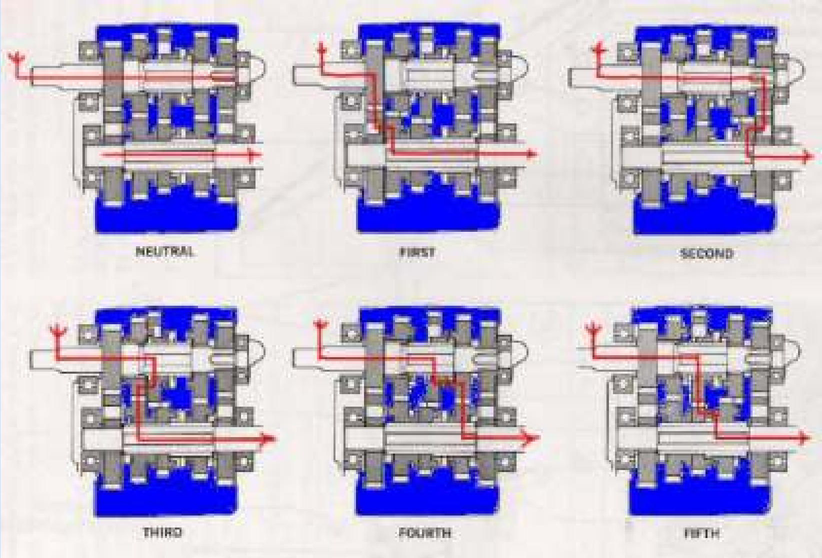
Most all of the Gearboxes on motorcycles are "constant mesh". That means all the gears are constantly meshed with one another and are always spinning. Because of this, there are no synchros to speed up the gears when they engage, like there are in automotive Gearboxes.

In the motorcycle gearbox there are two shafts. In most of them, the one with the clutch on the end of it is the main shaft. The other is the countershaft and it has the countershaft sprocket on one end of it. A few have the clutch and counter sprocket on the same shaft. Some of the gears are fixed and/or machined to the transmission shafts. The other gears slide or spin on these shafts. The gears that slide back and forth on the shafts have what are called Dogs.

These Dogs are knobs of metal that fit into holes in the gears beside them, locking the two gears together.

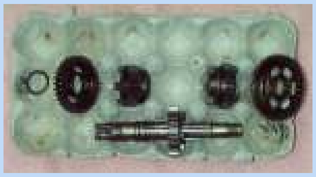
The sliding gears are moved back and forth by Shifter Forks which in turn are moved by a shifter drum. The Shifter Forks are usually attached to the Shifter Drum or move in a groove machined in the Shifter Drum. This drum is turned or rotated, through different styles of linkages, by the gear Shifter Shaft Linkage.

Shifter Drum



Shifter Drum with Grooves

Shifter Shaft Linkage



As the gears move back and forth they lock the main shaft and counter shaft together thru each set of gears, giving us 1st, 2nd, 3rd, etc. A few use a grooved plate to move the shift forks. While the design of the Gearbox is complicated, fixing, repairing, or overhauling it really isn't. However, there are a few things to watch for.

Always put everything back in EXACTLY the same position as when you removed it. Many shafts or gears can go in backwards and work just fine, BUT you will have reversed the wear pattern, and the parts will have to re-wear themselves into each other. This increases the wear on your parts for no good reason. So if for nothing more than the general principal of the thing, always reinstall parts in the exact position they were in. If necessary mark them with a Marks-a-lot felt tip pen.

When you pull the gears out, DON'T just dump the gears out on the floor like a sack of potatoes. Pull them out gently, as a unit. On some it is best to pull both shafts, drum and the shift forks together. On others it's best to remove the shafts that hold the shifter forks and remove them first, then the drum, and then the gear clusters. On some makes the gears are kept on the shafts by circlips. On others, the gears can fall right off. Often there are shims ( thin, large washers ) on the ends of the shafts. These shims are used to position the gears and take up any side play, so look for them when you pull any shaft out. They tend to stick to the bearings. You may need to clean the part of the counter shaft that is outside the crankcase. You know, where the countershaft sprocket is. Get all that rust and dirt off it, so it will slide on out through the bearing.

When you disassemble the gear shafts, use a cardboard egg crate to hold the gear parts in the order that you disassemble them.

If the transmission wants to jump out of gear, usually second gear, under power, take a good look at both the Dogs and the holes they fit in and the sides of the Shifter Forks for wear. If there is any wear at all on these parts replace them.

If the gear has broken teeth it is a good idea to replace both it and its mate on the other gear shaft. Normally broken teeth make quite a bit of noise. Sometimes, there is a lot of noise, but when you get the gear out... nothing looks broken. Look for a bent tooth, or a tooth with a bit of debris stuck on it. It could be a bit of steel, aluminum, who knows what, it can still make noise.

When you inspect the gear teeth, you will notice that, on almost all them, there are a lot more pits and wear lines than what we would like to see. These gears are from a well worn Honda CR480. A powerful bike back in the day. On this example the crankcase around the main crank bearing broke. The gears, pits and all, were going strong.

All the books say replace them... but man... if I did that, I'd have to replace them all. That would cost a lot of cash. So it's a judgment call you will have to make. If they are really bad, replace them. Just be sure to take into account the cost of the gears verses the worth of the machine and its power output. Expensive, high power machines deserve and require good gears, but a $500 machine does not need $500 worth of new gears.

Gearbox Bearings are another judgment call. They run in an oil bath and rarely wear out. Even if the oil level is run low the gear box bearings probably get more oil than the average 2/ stroke main bearing. As with gears if they look OK they Probably are. If it's a high power, expensive, machine...put in new. Cheapo machine? Just live with them.

Now, speaking of living with it...sometimes a Gearbox will loose a gear... bang, it's gone. Now, you can run through all the gears, everything sounds OK, but one of the gears is just not there anymore. Can you ignore it and just drive on? I think you can. Yes, there is always the risk that whatever broke could get jammed in other parts of the Gearbox, locking everything up and doing a lot of damage. Do you want to risk it? I think the odds are good that you will not have any problems, except your missing a gear. But understand, there is a RISK.

OK, now you assemble the gear clusters and put them and everything else back in the crankcases, with lots of oil, of course. Now you try to shift through all the gears, and man, it shifts sort of hard. Did you do something wrong? Maybe not. If you were careful on assembly and the gear shafts turn easily, just make sure you can shift thru all the gears. It helps to spin the gear shafts by hand as you shift to help things slide into position. If it's just a bit hard, kind of chunky, so to speak, you are OK. When it's spinning fast, it will work just fine.

AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSIONS

Yes, there are motorcycles with Automatic Transmissions. Honda had a 750cc and a 400cc, Suzuki had a 450cc, and Moto Guzzi had a 1000cc automatic. These were true automatics.

Most were made in the late 70's, early 80's and had a 2-speed gear box with a torque converter. I've ridden the Honda 750 and it was...well... automatic. With two speeds it was no ball-of-fire, but it was OK. You don't see them around much and as I have never worked on one, I probably shouldn't try to tell you how to fix one.

Rokon Had a 340cc dirt bike with a snowmobile type, belt drive, transmission with drive and driven clutches. Rokon also has a two wheel drive, backwoods, motorcycle with the same type of clutch. Works quilt well once you get used to it. It will go just about anywhere.

GEAR SHIFTERS

¶ Most all current motorcycles shift with a lever operated by your left foot. With the transmission in neutral, gears are selected by pressing down for first and then letting the lever return to the center position. Then, hooking your toe under the lever, pulling up for second gear. Third and all subsequent gears are selected by pulling up on the lever after allowing it to return to the center position. Sounds complicated but it is quite easy to do. Things were not always so easy. In the 1970s and earlier, the British made bikes that shifted with the right foot. Some were down for first and up for everything else. Some were up for first and down for the rest. Then the Japanese jumped in with neutral all the way up and everything else down, or neutral down and all the rest up. To make things really interesting they also came up with a rotary shift, which went 1,2,3,4, neutral,1,2,3,4, neutral... etc.

Supposedly, this was to make city riding easier. All you had to do was shift down one more time, to get into neutral, as you come up to a stop light. One bike, the Bridgestone 175, even gave you a choice between four gear rotary shift or five gear one up, the rest down shifting. A lever on the crankcase let you choose. Not only that, but before 1965 there was an extra neutral between fourth and fifth gears too. Some of the bikes from the 1920s and earlier even had hand shifting with a lever on the tank. I guess it's a good thing we are now somewhat standardized.

Motorcycle transmissions are made up of gears in constant mesh. Because of this, there are no syncros to speed up the gears. You don't need any. The gears are already spinning. To change between gears you need some kind of gear shifter mechanism to go along with that gear shift lever.

Gear shifters come in three different types.

1. Drum Shifters
    - Drum Slider Forks
    - Shaft Slider forks
2. Cam Plate and Shift Quadrant Shifter
3. Ball Lock Shifter

Drum Shifters

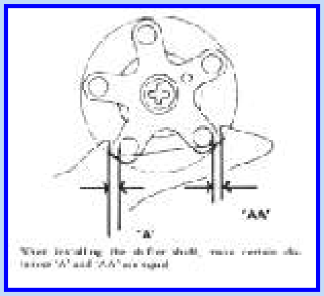
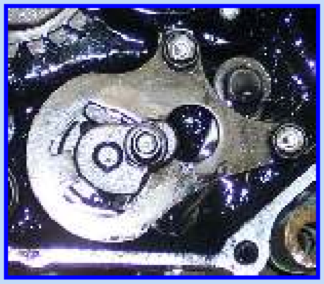
Drum Slider Forks

Shaft Slider Forks



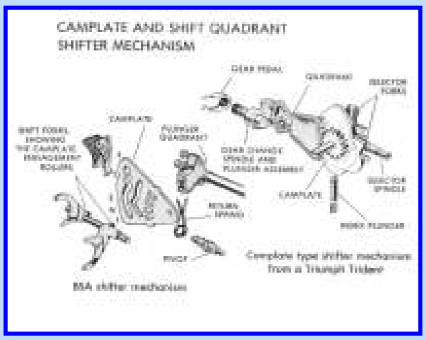
Drum Shifters are the most common. They come in two flavors. One type carries the shifter forks on the drum. With the other type, the forks are carried on their own shafts. Both types use grooves cut into the shifter drum, to move the forks back and forth. When the drum turns, the forks move back and forth, moving the gears in and out of engagement. These drums need something to turn them.



Most Japanese engines use a some sort of a Shift Pawl. To shift gears, you want to turn the drum only small amount and then hold it there. The shift pawl only turns the drum a set amount, each time the pawl is moved. Each time the gear shift lever is pressed down the pawl turns the drum the same amount. If the shift lever is pulled up, the pawl reverses and moves the drum in the opposite direction, the same amount. The shift lever moves the pawl and the pawl moves the drum. The drum, in turn, moves the shift forks and the shift forks move the gears in and out of mesh. The pawl presses against pins in the shift drum, but then a spring pulls the pawl back to a middle position and the drum kind of just sits there.

To keep the drum from turning, a wheel sometimes called a Shifter Detent, Shifter Drum stopper, or Shifter Cam Stopper, moves into grooves on the shifter drum, locking it into position. This wheel is spring loaded. this enables the wheel to move in and out of position, as the drum is turned by the pawl. Sometimes, instead of a wheel, a spring loaded plunder is used. This plunger has a rounded head that fit into Shifter Cam or holes in the shifter drum. This cam, or holes, have beveled sides allowing the plunger to move smoothly in and out of the hole as the drum is turned. Like everything in motorcycles, the ratchets come in several styles. Check your shop manuals!

The shifter pawls on some bikes can be adjusted. To adjust simply loosen the lock nut and adjust the pawls to the center position and retighten the locknut. Usually, you will never need to adjust this. This is not exactly a high wear item! But, it can be done.



The shifter drum can also be turned by a Ratchet Pawl in the end of the drum. There are several styles of Ratchet Pawls depending on the manufacturer. They all work, generally, the same way. As the shifter shaft turns, one ratchet is locked out and the other ratchet turns. When the shifter shaft turns the other way, the opposite ratchet is locked out and the other ratchet turns the shaft. Check your shop manual for the exact way your shifter is set up.

Camplate and Shift Quadrant Shifter

Camplate and Shift Quadrant shifter Mechanisms

Camplate and Shift Quadrant

Quadrant Shifter Pawl

In Camplate and Shift Quadrant shifter mechanisms, the shifter forks are carried on a plate. Grooves in this plate allow the forks to move the gears back and forth. There are twos styles of type of shifter. One has the grooves for the shifter forks cut right into the Shift Quadrant itself. The other has the grooves machined into a Camplate that the Shift Quadrant moves. This style is used mostly on British and European Makes.

Ball Lock Shifter

Lastly, we come to Ball Lock Shifters. This shifter style was made famous by Hodaka. A few other Japanese makes used it too, but Hodaka used it exclusively in all their bikes from the 90cc to 250cc. In ball lock systems, one gear shaft has all the gears machined on the shaft. The other shaft is hollow and has four holes in each gear position. There is a ball bearing in each of these holes. A gear rides around each set of four holes. The gears have four indentions cut on the inside of the gear. A Shifter Head moves back and forth, inside the shaft. It pushes the balls out and into the indentions in each gear. This changes each gear. When the next gear is chosen, the balls fall back into the shaft releasing the gear.

Because all the gears are always engaged with each other, you do not have to use the clutch to change gears. You use the clutch in first gear to get started, but after that, just let off on the gas and shift. Nobody uses this method anymore. Probably, this is because of the high horsepower of today's motorcycle engines. There are still Hodakas out there, so you may still run into this type of shifter.

As you might expect, there are a lot of other ways to shift those gears out there but these three cover about 95% of the motorcycles you are likely to run into.

MANUAL CLUTCHES

Clutches come in a number of designs, but they all are made to do two things.

- Help the motorcycle make a smooth start from a stationary position.
- Ease the transition of going from one gear to another.

Clutches are basically round baskets filled with alternating fiber and steel plates held together, tightly, with springs. One set of plates, usually the steel ones, is connected to the transmission. The other set, usually the fiber plates, is connected to the engine. The clutch lever compresses the springs so the plates are not pressed tightly together. This allows the clutch to disengage. This works pretty well and most times clutch life is quite good. However, as the clutch wears, the plates get thinner. This lessens the spring pressure. In addition, if you slip the clutch a lot as you engage it you can burn the plates a bit. All this is not good for the clutch and sooner or later you are going to need new plates.

Most of the Japanese bikes have a wet plate clutch. This means the clutch runs in a bath of oil. Dry plate clutches run dry with no oil. BMWs, some Harley-Davidsons, a few Japanese bikes, and others have dry clutches.

Repair is really quite simple. Remove the clutch cover, being careful to check for any washers from the kick starter that may stick to the inside of the clutch cover. Then loosen the nuts or bolts that hold and tension the clutch springs. Now remove the the clutch plates. On some clutches you pull the plates and the inner clutch basket as a unit after removing the nut or circlip holding it on. On others, you remove an outer clutch plate/spring carrier and then pull out the plates individually. There may be large rubber rings or large flat spring like things between the plates. There might be only one or there could be one between every plate. Sometimes the steel plates have a sort of dished out edge on one side, for better oiling I guess. Each one is staggered from the one before it and the one after it. Be sure and put all the plates, o-rings, washers, etc. back in the same order you took them out. Measure the thickness of the fiber plates and compare that measurement to the one given in your shop manual. If they are too thin replace them. If you do not have the thickness measurement just look at them. Most times if they are worn out they will LOOK worn out and/or smell burnt. If they smell burnt, replace them. Even if they look and measure good. Turn them on edge, both fiber and steel plates. If they are bent replace them. Look at the inner and outer fingers. If they are damaged or worn, replace them. Look at the clutch basket. Inspect the grooves the clutch plate fingers slide into. Both inner and outer. if they are badly worn, consider replacing the clutch basket.

Take the new fiber plates and soak them in a pan of oil for an hour or two before assembly. If you are reusing the old plates you can just coat them with oil. Make sure that the outer clutch plate that carries the springs meshes right with the clutch basket. On some, they will only go in the right way, but on others the grooves will not line up right and this prevents the springs from pushing the plates together. Some clutches will have arrows that must match. Others won't have anything... you just have to make sure they mesh up right.

Most clutches have the disengagement mechanism in the center of the clutch. Some activate it from the clutch cover and some use a rod going through the mainshaft of the transmission. This rod is activated by a cam or worm on one end of the rod, pushing the rod against the spring plate, releasing the clutch. This rod passes in front of the counter shaft sprocket and can easily be bent by small twigs and branches and gook thrown off by the rear chain. If you have this type and your clutch suddenly stops working, check here first for a bent clutch rod, before you tear the clutch apart. These rods can also be in two parts with a ball bearing between them. Some have a ball bearing only on the worm end. Don't let that ball bearing fall out and get lost.

Sometimes, when a bike has been sitting a long time, like over winter, the clutch plates will stick together. You pull the clutch lever in but the plates will not disengage. About 60-70% of the time you can get them to release by running the bike up to 15-20 MPH and locking up the rear brake while you hold the clutch lever in (disengaged). If this does not break it loose, you will have to take the clutch cover off and with the lever held on, pry the plates apart with a screwdriver and reoil them a bit.

Remember, most engines have a flat metal shim on the kick starter shaft. Lots of times it will stick to the clutch cover when you pull it off. Make sure you put it back on the kick starter.

After everything is finished and the clutch cover back on, don't forget to refill the engine with oil.

Some clutches, like the BMWs, Norton Commandos and some Harleys, have a single (or two) Heavy spring that is held in by a large circlip. These require a special tool to remove.

The BSAs and Triumphs require a special puller to get the clutch basket off.

All clutches must have a bit of free play in the cables and rods so the clutch springs can exert the maximum amount of pressure on the plates. If there is an adjustment screw on the rod, loosen the lock nut and tighten the screw until there is no more free play, then loosen it about 1/8 of a turn and tighten the lock nut. The adjustment screw can be right OR left thread, so watch out. A shop manual would be of help here. The adjusting screw can also be UNDER the clutch cover on the clutch spring plate. After you have made this adjustment, adjust the clutch cable keeping at least a little free play in the cable. Remember, on some bikes, the only adjustment is the free play of the clutch cable. Depending on the bike, the cable can be adjusted on both ends and in the center somewhere, only on both ends or only on one end.

AUTOMATIC DRIVES & CLUTCHES

Automatic Drives and Clutches on motorcycles have been around a long time. The Rudge Multi used a form of the variable pulley drive, back in the 1912, to give a supposed 19 speeds. Most of the automatic clutches you will run across will be one of four types.

1. Centrifugal with clutch plates.
2. Centrifugal with clutch shoes
3. Centrifugal drive and driven clutches with a belt connecting them. (Snowmobile Type)
4. Fluid Torque converter

Centrifugal with Clutch Plates

This type has clutch plates and usually goes with a transmission. Weights press the steel and fiber plates together engaging the clutch as the engine speed rises. Weak springs disengage the clutch as engine speed drops. Honda 50, 70 and 90cc engines and others, use this type of clutch. These Hondas use a lever on the end of the shifter shaft to completely disengage the clutch to shift gears.

Centrifugal with Clutch Shoes

This type has clutch shoes. The shoes are held in with springs. As the engine speed rises, the shoes press against the clutch housing, and engages the clutch. These are used a lot on 4 wheel ATVs along with a regular clutch and transmission. Go carts and those little, big wheeled, mini-bikes with Briggs & Stratton engines also use this type of clutch.

Centrifugal Drive and Driven Belt Clutch

This type has a drive clutch and a driven clutch that are connected by a big thick belt. The sides of the drive clutch (mounted on the engine crankshaft) are pressed together with weights as the engine speed goes up. This makes the belt climb the sides effectively making the front pulley bigger. The driven clutch (Mounted on what ends up being the countershaft sprocket) has a weak spring that pushes the pulley sides together. As the front pulley gets bigger the belt pushes against the rear pulley, overcoming the spring, and making the rear pulley smaller. What all this means is that you have a infinitely variable transmission with this type of automatic clutch. This type is used on Honda Odyssey 4 wheelers and lots and lots of snowmobiles. It is also used on some mini-bikes, go-carts, and on Rokon two wheel drive dirt bikes. The old Rokon 340cc motorcycles used it too.

Fluid Torque Converters

Honda had a 750cc and a 400cc, Suzuki had a 450cc, and Moto Guzzi had a 1000cc automatic. Most were made in the late 70's, early 80's and had a 2-speed gear box with a Fluid Torque Converter that worked just like a car. You don't see too many of these bikes nowadays, and on most, the Torque Converter was a sealed unit, requiring no service.

Repair

Repair on all of these is pretty simple. If the plates, shoes or belts are badly worn replace them !

MOTORCYCLE COUNTER BALANCERS

Proverbs 11:1 A false balance is abomination to the LORD: but a just weight is his delight.

Most motorcycle engines vibrate. Some more then others. Some bike engines are smooth, I'll grant you that. I have, personally, balanced a nickel, on the cylinder head of a Honda GL1000, with the engine running 5000 RPM. Smooth is out there, but not every engine is a flat four. The reason the flat, four cylinder engine is so smooth is because the opposing pistons move in and out together. This cancels out the vibration from the opposite cylinder.

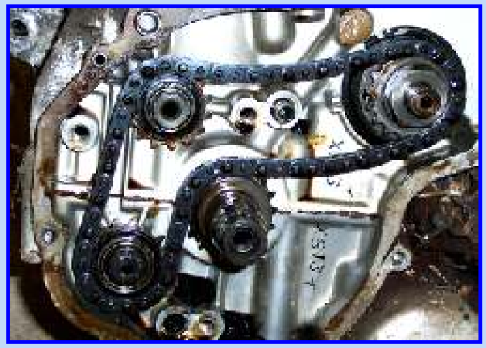
On a single cylinder engine, The vibration from the weight of the moving piston is canceled out, in part, by the engines flywheel weight. If the engine has more then one cylinder, there are more whirling masses of metal. This makes things easier to balance. A twin is going to be a bit smoother then a single. A three cylinder engine is going to be a lot smoother and a four smoother still.

Engines with three, four and six cylinders usually do not have Balancers, but some four cylinder machines, like the Yamaha Venture, do have a balancer. Most fours do not. For most singles and twins, we need a Counter Balancer. A single cylinder engine normally has one Counter Balancer and it works like this:

1. At "Top Dead Center" (TDC) the upward forces of the piston and connecting rod weight (100%) is off set by the downward flywheel weight (50%) and the Counter Balancer weight (50%). The total imbalance now equals zero.
2. At 90 degrees after TDC the forces of the piston and connecting rod is zero. The crankshaft and balancer weights off set each other so they are zero too.
3. At "Bottom Dead Center" (BDC) the piston and Counter Balancer weights again oppose each other canceling the inertia of their weights out.
4. At 90 degrees "Before Top Dead Center" (BTDC) the weights again cancel each other out.

Twin cylinder engines usually have two Counter Balancers and work in a similar manner as singles cylinder engines.

The balance factor of the crankshaft flywheel weights is changed to match the weight of the Counter balance. Do not remove the Counter Balancer(s) from your engine to get more horse power unless you rebalance the crankshaft flywheel weights.

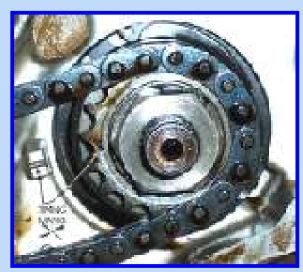


Counter Balancers come in two types of drives.

1. Gear Drive
2. Chain Drive

There can be one or two balancers. I suppose you could have more but I've never seen more then two on one engine. They seem to work pretty good. They can turn a ride that causes you to stop every half hour and scratch all over, to a ride that is quite pleasant.

Gear Drive Counterbalancer



Chain Drive Counterbalancer

Gear drive Counterbalancers do not change or go out of adjustment, but they must be set right when you assemble the engine. There will be a gear on the crankshaft and it will mesh with the gear on the balabcer's shaft. There are punch marks on both gears and they must align. Double check those marks. You will not believe how much it vibrates if they are a couple teeth off. I did that once, on purpose of course. (Yeah, right,... sure !) It made that bike a definite tooth rattler. Changed it back to the right setting... smooth as silk ! The gears can be outside the crankcase, under the clutch cover, or inside the crankcase. In other words, an easy goof to fix, or a very hard one. Word to the wise, double check your work ! A lot of Honda, Yamaha and Suzuki singles use this type of Counter Balancer.

Chain Drive Counterbalancers can change as the chain wears. They usually have a way to take up or adjust slack on the chain as it wears. Some Yamaha and Honda twins use adjustable, chain driven, Balancers. Usually, one of the sprockets can move, tightening or loosening the chain. Sometimes the adjuster sprocket is spring loaded. Simply loosen and then tighten the adjuster, and the Balancer chain will be adjusted automatically, at least till the chain is worn out.

The drive and driven sprockets will have a mark on the sprocket and a mark on the crankcase. There will be one or two idler and/or adjustment sprockets too, depending on the number of Balancers used. The marks on the dive and driven sprockets must match the corresponding marks on the crankcase with the chain assembled and everything hooked up and the chain adjusted. If the sprockets are fitted on the Balancer shaft with a spline, the shaft will have a punch mark on it too. This mark must be matched to the mark on the sprocket.

Kawasaki 400/440 twins use two, chain driven, Balancers that are not adjustable. When you assemble the engine, match the plated links of the Balancer chain with the mark on each Balancer sprocket. When the chain wears, you must replace it. This entails splitting the crankcases. This may not be as bad as it sounds. I've seen a number of these engines go 30-40,000 miles before problems arise.

Counter Balancers are a good way to smooth out the vibes on single and twin cylinder engines. They must be installed right and if it's got a chain, it must be adjusted right, and remember, chains do wear out.

KICK STARTERS

¶ To me, Kick Starters fall into two groups. Those you can fix easily and those you can't easily fix. Let's look at the hard to fix ones first.

Some designers place every part of the Kick Starter inside the crankcase, with only the shaft sticking out. The Kick Starter has a gear on it's shaft. That gear moves back and forth on the shaft in grooves cut in the shaft. When you turn the Kick Starter the gear is thrown into mesh with an idler gear which in turn is in mesh with the mainshaft of the transmission. The mainshaft is connected to the clutch and the clutch is connected to the engine crankshaft. When the engine starts and you release the pressure on the Kick Starter, the kick start gear is thrown out of mesh with the idler gear. The problem with this arrangement is that all the Kick Starter gears and springs are within the crankcase. You must remove the engine from the frame and split the crankcase if a gear or spring breaks. This is not good. A lot of the early Honda dirt bikes were like this.

A slightly better way has the kicksarter return spring on the outside of the crankcase and everything else on the inside. At least with this arrangement you can replace the spring if it breaks.

Kick Starter Spring outside the Crankcases.

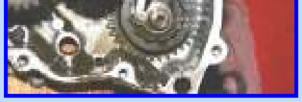
The best way is with everything on the outside of the crankcase. It basically works the same as the internal type but you can easily get to everything to fix it. Just take off the clutch cover and, at worst, the clutch basket and there you are. The kick starter shaft turns, forcing the Kick Starter gear into mesh with the idler gear. The idler gear is already in mesh with the big ring gear on the clutch, which is also in mesh with the gear on the end of the crankshaft. All this turns the engine over and starts it up.

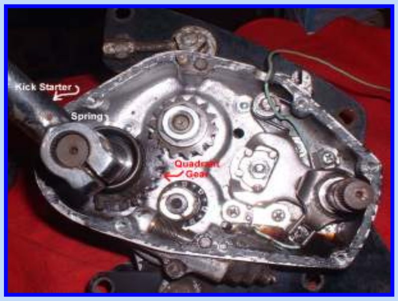
To work, the starter gear has to be able to lock in place when the Kick Starter is depressed and then unlock when the Kick Starter is released and the engine starts. There are a lot of ways to do this.

1. Lateral Engagement Kick Starter
2. Full Ratchet Kick Starter
3. Pawl Ratchet Kick Starter
4. Quadrant Gear Kick Starter

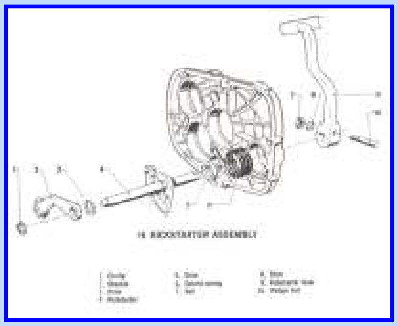


In a Lateral Engagement Kick Starter, grooves on the shaft allow the gear to move back and forth, engaging the idler gear to start the engine and then disengaging the idler gear when the engine starts. This is done with a friction spring clip around the shaft and grooves cut at an angle on the Kick Starter shaft. When the shaft is turned in one direction, the gear moves lengthwise along the shaft. When the shaft turns the opposite direction, the gear also reverses direction. The friction spring clip rides in a groove cast into the

A Full Ratchet Kick Starter is another way to engage and disengage a starter gear. A beveled edged arm, or Ratchet Tab, is cast as part of the starter ratchet. This arm pushes against an angled metal lock out plate, when the Kick Starter is at rest, pushing the ratchet out of mesh with the starter gear. The starter gear is in mesh with the idler gear and spins with it freely. Pushed by a spring, when the Kick Starter shaft is turned, the ratchet locks with the starter gear turning the engine over, and starting the engine.



In a Pawl Ratchet Kick Starter there are pawls between the Kick Starter shaft and the Kick Starter gear. These pawls lock the shaft to the gear when the shaft is turned one way and release the shaft when it is turned in the opposite direction.



Lastly is a Quadrant Gear Kick Starter. It uses a kind of half gear that engages a Kick Starter pinion gear when the Kick Starter is rotated. This spring loaded pinion gear has ratchet teeth that allow it to lock up when turned in one direction and slip when turned in the opposite direction. Quadrant Gear style Kick Starter are used by a number of British, European, and American Motorcycle engines.

Triumph
Quadrant Gear
Kick Starter

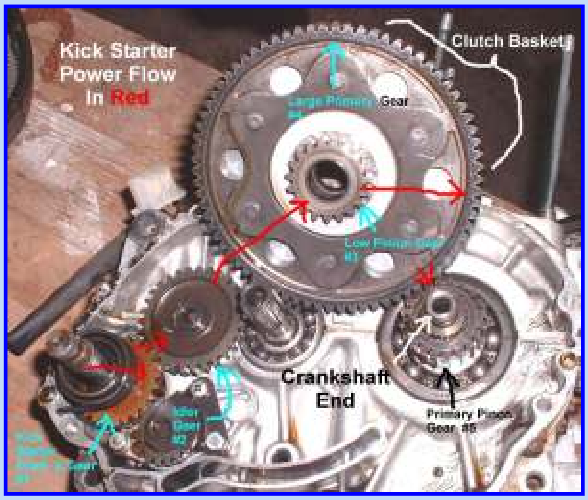
BMW
Quadrant Gear
Kick Starter

BMW
Quadrant Gear
Kick Starter Parts

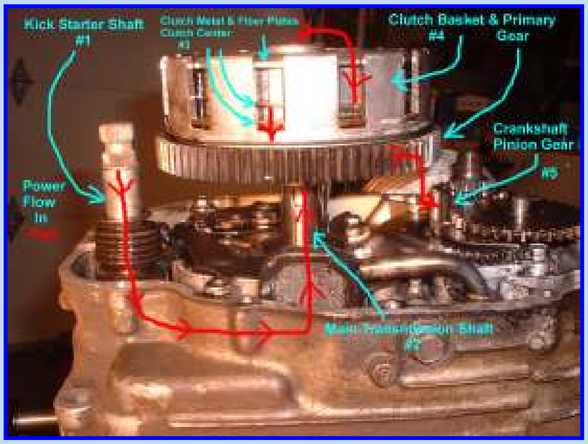
Most all Kick Starters use one of these four methods of engaging the Kick Starter gear. However, the details may vary a bit between manufacturers and even between different engines from the same manufacturer. Check your shop manual.

Some dirt bikes have an automatic compression release. This is a little cam on the Kick Starter shaft that pulls on a cable, activating the compression release at just the right time, allowing you to start the engine with less effort. When you install the cam onto the Kick Starter shaft there will be tiny alignment punch marks on the Kick Starter shaft and the cam. These punch marks must align so the compression release works at the right time. Speaking of punch marks. Some starter gears must be aligned to a certain position on the Kick Starter shaft. Punch marks are used here too. Always look for punch marks, on the shaft and gear, as you take the Kick Starter apart and match them up when you reassemble things.

This gives you an idea as to how the Kick Starter works. The exact way is detailed in your shop manual but the general principles are all the same. The Kick Starter shaft must lock up when you kick it and unlock when you release it. I've seen some manufacturers of dirt bikes have five or six different variations of basically the same Kick Starter on their bikes. Why the changes, and they are all very minor changes, I cannot say. Got to be new and improved, right?



Some bikes like, Bultaco, have the Kick Starter on the left side. You start it with your left foot. The old Husqvarna dirt bikes did too. Even the Japanese did it. Remember the Suzuki Titan? A 500cc, two stroke twin.



I don't particularly like Kick Starting with my left leg. You would think you would get used to it but I never could. It seems other people feel the same way as most bikes have the Kick Starter on the right side.

The power of the Kick Starter is channeled to the crank shaft of engine in one of two ways. At least I have only found two ways.

1. Primary Drive Kick Starting.
2. Transmission Drive Kick Starting.

Primary Kick Starter

Transmission Kick Starter

In the Primary Drive System the gear on the Kick Starter shaft (#1) moves and engages the Kick Start idler gear (#2) which turns a small Low Pinion gear (#3) on the Clutch Basket. The outside of the Clutch Basket has a larger Primary gear (#4) that engages the Primary Pinion gear (#5) on the Crankshaft. Because of this Low Pinion gear (#3) on the Clutch Basket, the power from the Kick Starter goes straight to the Crankshaft and NOT through any of the transmission shafts. That enables the engine to be started even with the clutch disengaged.

Starting while the engine is in gear is possible. That can be very handy if your engine dies on some steep dirt trail or the like. Your hanging there on the side of a mountain with a dead engine. It is somewhat difficult to shift down to neutral to restart your engine.

In the Transmission Drive System, at least that is what I call it. While there is an "Official" name for the Primary Drive Kick Starting system there is no name for the other system that I know of. So I dub thee the "Transmission Drive System."

So in the Transmission Drive System the power from the Kick Starter shaft (#1) gear engages the main transmission shaft (#2). The Transmission main shaft passes power through the Clutch Center, through the Clutch Plates (#3) to the Clutch Basket Primary gear (#4) and on to the Crankshaft (#5). If the clutch is engaged the power will continue to flow to the Crankshaft, turning the engine over with the Primary Pinion gear. If the Clutch is pulled in and disengaged, the engine will not turn over. This makes starting in gear almost impossible.

Well, yes, you could hold that front brake, give it a monumental kick, pull in the clutch just as it starts and not roll down that hill. Oh well, your right. it is much easier to roll, head over heels over motorcycle, on down that hill.

Now you can have the Large, Clutch Basket, Primary Gear driven by a transmission gear through the clutch basket and not an Idler Gear. To work the Clutch Basket center must be a splined fit to a gear on the main shaft. If there are no splines on the shaft and Clutch Basket and no idler gear or low primary pinion, then it no starty with the clutch pulled.

How do you tell which system you have? Easy, while in gear, pull in the clutch lever and kick. If nothing happens you have the Transmission Drive type. If the engine turns over, you have a Primary Drive type.

You got that? Lots of useless information here because whatever system you got, that is the system your stuck with. You can't change it. However, now you know how it works.

The Kick Starter must be able to spin the engine at least three or four hundred RPM.
Most electronic ignition systems have an anti kick back feature that cut the ignition at low speeds.

Just about all the newer street bikes have no Kick Starter at all. I guess they think we are all wimps and can't Kick Start our bikes in an emergency. Maybe they are right. All the movies I see now, have the big, bad, biker gang types, who run out, jump on their bikes and hit the button. It just isn't the same as when they Kick Started them!

Water Cooling

I never really liked water cooling. Fins just look so pretty and water jackets so ugly. But, water cooling is here to stay and it is pretty simple. Most all water cooled engines have a radiator, thermostat, fan, pump, and the connecting hoses and pipes. The fans are usually controlled by a heat activated, thermostatic switch located in the radiator. For the most part they are trouble free, but there are a few things you need to know.

Always run antifreeze, in a 50/50 mix, in the radiator. If you use water and forget to put antifreeze in and things freeze... it could crack your engine block/cylinder and ruin your engine. Always use a motorcycle type antifreeze or a car type without silicates. Some car types contain silicates that can accelerate wear on your water pump. This probably doesn't matter for dirt bikes because they just don't put on that many miles, but in a street bike it's important. Use an antifreeze designed for an aluminum engine without silicates. There are several brands on the market, just read the label. Always use distilled water, if possible. This cuts down on the buildup of mineral salts that can coat the inside of the radiator, cutting down it's efficiency. It's also a good idea to replace the hoses every couple of years they tell me but I don't think very many people do. It's still a good idea. Same with the antifreeze fluid too.

Closed Thermostat

Open Thermostat

If things start running hot and the fluid level is ok, check the thermostat. You can check it by suspending the thermostat in a pan of water with a thermometer. Then heat the water and see if it opens at the temperature that's marked on the thermostat. If it does, check to see if the pump is pumping. Take the radiator cap off and look down the fill tube. Not the overflow (coolant reservoir) tank cap, but the pressure cap on the radiator. Do this with the thermostat out and you should be able to see the fluid flow through the radiator. You could do it with the thermostat in but you have to let everything heat up so the thermostat will open. Could be fun! If there is flow, then the pump is working, check for a plugged radiator. Some you can fix and others you have to replace and they're not cheap.

Radiator Cap

If the temperature goes up just when you are idling at a stop light and the fluid level is OK, check it see if the fan works. Sometimes you can just ground the wire going to the fan thermostat switch, or pull the wires at the fan and connect them directly to the battery. If the fan works, replace the sending unit.

You can run without a thermostat but it's not a good idea because the thermostat controls the flow of water from the radiator to the engine. Some old line mechanics theorize that if the flow is too fast, the water doesn't stay in the radiator long enough to cool off so your engine could end up running too hot. Others disagree and feel the engine will run too cold and never reach operating temperature. It may depend on how efficient the system is to begin with. Also, when starting from cold, it would keep the engine too cold, as the engine would have to heat up all the coolant in the radiator as well as the engine coolant. Take your pick, but all agree you need a thermostat to keep the engine temperature right.

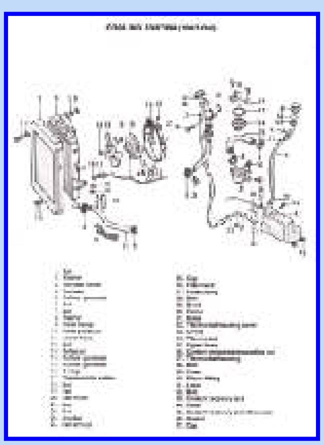
Coolant Reservoir



Coolant Reservoir

Most Cooling Systems have a Coolant Reservoir Tank, also called a Recovery or Overflow Tank. This tank catches coolant that overflows from the radiator when it is hot then, as the engine cools, the coolant is sucked back into the radiator. Radiators operate under pressure. The Radiator Cap holds the pressure in until it reaches whatever pressure the cap is set for, usually ten to twenty pounds. When the engine gets hot from running, the internal pressure of the Radiator goes over the pressure of the Radiator Cap. The cap then releases that pressure into the Coolant Over Flow Tank.

When the radiator is full of Anti-Freeze the Anti-Freeze is vented into the overflow tank. When the engine is turned off and everything cools down the Anti-Freeze is sucked back into the Radiator. The Over Flow Tank should have just a bit of Anti-Freeze in it when cold. There is usually a line on the tank. Keep the coolant level at this line. That way it has room for the over flow when hot but still has all the Anti-freeze the Radiator needs when it is cold.

When you refill your radiator with new coolant remember to recheck the coolant level in the radiator again after you have run the engine up to operating temperature and then allowed it to cool off. Also recheck the fluid in the overflow tank too.

Engines run usually best with a 190 degree thermostat. Most bike thermostats only come in one temperature... the one they give you! I just mention this because some people think that running a cooler thermostat helps the engine cool better, but it doesn't really matter. Combustion runs a lot hotter than that water. 10-15 degrees doesn't mean a thing to that engine, but where I live it's cold... I really like a nice HOT heater! But, as bikes don't have heaters (I guess they could though.) this whole paragraph doesn't really matter! Anyway...

If you start your engine and water starts coming out the radiator cap you might have a blown head gasket or a cracked head. Somehow combustion pressure is getting into the cooling system. Of course, not always... people tell me all the time I've got a cracked head, but I ride an air cooled BMW, and I've checked. Its head is not cracked... I wonder what they mean?

Water Pump Impeller
Single Cylinder

Water Pump Impeller
Two Cylinder

Water Pump Impeller
Two Cylinder
Back Side

Some Water Pumps, mostly on single cylinder dirt bikes, are cast into the side of the crankcase. Others are separate units that bolt on like car water pumps. Some water pumps have a "Weep Hole", also known as a "Tattle Tale" or "Telltale" hole, in the side of the pump itself or in the pump housing. If there is any leakage of coolant from this "Weep Hole" the pump seals and bearings are failing. The pump will need to be replaced, and soon!

You may have more that one radiator. Many dirt bikes have two.

One Radiator

Two Radiator

Always run the engine easy till the engine and coolant warm up. If you push things hard with a cold engine you could get what some call "Cold Seizure". Some think the piston expands faster than the cool cylinder, others think the problem is poor lubrication. Doesn't make much difference what you think causes it if you end up walking, so warm the engine up before you push it OK? Good idea even with an air cooled engine.

If your head gasket is leaking a bit it can foul out your spark plug.

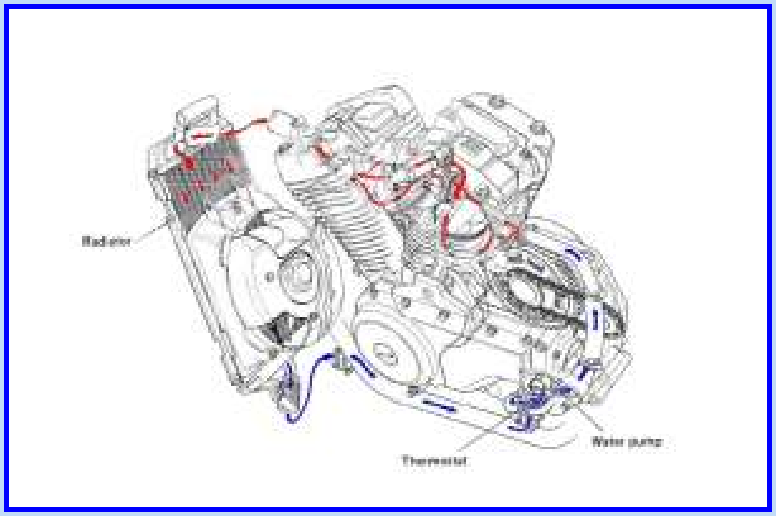
Heads and Cylinders are cooled with water through passages in the cylinder. Sometimes they have O-Rings for head gaskets.

Most Fans are electric and a sensor on the radiator tells the Fan when to turn on or off. Some Fans are mounted on an engine driven shaft and can break like this one from a CX500 Honda.

Do not get the anti-freeze on painted surfaces. It could harm the paint. Also remember that anti-freeze is very poisonous. Do not leave pans of it sitting around where unauthorized personal (Like pet dogs) could get into it.

Mineral salts can build up in the radiator and in the internal engine passages. This can really cut down the amount of heat transferred from the engine to the coolant and then from the coolant to the radiator. This makes the engine run hot. To remove these salts, drain the radiator and refill it with plain tap water. Now add some Oxalic acid to the water. How much? That's hard to say. If the system holds a gallon or two of coolant use maybe a pint of the Oxalic. If it holds less, use six or eight ounces. Now run it for hour or so and then drain and fill the system with water. Add a box of Baking Soda to the water and run the engine for another ten or fifteen minutes. The Baking soda neutralizes the acid. Drain and flush the radiator with fresh water and then refill it with 50/50 distilled water and anti-freeze. Mix the acid water and baking soda water together and maybe add some more baking soda to completely neutralize the acid to a PH of 7.0. Now dispose of it in accordance with EPA regulations! Remember, this is acid even if it is diluted... don't get any on you. If you do, rinse with plenty of water and baking soda.

I heard this the other day, and it sounds like it might be true. Acid builds up in the coolant over a long period of time. this can make the radiator act like a big battery so to speak. Hook a volt meter with the positive lead to the positive on the battery and then stick the negative lead in the coolant. Do this at the radiator cap and don't touch the sides of the radiator, just the coolant. If it reads more than three tenths of a volt MORE that battery voltage, Replace the coolant. There's too much acid built up in it. I'll have to run a few tests on this but it sounds good to me.



All this is a big pain in the rear. I think it was Jay Leno who said "I don't trust any bike I can't see through". I heartily agree.

Unsticking Stuck Engines

Stuck engines are a fact of life for a mechanic. There can be many reasons why an engine will not turn over or appear not to turn over...

1. Seized (Melted) piston(s).
2. Seized Rusted Piston(s).
3. Seized up crankshaft bearings.
4. Seized rod bearings.
5. Seized transmission.
6. Seized clutch.
7. Seized kickstarter gears.
8. Seized electric starter, gear train and or starter clutch.
9. Seized drive line or rusted chain.
10. Seized brakes.

OK, you try to kick start the engine or hit the starter button and things are frozen. Don't try to kick harder. You will just end up breaking things. We must first figure out what type of seizure we are dealing with. Make sure the engine is in neutral. Now push it. If it pushes easily, you now know that the rear brakes, chain or drive line and the gears on the countershaft of the transmission are OK. Now put the engine in it's top gear and again try to push it. If the engine will turn over, It's not stuck. The problem is in the kickstarter gears. If there is only an electric starter, the problem is in it or the electric starter gears and/or starter clutch.

If it still will not turn over, pull one of the engine side covers off so you can get a wrench or socket on the crankshaft bolt. This bolt is usually on the crankshaft side that has the alternator rotor. Try to turn the crankshaft. If it will turn, then the crankshaft, piston(s), mainshaft gears and clutch are probably OK and the problem is in the kickstarter or electric starter geartrain. If it will not turn, pull in the clutch lever. If the crankshaft now turns the problem is probably in the mainshaft gears. If the crankshaft still won't turn, the piston(s) may be rusted or seized to the cylinder walls. It is possible that the mainshaft gears and the clutch are locked up but usually it is the pistons. If the clutch is seized, you probably will be able to turn the crankshaft back and forth just a bit. If so, pull the clutch cover and inspect the clutch. Like I say, most times it will be the piston(s) that are locked up. This is especially true if the engine has been sitting for a long time or if things locked up on you while riding and you skidded to a, hopefully upright, halt.

If the piston(s) are stuck put some penetrating oil down the spark plug hole(s) and try to turn the engine over using the kickstarter or wrench on the crankshaft bolt. If it will not move, work the wrench back and forth. Don't get carried away and break things. If it will not move, it will not move and we must find another way to free up the engine. More penetrating oil and letting things sit overnight may help. If not, we need to apply a bit more force.

To apply this extra force we use grease and hydraulic pressure. To do this, we make a tool to pump grease into the spark plug hole. To make this tool you take an old spark plug, of the proper type, and cut the top edge of the metal portion of the spark plug off. Take a hammer and punch and knock the porcelain center out of the Steel Spark Plug Body. Now weld a pipe fitting, that a grease gun will screw into, onto the top of the steel spark plug body.

Cutting spark plug for Hydraulic Tool.

Cut spark plug for Hydraulic Tool.

Hydraulic Tool.

Now we can't use the tool just yet. That would be to easy. We must first prepare the engine. For a four stroke, you must make sure the valves are closed. Because the engine is frozen, you can't turn it over to close the valves. Therefore, you must remove the cams or rocker arms so the valves will close. To do this, you may have to cut the cam chain. If you do have to cut the cam chain, check and see if the cam chain has a master link. If it does not, you will need to find a replacement that does. If no master link can be found, you will have to split the crankcases to replace the cam chain with a new endless one. Another problem is the valves themselves. If one is stuck open or bent, you must remove the cylinder head, and reseat the valve or replaced it. Then put the head back on and torque it down. Put the Hydraulic Spark Plug Tool you just made in the spark plug hole and tighten it down. Connect the grease gun and start pumping. The grease will exert thousands of pounds of pressure on the piston head, pushing it out of the cylinder.

The procedure is the same for two stokes except for one thing. Two strokes don't have valves, they have ports. As soon as the ports are uncovered the grease pressure is lost and the piston stops moving. Hopefully, the piston is now loose enough that you can pull the cylinder the rest of the way off. If you can't get the piston to move, because it has seized in a position below the ports, you may have to melt the piston out with a oxyacetylene torch. Very bad, but it might be the only way.

One last thing. If you get it broken free easily, it does not mean all is well in that engine. If you do get the engine started, odds are there is still major damage inside. Run it for a while and then check the oil for fine metal shavings and grit. It is a one in a thousand chance that things will be OK. It does happen but, most times, a bore job with new piston and rings is required.

Plain Bearings

Shafts turn on two different types of bearings.

1. Ball or Roller Bearings.
2. Plain Bearings, with Plain Bearings coming in two flavors.
   1. With Bushings or Bearing Shells.
   2. Without Bushings or Bearing Shells.

Here we will cover Plain Bearings. The theory behind Plain Bearings is this. If a rolling shaft has a liquid forced between it and what it is pressing against, this liquid will bear the load and prevent the two pieces of metal (or whatever) from touching. When you drive too fast on very wet streets your tires will hydroplane. This is what happens with our rolling shaft. If enough liquid is pumped in between our shaft and what it is pushing against the two parts will not touch and no wear will occur. The trick is to get enough of the right liquid (oil) at enough pressure (20 to 80 PSI) to the two parts.

Plain Bearings come in two styles. Shafts under low stress like Camshafts and Rocker Arm Shafts, have no bearing shells and the shafts run right on the head metal, usually aluminum. If the parts are under a lot of stress, like Crankshafts mains and Rod big ends, there will usually be a special metal insert, called a Bushing or Bearing Shell, between the moving parts. The higher the stress the higher the oil pressure must be. Plain Bearings are very reliable as long as there is oil and oil pressure. If the oil pressure fails because of lack of oil or because the oil is old and thin, the moving metal parts will touch and start to wear. I have seen parts actually weld themselves together. This is because of the heat from the friction of the metal parts rubbing together. Rub your hands together fast and hard and you can actually feel the heat. The same thing happens with metal... only more so !

As long as you have good oil pressure and good oil, the Plain Bearing will last just about forever. I once read of an engine built for a sawmill in 1920s that was run continuously, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week up till the early 1970s. When the engine was taken apart they found they could see the original tool marks on the bearing shells. The wear on a plain bearing engine occurs when the engine is first started. On startup there is no oil flow or oil pressure so there is a minute amount of wear before the oil pressure comes up.

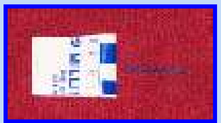
Plain Bearings with no bushing are usually used for the camshaft in the cylinder head. There are several ways they are used.

1. In a hole or tunnel drilled (Machined) in a one piece cylinder head holding the camshaft and rocker arms.
2. In a hole or tunnel drilled (Machined) in a one piece cylinder head with a cap holding the camshaft and rocker arms.
3. In a hole or tunnel drilled (Machined) in a two piece cylinder head holding the camshaft and rocker arms with one end of the camshaft in a bushing.

One Piece Head.

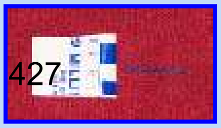
One piece head and cap.

Two piece head with one bushing.



Plain Bearings with Bushings (Bearing Shells) can wear and start hammering or spinning the bearing shells. This is usually fairly obvious as you can see from these pictures.

Good Rod bushing.



Bad Rod bushing.

I am always amazed at how many engines use plain bearings with no bushing. Steel on aluminum works just great as long as there is oil pressure fed to it. Loose oil pressure and you are toast ! I still get calls from people with one of the old XR/XL 500 Hondas wanting to know if I can fix that noise in the head. They say the bike looks brand new but was run low on oil just once. Can I fix it ? Yes. Can I fix it cheap ? NO ! The reason it costs so much is this. They have to line bore the worn plain bearing big enough to accept a roller bearing. Then they have to turn down the camshaft to fit the bearing. Lots of expensive, exacting head work. All this could have been avoided if the factory had done it right in the first place. Of course, maybe the factory foolishly thought the Owner would actually check the oil once in a while. Perish the thought that the Owner would actually CHANGE the oil.

While lack of oil wear is easy to see, normal wear can be hard to measure. At least it would be if it weren't for Plastigauge. Plastigauge is just a small, round thread of plastic. It comes in three sizes and is easy to use. You simply cut a length of plastigauge, take it out of the paper and put it on the shaft you want to measure. Now place the rod or crank cap on and tighten it down. Do not move the shaft. Loosen the bolts and take the cap off. The plastic thread has been flattened out. Look at the paper the plastigauge came in. There are marks on the paper. Compare the marks with the width of the flattened out thread. This will tell you what the bearing clearance is. There are marks for both the inch and millimeter standards of measurements.

Plastigauge on a crankshaft Main Bearing.

plastigauge on a crankpin.

Plastigauge on a Rod Cap.

If the bushing (Bearing Shell) measures within the correct specification as measured with plastigauge, you may reuse it. If it is worn too much you will have to replace it with a thicker shell. On some machines you can order a bearing shell that is just a little bit thicker. Test it with the Plastigauge and if it has the right clearance your good to go. If not, you may have to take the crank to a machine shop and have it ground undersize. That is IF you can get undersize bearing Shells for it. These usually come in several sizes like .010", .020", .030". I say IF because some engines have two or three bearing shell sizes that are very close together. If your wear is more then a few thousands of an inch you are just plain out of luck. It's new crankshaft time. With crankshafts going for one thousand (in 2006) dollars this can be a real bummer.

If there is no bearing cap or cylinder head cover, you may have to check the clearance with special expanding ball gauges. You expand the gauge, which come in many different sizes, till it is snug in the bore. Then remove the gauge and measure it with a micrometer. I have never bought these gauges because it's usually very obvious (At least on motorcycle engines !) that the head is worn. If it looks good, it most likely is good.

When you take an engine apart, wiggle the camshaft up and down in it's plain bearing. Now look at it. If it felt real loose, you should be able to see the wear. On a dry clean shaft there should be just a bit of clearance. Maybe a one or two thousands of an inch on camshafts. On rocker arm shafts there should be almost nothing.

Roller Bearings

Top

Roller Bearings

Roller Bearings use precisely made steel balls or cylinders to allow a shaft to turn with very little friction. In most applications the balls or rollers are caged so they will stay in place. There are many different sizes and types of Roller Bearings. They are used all over a motorcycle on Rods, Camshafts, Transmission Shafts, Main Bearings, anywhere a shaft needs to turn AND anywhere lubrication could be marginal.

The main style of Roller Bearing used on motorcycles is the Ball Bearing. The Ball Bearing uses, as you might guess, precision made steel balls. There are three basic styles of Ball Bearing.

1. Unshielded.
2. Shielded with a steel shield on one or both sides.
3. Shielded with a rubber shield on one or both sides.

No Shield.

Steel Shield.

Rubber Shield.

Unshielded Bearings work well for Two Stroke Crankshafts. They are lubricated by the oil in the gas. They are also used in transmissions and camshafts. These are lubricated by engine oil.

Shielded bearings work good where there is limited outside lubrication like wheel bearings. They are pre-lubed with grease. If they have a rubber shield you can usually pop it off and relube the bearing. Steel bearing shields are very difficult to remove and are usually so deformed by removal that you can't reuse them.

Sometimes, Ball Bearings can be a very tight fit on their shafts. If you pull them off a shaft and want to reuse them you MUST apply pressure to the inner bearing race. If you apply pressure to the outside race you run the risk of ruining the bearing and bearing failure can cause all kinds of nasty problems. If you must pull with the outside race, replace the bearing.

Ball Bearings used on crankshafts, camshafts and in transmition cases are sometimes an interference fit on the shaft or crankcase. This means the diameter of the shaft is just a bit BIGGER then the size of the inner race on the Ball Bearing. To get the bearing on the shaft you gently heat the Ball Bearing up to about 250 degrees Fahrenheit and cool the shaft in a freezer. The hot metal expands just a bit and the cold metal shrinks just a bit. If you are quick, the bearing will go right on and then lock to the shaft. If the bearing is an interference fit with a crankcase, you simply do the opposite. Freeze the bearing and gently heat the crankcase. Again, if you work quickly, the bearing will pop right in.

While a lot of camshafts run in Plain Bearings some have Ball Bearings. I like this design because even if the engine is run low on oil and the bearings, camshaft and rocker arms are ruined there is still a good chance that the cylinder head is still good. With Plain Bearings there is no chance.

When a Ball Bearing starts to fail the shaft can size up. If you turn the shaft back and forth a bit it can seem like it breaks loose starts turning OK again. Don't be fooled. As you can see from the picture some of the bearing balls are missing, allowing the shaft to bind up. The shaft might still be saved, but not if you break it loose and start the engine again.

Roller Bearing come in many different styles to fit many different applications. Tapered Roller Bearings can be used for wheel bearings or steering head bearings. These bearings are adjustable. As they wear you can retighten them to eliminate the looseness that wear gives the bearing. Caged Needle bearing are used on both the big and small ends of most two stroke rods. There are just all kinds of Roller Bearings for all kinds of applications.

You can measure the inner race diameter, outer race diameter, and width of a bearing and find out it's size. The size is sometimes stamped on the side of the bearing and sometimes not. At one time all the good bearings came from the USA or Germany. Now everyone seems to be making them. I once asked a friend at a big bearing sales company about this and also where were the best bearings to be found. He said he felt it didn't make much difference where you got your bearings from. He said all the bearing where made with automatic machinery. If the bearing came from some weird third world country, odds are they had new machines and the bearings were OK. I've put bearings from a lot of strange countries in a lot of different machines. I've never had any problems with any of them, so I guess he was right. I was once told that aircraft Ball Bearings were made to more exacting specifications and therefore ran with less friction. This in turn gave more horsepower. This may have been true in the past but as my Bearing House friend said, they are all made on newer, very accurate, machines now. Just use bearings from a reputable distributor and they will work just fine, no matter where they were made.

Never let the ball bearing spin if you clean the ball bearing in solvent and blow it dry with compressed air. If it does spin it will wear the balls and races of the bearing leading to early failure.

Valve (Cam) Timing

To let the air/fuel mixture in to the engine we have intake valves. To let it out we have exhaust valves. However, if these valves don't open and close at the right time the engine will not run. Worse still, if the valves open at the wrong time they can be hit by the piston and bent.

Valve (Cam) timing can be quite complex or quite simple. The exact time the intake valves and exhaust valves open and close will effect the amount of power produced by the engine and at what RPM it is produced. All this opening and closing is set at the factory and is all quite complex. We don't really need to concern ourselves with the initial set up unless we have modified the engine and changed the cam to a high performance one. Then we would want to degree in the cam(s) with a Degree Wheel bolted to the crankshaft. We are not concerned with that here. What we want is to reproduce the original factory setting. This is quite simple IF we play by the rules.

Assembly actually starts with disassembly. What do I mean ? Well, LOOK at the camshaft marks BEFORE you take it apart. Set the engine at TDC Of the compression stroke (TDC on the #1 cylinder if it a multi cylinder engine). Do the marks on the cam or cam sprocket match up with what the manual says ? If they DON'T, I write down the marks that are used and how they are used so that on reassembly I can reproduce the correct cam (valve) timing. On twin cam engines I count the number of cam chain rollers from the exhaust cam mark to the intake cam mark and write that down too. I do this on every four stroke engine I disassemble.

Well, I'm SUPPOSED to do this. On the last engine I rebuilt I forgot to do it, trusting in the factory shop manual I had. Then I discovered it had some weird, aftermarket, simi adjustable, cam sprockets. GREAT. I go to reassemble the engine and the marks DO NOT MATCH the marks given in the factory shop manual. Now what ? Who knows who made these cam sprockets and what marks they used. I try what seem to be the factory marks but the cam lobes just don't look positioned right. I try some other marks and that looks better. I put it together... Runs great. ALWAYS check the timing marks. You can even make your own set of marks. I have found that even the factory manuals can be wrong. (The manual was wrong on my Chevy LOVE truck. Factory manual cam marks were 180 degrees off !)

To make your own marks (BEFORE you take it apart) just set the crankshaft at TDC of the #1 cylinder on the compression stroke (Both intake and exhaust valves closed) and then make some marks on the camshaft sprocket(s) and a corresponding mark on the cylinder head. Use white paint. I suppose you could use a small punch mark, but I like paint better. If it's a twin cam engine count the number of rollers between marks you put on the camshaft intake and exhaust sprockets. Write it all down or take a digital picture of it. You probably will never have to do this, but you can if it's necessary.

You can do this for other settings too. On that big rebuild I just mentioned. This engine had a counter balancer in it. I had two different manuals. The factory manual AND an after market manual from a well known publisher. I looked and looked in both manuals and they simply did not cover setting up the timing on that balancer. MAN, this is important. Get the balancer timing off and this engine will Wiggle like a Belly dancer ! I finally found some sort of instructions in a completely different part of the manual. One sentence. Not a word on how to time it right in the balancer section of the manual. I did make careful notes on this balancer when I disassembled it and I found the balancer marks too. No thanks to $90.00 worth of manuals. Sooo... if in doubt make your own marks. Why I didn't do it on the camshaft timing marks, which is the whole object of this page.... eludes me. I guess we all fall short !

Every time we assemble a four stroke engine we have to set the valve timing. It's quite simple but very important ! Set the engine at Top-Dead-Center (TDC) of the compression stroke, set the timing marks on the cam and you are done. Sounds so easy does it not ? It really is, but here are some things to remember.

On single cylinder engines the piston must be set at TDC. The "T" mark on the flywheel aligned with the mark on the crankcase. Then the camshaft is installed with the Cam lobes pointed down and the camchain is looped over the cam sprocket. Now the camchain is moved on the sprocket till the timing marks are set. These marks can be a circle on the camchain sprocket that is matched to a mark on the cylinder head. A line on the cam that is lined up with the top of the cylinder head. A line on the camshaft sprocket that is lined up with the top of the cylinder head.

Timing Mark.

Timing Line on Cam.

Timing Lines on Cam Sprocket.

Be sure to leave the camchain tensioner off till everything is lined up and the cam bearing caps torqued down. If you didn't replace the cam chain the marks may not line up exactly. This is due to the cam chain lengthening as it wears. Use your own discretion as to which cam sprocket tooth brings the marks closest to alignment. Now put on the cam chain tensioner and recheck the marks. You may have to do it several times to get everything right. Keep checking TDC on the flywheel, in case the crankshaft moved a bit.

On Multi Cylinder, Single Cam, engines set the number one cylinder to TDC on the compression stroke and match the timing marks on the cam sprocket to the top of the head. Engines with two or more cylinders are especially fun to time. One or more of the valves are always partially open so things can change as you tighten down the cam bearing cap (s). Tighten the cam bearing Caps or Cover in a pattern. Tighten each bolt a little at a time so you pull everything down evenly. If there are rocker arms, make sure the ends of the rocker arms don't get caught on the edge of the valve stem as you tighen the cap down. The Rocker Arm Ends should be pressing on the center of the Valve Stem. Turn the engine back and forth VERY gently till you know for sure that the cam is moving correctly. NEVER get in a hurry or bind things up. If it feels wrong IT IS ! Stop and recheck everything. It should go together very smoothly. If you get ham handed here you can break very expensive parts. A four cylinder head is about $1400.00 (in 2006). Break a cam bearing cap and you get to buy a new one because the caps are not available separately. If all seems OK, go ahead and turn the engine over, slowly, in the direction of rotation. Go slow and make sure the valves don't hit anything. If you feel any resistance at all STOP and find out why. Is a valve hitting a piston or a cam lobe binding on a rocker arm ? If you go slow you will catch the problem, fix it, and not hurt anything. Go fast and you can take everything back apart to replace expensive parts.

Like the saying goes...

"You never have time to do it right, but you ALWAYS have time to do it over !"

On Multi Cylinder, Twin Cam, engines the assembly drill is a bit different. Both intake and exhaust cams must be timed right. Again, set the number one piston at TDC on the compression stroke. Now position each cam so the timing marks Match. The intake cam will usually have a "IN" stamped on it and the exhaust cam will have an "EX". Don't get them mixed up ! You will also notice that, at TDC on the exhaust stroke, both valves are open. The intake valve is opening and the exhaust valve is closing. This is called "Valve Overlap", also know as "Rockover". This is normal.

On most Hondas and Yamahas the marks are dots or lines on the camshafts that match with a dot or arrow on the camshaft bearing cap.

Yamaha Twin Cam Timing.

On most Kawasaki and Suzuki engines the marks are lines on the cam sparockets and should be even with the top edge of the cylinder head. There is one extra thing on Kawasakis and Suzukis. Count the number of cam chain rollers from the exhaust timing mark to the intake timing mark. The correct number will vary with each engine (Usually 18-31 rollers or so). Check your shop manual. Here too, go slow. Same as a single cam engine. Tighten everything a little at a time. Things should go together smoothly without binding. Remember to put the Cam Chain Tensioner on and then recheck everything.

Recheck, recheck, recheck.

The more times you recheck the less errors you will make !

The old British bikes like Triumph, BSA, Norton and the like were pushrod engines and had their cams in their crankcases. Some had single cams and some had two cams. They all had to be timed just like their Over Head Cam (OHC) brethren. Their camshafts had gears on them with marks on the gears. These marks have to line up with similar marks on a gear positioned on the crankshaft.

All four stroke engines, even side valve engines like this Briggs and Stratton, will have some form of Valve (Cam) Timing marks. This type of engine was used on the old Carl Heald (CHI) mini-bike, three and four wheeler kit bikes. As always, check your shop manual !

As you can see, Valve (Cam) timing is both very simple and very important. Just remember, check were the cam timing marks are before disassembly and compare them with your shop manual.

Cam Drives

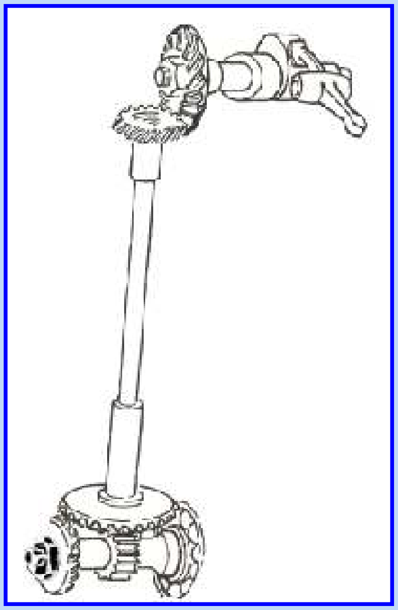
Most four stroke motorcycle engines made today have overhead cams. These cams must turn to work and something must turn them. The most common methods are:



1. Chain Drive.
2. Belt Drive.
3. Shaft Drive.
4. Gear Drive.

Chain drive is the most popular. There are three types of chain drive.

1. Single roller chain.
2. Multiple roller chain.

3. HI-VO chain.

Single Roller Cam Chain.

Multi Roller Cam Chain.

HI-VO Cam Chain.
Suzuki DR350

Single row is one of the most popular. Single row looks like regular roller chain. Multi roller chain is two or three rows of single roller chain connected together and is somewhat rare. HI-VO has a number of plates pinned together and is used almost as much as regular single row chain. As the chain wears and the chain lengthens the Valve Timing is changed. This is why I always replace the cam chain during a top end rebuild. All the shop manuals give a maximum length for the chain, but I have found they are almost always worn out. The amount of stretch between grossly worn out and new is almost unmeasurable. I have seen chains so worn and stretched that they are sawing their way through the side of the crankcase, to the point of causing an oil leak! When compared to new these Cam Chains show almost no difference in length. Do the job right. Replace the Cam Chain AND Cam Chain sprockets, if possible.

Cam chain itself comes in one of three ways.

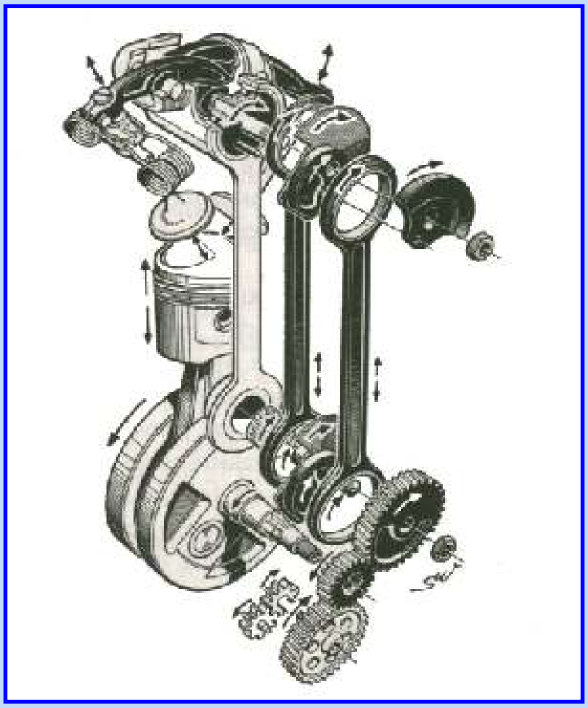
1. Endless, with no Master Link.
2. With a Clip Master link.
3. With a Rivet Master link

Endless.

Master Link with clip.

Master Link Riveted.

Cam chains come in a number of sizes and lengths. Most all Cam Chains are endless. Being able to break the chain was handy if the engine was a multi cylinder and had the Cam Chain in the center of the engine. If you could not break the Cam Chain on these engines, you had to split the crankcases and pull the crankshaft to replace a worn chain. On a few Cam Chain sizes you used to be able to get ones with a clip master link but those are getting hard to come by. A more reliable method is to rivet the master link. Replace the Cam Chain by carefully hooking it to the old, worn Cam Chain and turning the engine over till you can get to both ends of the new chain. Now rivet the master link on and you all set. If the Cam Chain is on the side of the engine you usually can easily get to it so there is no need to break it. Sometimes you can even get a master link for a multi-roller chain. I suppose some one must make master links for HI-VO chain too but I have never seen one. In all cases, you will be best served by using an endless chain, if at all possible.



Belt drive is used on the Honda GL series and a number of Ducatis. Belts used on Belt Drives need to be replaced according to the age of the belt and according to the mileage. They may look good but if a Cam Dive Belt, or a Cam Chain for that matter, fails, it will take out one OR more valves as the engine stops turning. Replace Cam Drive Belts according to the manufacturers timetable.

Shaft drive was popular in the 1930s, 40s and 50s on a number of British bikes and some Ducatis.

Shaft drives do not wear much if the oil changes and levels are kept up, but you just don't see them anymore except when restoring an old bike.

Gear drives wear well like shaft drives. You will only see them on race bikes or a few selected street bikes like the Honda RVF 750R or VFR 750R.

There are some bikes that have totally different and innovative cam drives like the NSU Super Max 250.

NSU Super Max.

Cam Chains and Cam Belts are the main types of cam drives that you will run into. They have one thing in common, besides the fact that they are turning the cams. They all need to be adjusted to the right tension. To find out how ...

Cam Chain Adjustment

When we install the cams and time them we have one last thing to do, adjust the tension on the cam chain.

There are only two types of cam chain adjusters.

1. Manual adjustment.
2. Automatic adjustment.

Manual Adjuster.

Automatic Adjuster.

Both types have one thing in common. You must install them in the completely off (Loosest) position. That is, with no tension placed on the Cam Chain. You do this by removing the spring from the end of the adjuster shaft, releasing the one way lock, if there is one, and push the adjuster shaft to it's loosest postion or by pushing the adjuster shaft, under spring pressure, in and locking it with the adjuster pinch bolt. Either way, the adjuster must be in the loosest position. If it is not at the loosest position it will OVER TIGHTEN the Cam Chain and possible BREAK the adjuster at worst. At best it will limit the RPM of your engine

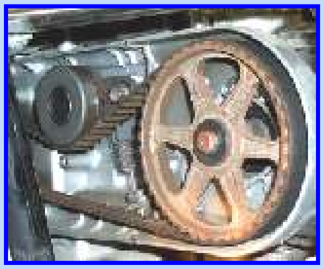
The part of the adjuster that pushes on the Cam Chain itself is either a sprocket, a rubber roller or a long, thin, flexible, steel, rubber covered plate and is usually in the rear of the engine. The adjuster spring pushes the sprocket, roller or plate against the Cam Chain tightening it. This arrangement allows the Cam Chain to wear (Stretch) and still remain at the proper tension. It also allows the Cam Chain to be a bit loose for easier instillation on the Camshaft sprocket (s). This is good because even with the adjuster not installed, the fitting of the Cam Chain can be a bit tight on some engines. The adjuster spring may push or pull on the adjuster sprocket or roller. If the adjuster is a plate it may pull on both ends of the adjuster making it bow in the middle and push on the Cam Chain or the plate may hinge on one end and the adjuster spring and rod push on the center of the plate.

Cam Chain Adjuster Sprocket.

Cam Chain Adjuster Roller.

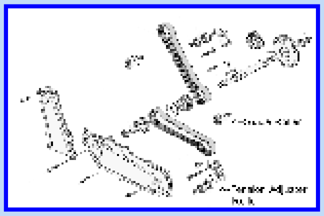
Cam Chain Adjuster Plate.

Most of the newer engines (say from the early 1980s on, give or take) have the non adjustable type of Cam Chain tensioner. You simply install it and it works. When the chain get noisy you put a new Cam Chain on. Not much else you can do.



Older engines usually have the adjustable type. These have a pinch bolt that locks the adjuster shaft in position. As the Cam Chain wears (Stretches) it makes more noise. You usually have to set the engine to some kind of mark on the flywheel. This moves all the Cam Chain slack to where the adjuster is. Then loosen the pinch bolt on the adjuster. If it's well worn you will hear a muffled bang or pop as the adjuster takes up the slack in the Cam Chain. Tighten the pinch bolt and all is well. Sometimes the engine will need to be idling when you make the adjustment. Other engines will have a screw, with a lock nut, that adds tension to the adjuster spring. When the tensioner pin is flush with the spring tensioner, tighten the lock nut. Still other engines will have both adjustable and non-adjustable tensioners, depending on the year the engine was made ! The early Honda 350cc twins had a tensioner controled by oil pressure. Check your shop manual.

If the Cam Chain is real noisy and the noise does not go away when you adjust it, the Cam Chain is worn out and needs to be replaced. Just like with the rear drive chain and sprockets, the Cam Chain sprockets should be replaced too. If the engine was designed with removable sprockets this can be quite easy. On other engines things are not so easy. The sprocket can be machined on the crankshaft. Like the Kawasaki ZX1100. The only way on these engines to replace the Cam Sprocket is to replace the crankshaft. Yeah, I know, stupid, but they do it. Other engines have their Cam Sprockets tightly press fitted to the crank. Like the Honda XR200. You must heat the crank up and use a gear puller to pull it off the end of the crankshaft. Now the fun part. You cool the crankshaft in a freezer, heat up the new Cam Sprocket to about 250 degrees and pop it on while aligning one of the gear teeth to the woodruff key on the crankshaft. That is so the valve timing stays correct. Again, not too smart, but at least it's doable.



If you don't deal with the worn Cam Chain it can rattle around in there and do nasty stuff. It can jump a tooth, throwing the valves out of time, allowing them to hit the piston or it can saw it's way through the side of the engine and start an oil leak, not to mention putting all kinds of metal filings into your engine oil ! If you can't replace the Cam Chain, you can try to add a little more tension to the Cam Cahin adjuster by installing a stronger tensioner spring or by pushing on the tensioner rod and locking it in position with the tensioner rod lock bolt and nut. Try to put just enough pressure to stop the noise. Too much pressure and it can put to much friction on the Cam Chain and keep the engine from revving to full RPMs. Now understand, if you do this, it's a Band-Aid and not a cure. The real cure is a new Cam Chain.

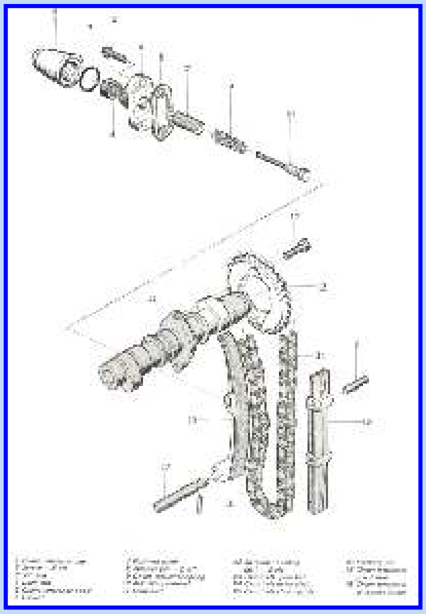
There is always one and sometimes several Cam Chain Guides. These guides can be rollers, Sprockets or plates. They keep the Cam Chain on track as it goes through the engine. Some of these guides can be quite complicated like these from a Kawasaki 700 V-Twin. Check them for wear when you replace the Cam Chain.



Belt drives like the Honda GL Series usually have only a tensioner. At least the ones I've seen. Ducatis have a idler roller and an tension adjuster roller.

Splitting Your Crankcase

To get to the crankshaft or transmission gears you usually have to split the crankcase. This can be very easy or very hard. In all cases you will need to pull the engine from the frame and remove the clutch, internal shifter linkage, crankcase bolts or screws and maybe the flywheel and electrical coils, depending on what repair has to be done.

If the crankcase is split vertically (Up and down) You will have to remove the cylinder and cylinder head. Most two stroke single cylinder engines are split vertically, along with a number of four stroke singles too. On these engines, the crankshaft is usually an interference fit with the crankshaft bearings. The main gear shaft, shifter drum, kickstarter and everything else are NOT an interference fit with their bearings. Interference fit means the main bearing a very tight fit on the crankshaft, requiring a special tool to push the crankshaft out of the bearing. The tool is bolted to holes in the crankcase and the center bolt is positioned over the end of the crankshaft. The bolt is tightened and slowly pushes the crankshaft out of the bearing. It usually helps to tap the transmission mainshaft gently with a Dead Blow Hammer as you press the crankshaft out of the bearing. This keeps the two crankcase halves from binding as they separate. If you are careful you can use a regular hammer. Thread the clutch nut onto the mainshaft to protect the threads and tap lightly.

To install the crankshaft in the bearing you will need to decide which side of the crankcase is the primary side. At least that is what I call it. It is the crankcase side that holds all the gears. Usually it is the left half, but not always. Some engines use the right crankcase. Check your shop manual. This is the crankcase we work with first. First install the bearing in the crankcase. To do this heat the whole crankcase to around 250 degrees in an oven and put the bearing in the freezer for an hour. Wear some cotton gloves, take the crankcase and tap the old bearing out. Reheat the crankcase and drop the cold bearing in. If you work quickly it will go right in and then lock to the crankcase as it warms up. Cool the crankshaft in the freezer for an hour or two. Reheat the crankcase and quickly slide the crankshaft into the hot bearing. It will go right in and lock as it heats up.

Now place all the gears, shifter drum, shifter forks, and everything else that goes inside the crankcase, into the primary crankcase. Heat the opposite crankcase and remove the old bearing and install the new one. As the crankcase reheats put gasket sealant on the edge of the primary crankcase. I like Yamabond #4. Now take the hot crankcase and slide it down over the crankshaft, mainshaft, ETC. Gently tap the case home with a dead blow hammer and install the crankcase screws. Shift through all the gears and make sure the crank and everything else turns smoothly.

Sometimes the final assembly is done with a cold crankcase and a puller tool. this tool uses a long nut to connect to the crankshaft and a thick tube that allows you to pull the crankshaft through the main bearing by only pushing on the inner bearing race. Assembly is the same only you don't heat the crankcase. You pull the crankshaft through the bearing and this slides the two crankcases together.

After everything is together, install the crankshaft seals, clutch, shifter linkage, cylinder, cylinder head and everything else.

If the crankcase is split Horizontally (sideways) and you are not going to rebuild the cylinder head, you will not have to disassemble the head and cylinder(s) better known as the "Top End". Most multi cylinder engine crankcases are split horizontally. Remove the bolts and nuts on both the top and bottom of the engine, clutch, shift linkage, ETC. Now look at the engine where the cases join together. There usually is a thicker area of the crankcase where you can tap with a dead blow hammer. The primary crankcase half, that holds all the gears and shafts, is usually the top crankcase. Pull on the bottom crankcase with your hands and tap on the top. Just make real sure the area you tap is strong enough to take the blow. Dead blow hammers work best but you can use a regular steel hammer. Just don't tap too hard and only tap in a strong, as in thick metal, place. Usually the case will pop loose. If it does not, you may have to reverse and tap on the bottom crankcase. Again, make sure the places you tap are strong enough to take the tap without breaking. Broken crankcases cost a lot to replace ! If it just will not separate, double check and make sure you got all the crankcase bolts, nuts and screws out.

OK, what if the crankcases are really glued and rusted together ? Well, they have to come apart if you are going to repair what's inside. We need to move to a higher level of case splitting. Everyone says "Don't pry the crankcases apart." They are right and they are wrong. If you pry too hard, you will ruin the crankcases. However, if they don't come apart, they are no good to you. The techniques I going to cover now must be used VERY CAREFULLY. If you are sloppy or ham handed here, you will RUIN the crankcases.

First put some penetrating oil along the seam of the crankcase. Now I take the blade from a wood plainer and picking a strong area of the crankcase, I place the sharp end against a seam. The sharp end is beveled to a sharp edge. I place it parallel with the crankcase seam and ever so gently tap it with a hammer. I don't tap very hard. Many times the case will start to separate and come apart. Other times I have to do this at several spots around the crankcase. Because the edge is sharp and flat on one side, angled on the other and quite wide, very little or no damage is done to the crankcase. It is important NOT to damage the edge of the crankcase. If you do damage it, it will not seal right and you will have an oil leak. The crankcase is made of aluminum and it can be damaged very easily. If the case starts to spread and then pops back together when you remove the tool, you missed a crankcase bolt or screw. Go back and double check for more bolts or screws.

Lot of times the locating dowel pins will be rusted in and, using the wedge tool, you can only get the crankcases to separate the thickness of the wedge tool. If this happens, take a fairly large screwdriver and use it to gently spread the cases further. I can't emphasize enough the words gentle and go slow. The tools you are using are made of steel and the crankcases are made of aluminum. If you get carried away with this prying thing you will RUIN your crankcases. You may have to spread the cases a little, put on some penetrating oil and tap them back together and start all over again. Worry them. Back and forth, back and forth. Do not get mad at them if they are a bit difficult. I can always get my crankcases apart without damaging them. If I can do it, so can you.

If I can, I always use Yamabond #4 to seal between the crankcase halves. If you are sloppy and use too much it flows onto the sides of the crankcase and sticks there. It does not ball up, come loose and plug up oil screens. If you have to use a hi temperature, silicon type RTV sealant, that can ball up, use only a little bit, spread very thin. It's advantage is that you can get it in black to match black crankcases. Can't have any gray goo messen up our pretty crankcases under our fairings now, can we ?

Rarely will the crankcases have a gasket. If it does, you must use a new one on reassembly. If the shop manual calls for a gasket and you try to use only a gasket sealant, there will not be enough clearance on the crankshaft and transmission shafts. This will cause the engine to bind up.

Oil Seals

And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal,
and, lo, there was a great earthquake;
and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair,
and the moon became as blood;
Revelation 6:12

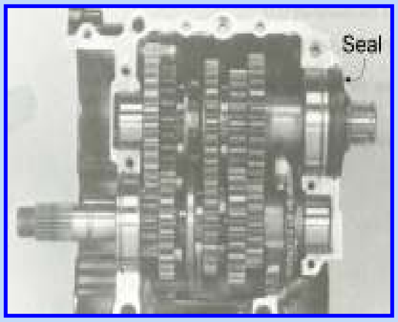
Well, as we learn from Revelations, an open seal is a real problem. Your engines life blood, oil, leaking out and the sun really does become black as sackcloth as your bike skids to a halt. Been there, done that, and it is not good.

Oil Seals are used to keep oil and/or grease inside an engine while allowing a round shaft to get out. The shaft can be one that spins at high speed to transfer power or one that only turns half a revolution and controls some aspect of the engine such as gear shifting or kick starting. Seals can also be used to keep gases inside an engine, as is the case with a two-stroke engine.



Seal with a Spring.

Seal with a raised edge.

Rubber Seal.

Another Seal with a raised edge.
Honda XL350

Seal with a raised edge installed.
Honda XL350

With a few selected seals the seal has a raised edge cast into the seal. These seals are used in a crankcase that is split horizontally. These seals can be a lot harder to get out because of the lip. The official way is to take the engine out of the frame and split the crankcase. The unofficial and cheap way is to lever and rip and tear that puppy out. Then cut the edge off a new seal and drive it on with a bit of silicone sealant. Gross but a lot cheaper and it works. Most times, anyway.

Seals use springs or the natural springiness of the rubber to grip and seal the shaft. Once a seal starts to leak it can be very easy to replace it... or not! With probably 95% of seals you just lever it out. You need to be somewhat gentle so you do not scratch the shaft and reinforce the area you pry against with a piece of wood or maybe brass or steel. If you are worried about the shaft you can (Carefully!) drill a small hole in the side of the seal and screw in a little screw. One on each side of the shaft. Put two Vice Grip pliers on the screws and pull. I prefer to lever that puppy out but that is just me.

Lever that seal out.

Lever that seal out.

If you have the engine all apart you can take a screw driver, hammer and drive the seal out from behind. Tecumseh Engines sold a neat tool to remove seals. You slid it down the shaft, screwed it into the seal then turn the screw on the top end to pull the seal out. I bought one but I never got around to using it. Prying the seal out worked just fine so I never used it. Tecumseh is out of business but if you have a lathe I'll bet you could make one. Looks like it is just pipe thread cut onto a shaft with a cap welded on and a threaded hole in the cap. Trouble is you need a different one for each size seal. I think I'll just keep prying.

Seals fail because of wear on the seal lips or because of mechanical failure. Hard to say here if the seal started to fail, then the bearing failed, destroying the seal or if the seal was still good when the bearing failed. Either way it is new seal and bearing time. The seal starts with sharp edges and plenty of pressure on the shaft. As the shaft rotates the seal lip wears and is flattened. When there is enough wear, the tension of the seal lips on the shaft fail to grasp the shaft strongly enough to keep the oil, grease, vacuum or pressure in. The seal can look good on the outside but still be worn out on the inside. It is a good idea to replace All the oil seals when rebuilding an engine. Certainly, there is justification to do so. If the engine has run long enough to wear out the piston and rings, it has worn out the oil seals too. They just have not failed... yet!

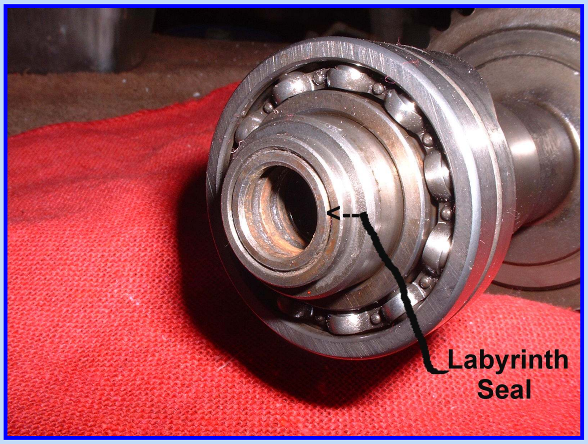
If any debris gets wrapped around the spinning shaft it can wear out the seal AND put a groove in the steel shaft its self. I have seen this happen a lot to Outboard motor propeller shafts when fishing line gets wrapped around the shafts. If there is great mileage and/or lots of dirt it can happen to shafts on motorcycle engines too. That might be a good reason to get in there and clean your bike after a long, dirty ride. Especially the counter shaft and sprocket. Maybe even oil your chain too... naw, that's just crazy talk!

Back in the day, Auto Parts stores used to sell very thin sleeves that could be put onto shafts to cover wear grooves. Called "Shaft Repair Sleeves" these sleeves could repair shafts that would cost too much to replace or take too much labor time to replace. They work. I've used them several times in car engines but not on motorcycles. They come in many sizes.

New Seal Lip

Worn Seal Lip

Crankshaft Seal Failure



Seals come in lots of sizes. The size is cast into the side of the seal. This one has a 32mm inside diameter. A 45mm outside diameter and is 6.5mm wide. If, for some reason, you can't get a seal from the engines manufacturer you can check with a generic seal supplier and get a non-original seal. If it is the same size it should fit just fine.

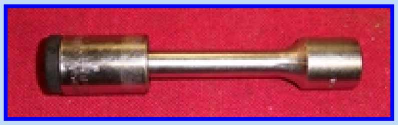
Always fit the seal with the printing or markings on it to the outside of whatever shaft you are working on. The only time you don't do this is when the shop manual, for the engine you are working on, tells you to do it a different way. Otherwise it is always printed side out.

Another type of seal you may run across in motorcycle engines is the Labyrinth seal. This seal is usually used as the center seal on two cylinder, two stroke engines like the Yamaha RD250-400cc twins. You will find it on four strokes too, such as at the end of the camshaft on the Yamaha XS650 four stroke twin. It usually wears out very slowly because nothing touches it. The clearances are very tight. It works because the gases or liquids simply cannot move through the passages of the seal quickly enough to cause a problem.

Labyrinth Seal on a two Stroke Twin

Labyrinth Seal on Yamaha 650 Twin

After you get the seal out you need to put a new one in. If the shaft, that goes through the seal, is rough or damaged, try to smooth it out with some very fine grit sandpaper. If needed get a very thin piece of plastic sheeting. Cut it to the right size and wrap it around the shaft. Push the seal onto it and push everything down to the crankcase that houses the seal. That way a rough shaft does not damage the seal lip. Then pull the plastic sheeting out and set the seal. Sometimes, after the seal is in, the seal lips will be turned or folded back just a bit on the shaft. Take a very thin small screwdriver and pull the lips back to their proper position on the shaft.



On occasion, when installing a seal it is possible to ham-handedly damage the spring but not the rubber lip of the new seal. Of course, this has never happened to me but if it did, which of course it did not, I would take a spring off a used seal and replace the damaged spring. The lips of the old seal wear but the spring is good. As this does not happen very often it is easy to get a number of good standby springs. Just remove the spring from old seals. Toss the seal and keep the spring.

They sell sets of seal drivers but I usually use sockets installed backwards on a 3" or 6" socket extension. If the seal goes down a shaft that you can't remove you can use a deep well socket or a length of steel or plastic water pipe. The trick is to get a socket or a piece of pipe that exactly fits the outside diameter of the seal. Now you can be just a bit smaller then the diameter of the seal but not much. This is because most seals are a steel ring with rubber cast around it. The steel is strong, the rubber is weak. Any pressure you apply MUST be applied to the rubber covered steel part of the seal. This is always on the outside edge.

Seal Driver Set

Drive Seal

Seals are kind of an interference fit in their holes. This means they are very tight. I usually lube the outside of the seal with a bit of grease. Armor All works good too. I always put some grease (but Not Armor All) on the inside lip of the seal too. I don't normally use any kind of sealant. I only use sealant if it is called for by the shop manual or if there is some sort of imperfection in the crankcase I'm driving the seal into.

I also look at the shaft. If there is any hint of a groove or discoloration I try to set the lip of the seal in front of or behind the groove if possible. Usually there is no problem. If for some strange reason you can't get a proper seal driver in on the seal, it is possible to drive or finish driving a seal in with a small flat nose drift. You have to be very careful. Drive the seal in very slowly. Tap on one spot then go 180 degrees and tap there. Work your way around the seal and it will go in but it is much more difficult to do then using a seal driver.

Keep an eye on your seals and that Great Earthquake will not be happening. At least not to your engine. I can't say about other things in your life.

Engine Removal and Installation

ENGINE REMOVAL/INSTALLATION

SERVICE INFORMATION

GENERAL

On almost all engines there are things that can be repaired with the engine in the frame and things that require you to pull the engine. To get down into the lower guts of most engines you must take the engine out of the frame. What could be easier? Trouble is the frame must fit the engine like a glove. That means it has to fit tight. Most shop manuals will tell you what can and cannot be done with the engine in the frame.

The drill is this.

1. Disconnect the battery. Perhaps even remove it from the machine so there are no accidents.
2. Remove any Fairing Parts and/or Windshield.
3. Remove the gas tank and seat.
4. Drain the oil. Remove the oil filter.

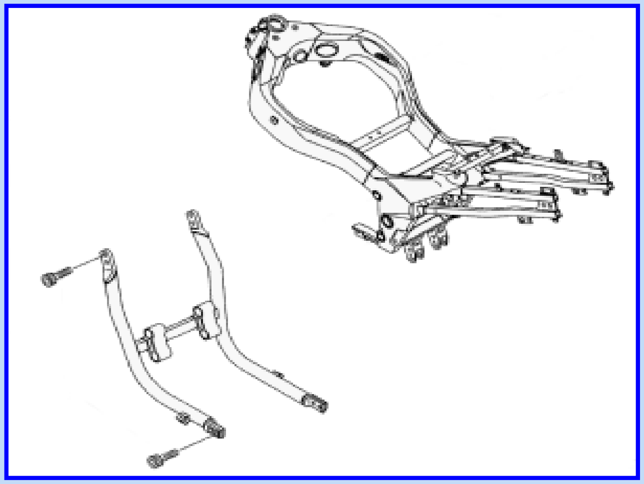
   Then in no particular order.
5. Remove the Radiator and hoses.
6. Remove any engine breather, smog or vent hoses.
7. Loosen any bolts that might be hard to loosen when the frame is not holding the engine.
8. Disconnect the clutch cable and the compression release cable if it has one.

9. Remove the exhaust header pipe(s). You might be able to leave the muffler attached or not, each bike is different.
10. Unplug all the electronic connections. Make sure you get ALL of them.
11. Remove the carburetor(s). You might be able to leave the carburetor(s) in the frame attached to the air box or you might have to remove them completely. Each machine is different.
12. Remove all the mounting bolts but one. Mark each mounting bolt and spacer. I use simple marks with a black felt tip pen. Like "FB" for front bottom or "top rear" for the top rearmost mount. I also put any spacer or washer on the bolt and then screw the nut on so I know where it goes and don't loose it.
13. If the frame and engine have lots of oil, radiator, electrical lines and wires and hoses and tubes. Take a bunch of digital camera pictures. This can be a real lifesaver on reassembly.
14. Remove the last bolt and remove the engine. WOW, that is so easy to say. Not so easy to do.

Usually the engine only comes out one way, either to the right or to the left or straight down. For single cylinder engines I like to sort of lay on top of the frame and use my arms to move the engine around. This saves my back. Seeing how I'm getting a bit old, I put a piece of wood on a jack, set the engine on it and move it up close to the frame. Then I lift it in. Younger people with stronger backs may be able to just lift it in or out without the jack.

If the engine is a stressed member of the frame, you may be able to use a jack to raise and lower the engine to slide it into the frame.

Some frames give you an additional problem. The lower rear mounting bolt is also the swing arm axle. When you pull the bolt the frame and the swing arm separate. I usually use the swing arm axle in one side and a short bolt or big screwdriver in the other side of the frame to hold the frame together until I get the engine in and the rear mounting holes lined up. Then I tap the axle in and it pushes the screwdriver out the other side.



On some engines you remove a frame tube and use a jack to lower the engine down and out of the frame. This can be quite a problem because the bottom of an engine is not necessarily smooth and flat. It can be very, how would you say pointy? To fix this just cut a bunch of wood blocks out of one by twos and two by fours, nail them to a piece of plywood to match the underside of your engine then you can jack up your engine safely. You will also have to figure out some way to support the frame because many bikes these days do not have a center stand. A few ropes on the handlebars, a few pulleys and a roof beam can help here. If you can get access to an auto engine hoist. They work well too.

Over all, you will need several jacks, a good selection of bits of wood and few big, long screwdrivers and pry bars. A word on pry bars. Only pry on parts of the engine that are thick and strong. You can punch a hole in a very expensive crankcase very easily. The fit on motorcycle frame to motorcycle engine can go from somewhat loose to very, very tight. Remember, the engine did fit in there. You may have to wiggle, jiggle, move back and forth, up and down, side to side. Put it in at an angle, tip it forward then an eighth of an inch to the right, slide it back just a bit and BANG it is in.

Sometimes it really helps to have an extra person or two to help. At least I have been told that. No one ever seems to be around when I need help so I just jack it up, slide it over, wiggle it, jiggle it, pry it a bit and sooner or later in it goes or out as the case may be.

Some people like to lay the bike on it's side on a cushion. Let the engine come out and then tilt the bike back up. I won't say I have not sinned like this (We all fall short sooner or later.) but I will say it does not work that well.

On reassembly just do the reverse of what you did to get the engine out of the frame. Check the shop manual and see if there is a sequence to retightening the bolts If there is, FOLLOW IT! Also, use the correct torque on each bolt. If you don't know what it is, look in your shop manual.

BOWDEN CONTROL CABLES

Bowden Control Cables are used on every bike made. We may have hydraulic brakes and clutch, but we still have good old Bowden Cables for the throttles. These cables are used to transmit mechanical force or power along the direction of the cable. To be a Bowden cable, the inner cable must push or pull, but not twist, in relation to the outer cable.

Cables have been around a long time for us, but we never seem to have time for them. I guess I can't yell at you too much... it's been a long time since I lubed the cables on my bike too. It's really pretty simple. Unhook the cable end, hook up a cable luber to the cable, hook up the spray oil and have at it till oil comes out the other end of the cable. If you don't have a cable luber, you can do it the cheap way. Cut a little hole in the bottom of a small plastic sandwich bag, slip it onto the cable and tie it off with a piece of string or a rubber band. Pour some oil in the baggie and leave it there over night. The oil will slowly work its way through the cable.

Both these ways work quite well if the cable housing is in good condition. Trouble is, on lots of old bikes the cables have cracks in them, that allow the oil to run out. Sooo... now what ? I use some stuff called Dry Slide. It is graphite and a solvent. You shake it up really good to get the graphite into suspension in the solvent, and then run it down the inner wire of the cable. The solvent is of such low viscosity that it doesn't back up in the cable, and leak out the cracks, like oil does. When the solvent evaporates, it leaves behind the graphite, and the graphite provides the lube for the cable.

No matter how good we take care of the cables, sooner or later, its going to break. When this happens the cheapest way out is to buy a new cable. You can repair them, or even make them up from scratch. Trouble is, it's a pain in the rear to make them. It sounds really easy. Cut the inner cable, cut the outer cable, solder the ends on and yo're done. Maybe I'm just a bad cable maker, but I've found getting the right length on the inner cable to be easier said than done. I always seem to get them a bit long or a bit short. If you want to make cables you will have to get a set of cable ends, outside cable and inside cable. There are many, many, different types and styles of end fittings.

The ends on new cables are usually made of steel and are swaged onto the cable ends. In swaging, the steel cable end is crushed in a special mold under tons of pressure. This locks the end to the cable. We don't have the swaging equipment so we solder the ends on. All the cable ends that you buy are made of brass and will solder well to the cable. There are thirty or forty different ends, four or five different sizes of outer cable, and six or eight different diameters of wire, depending on who you buy from. Even with all the different sizes of cable ends there will still be special fittings on different factory cables that you can't buy. Because of this, when I replace a cable with a new factory one, I always save any old special fittings off the old cable, just in case I have to make a custom one in the future. Custom cables are where all the cable ends and wire really comes in handy. If you change to a different style and height of handle bar, the old cables may be too long or too short. Even with it being a bit of a hassle to make, custom cables can be just the ticket to make those new bars look right. The bulk cable rolls are usually 50 feet long, so as long as your custom scoot has a wheel base of under 50 feet, your in !

HYDRAULIC BRAKES & CLUTCH

"And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;"
Jeremiah 51:21

If you ignore the Brakes on your modern day horse, the motorcycle, you and it really will be broken in pieces. That includes all you sidecar (Chariot) people too!

Hydraulic disc brakes are quite common now. Before Honda came out with the CB750 in 1969 you didn't see them much, now they are everywhere, even on clutches. They work very good and are quite reliable, but are often neglected. No one thinks about them until they don't work, then they think about them a lot! Usually you go out to ride in the spring, pull the lever to stop and the brakes don't work, lock up, drag, or feel spongy. Other times the brakes worked OK, then you put a new set of pads on and the pistons won't go back in the caliper. Then again sometimes they do, but then drag when the new brakes are applied. The cause is poor or no maintenance. Brake fluid loves water and when water gets in so does gook and rust. The cure can be somewhat easy or an all day affair.

Let us not get ahead of our selves. Our first problem with Hydraulic Brakes will probably be worn out pads. Worn brake pads are easy to fix. Just remove the two caliper mounting bolts and pull the caliper off the rotor. It will still be connected to the brake hose. Do not take the brake hose off or loosen the bolt where it connect to the caliper unless you have to because you will loose your prime. Hook a short piece of wire onto the caliper and hang the caliper from somewhere on the front forks. It is a bad idea to let the caliper hang on the brake hose. Pad the caliper with a shop rag. Take a large C-clamp and use it to slowly push the caliper piston(s) back into the caliper. You must do this. If you do not compress the caliper pistons the new, thicker, brake pads will not fit back on the rotor.

Disk Brake Pads

Push Pads back into Caliper

Now unhook the old pads from the caliper and install the new ones. Notice that the two pads may have worn different amounts. When you periodically check pads for wear while on the bike it may be hard to see both pads. Make sure you check Both pads for wear. There may be pins that hold the pads to the calipers. These pins may be screwed into the calipers or have small clips that hold them in. Sometimes, there are grooves in the calipers that hold the pads in or the entire pad may be set into the caliper.

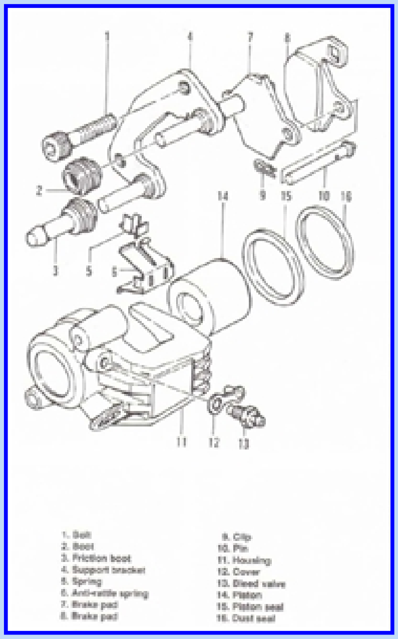
Usually there is also a flat looking anti-rattle spring that presses against the edge of the pads to help keep the pads in position once the calipers are installed on the rotor. There are lots of different ways manufacturers keep their pads in position. Check your shop manual to get the exact procedure although once you get into them it should be obvious. The shop manual will also give you the torque for the two mounting bolts. Always torque the caliper mounting bolts to the right torque and use a good quality thread locker too.

Pads Worn at Different Rates

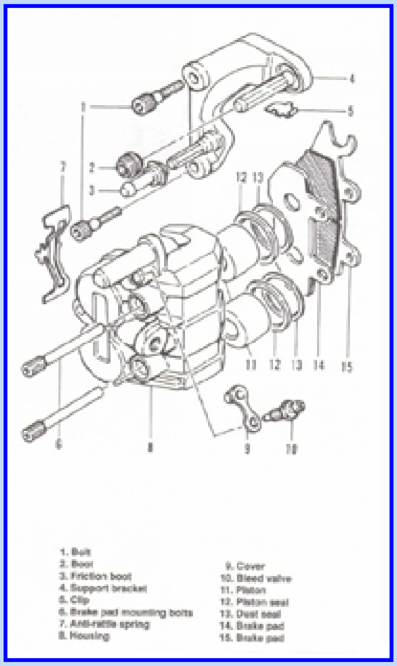
Round Pads set into the Caliper

Anti-Rattle Spring

As you can see on the examples below, water contamination can really gum things up. The Master Cylinder Plunger is totally gooked up and inoperative. The Single Caliper Piston was sticking because of all the gook. This is why motorcycle manufacturers want you to change your brake fluid on a regular basis. The water and contaminants get thrown out with the old fluid. If your brakes start to heat up, even though you have not touched the brake lever. If you put on the brakes and they lock up or drag. If these things happen, you have corrosion and gook behind your caliper piston.



Dirty Master Cylinder Plunger.



Duel Caliper.

Put the bike on its center stand and remove the brake caliper from the disk. Usually two bolts hold it in position on the front wheel and the rear wheel. A lot of times it is easier, on the Rear Wheel, to take the axle out and pull out the whole mounting bracket.

Front Single Caliper.

Front Duel Caliper.

Rear Caliper Assembly.

Position the handlebars so the master cylinder is level and take a large, wet, towel and put it over the gas tank and any painted surface. Brake fluid will ruin a painted surface. Don't worry about getting brake fluid on your fingers. It has never hurt me so I guess it will not hurt you. If you are worried about it, that is OK, use plastic gloves. Take off brake fluid reservoir cover and make sure it is filled with fluid. After removing the brake pads, pump the brake lever once while watching the caliper piston. You will see the piston move out just a bit. Put a bowl under the caliper and keep pumping until the piston pops out. Keep an eye on the reservoir and add brake fluid as needed. If there is more than one piston, let one move out a bit then put a C-clamp on it to keep it from moving out any further and keep pumping... the other piston will now move out. Alternate the C-clamp between the pistons, loosening the C-clamp a turn or two each time, so the pistons move out of the caliper together equally, until they can be removed. Be sure to pad the caliper with a shop rag so you do not damage the paint.

Two Piston Caliper

Caliper Piston

Caliper O-Ring

When the piston(s) pops out, look inside the caliper and you will see the round, square sectioned O-ring. Remove it from its groove and clean everything in clean brake fluid. I only use brake fluid. I do not use solvents or cleaners of any kind. If you use solvents you must make sure you get any residue cleaned out. If you don't, it could contaminate the new brake fluid and ruin the O-ring. Remember, it's your life at stake here. Supposedly you can use Isopropyl alcohol or ethyl alcohol probably because they evaporate quickly. All in all I will stick to brake fluid for cleaning. Here is one little trick you might find useful if you find a lot of gook, behind the piston, in the caliper. After removing all the parts from the caliper, gently play the flame from a propane torch on the inside of the caliper. All the corrosion will turn to a powder and be easily scraped out. Don't heat it too hot. Just hot enough to powder the gook.

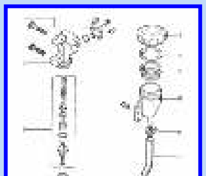
To disassemble the Master Cylinder take off the break lever and the little rubber Dust Boot. Then pull the Circlip on the Plunger Shaft. Remove the plunger shaft and look at all parts. If they are dirty, clean or replace them. Remember there are different internal designs but they are all different ways of doing the same thing... applying hydraulic pressure to the back side of the caliper pistons. Be very careful if you use the Propane Torch Gook Cure. Sometimes, with older machines, the Master Cylinder reservoir is made out of plastic, which can melt or distort when heated. While technically these reservoirs can be removed, in practice it can be almost impossible to do so without damaging the reservoir. If there is damage or pits in the body of the Master Cylinder you might be able to hone the bore with a ball hone but be careful. Don't do it very much. It may be a better idea to replace the Master Cylinder. It is a judgment call you will have to make.

Assembly of the Master Cylinder is just the reverse of disassembly. Remember to lube everything with Brake Fluid of the proper type. Remember Brake Fluid will damage paint so don't let any drip onto your paint job. I like to cover everything that could be dripped on with a wet towel.

Master Brake Cylinder Circlip



Master Brake Plunger Shaft

If possible use new parts and/or rebuild kits. On older bikes parts may be hard to get. You may have to clean and reuse old parts. I have found the Square rubber O-rings usually clean up pretty good. If in doubt, replace it. If the Caliper Piston has ANY marks, scratches or pits in it, GET A NEW ONE.

Reassemble the caliper using only brake fluid, of the proper type, for lubrication. The pistons should push in with thumb pressure. Do not force them. I usually pre fit the pistons in their bores to make sure they move smoothly. Then I remove them, lube with brake fluid and fit the o-ring, and then fit the pistons for real. Use your shop manual to aid in assembly... You do have one, don't you?

With the entire system drained of old brake fluid, bolt everything back together.

Fill the master cylinder fluid reservoir with new brake fluid of the right type. ( DOT 3, DOT 4, Dot 5 ). You can mix Dot 3 and Dot 4 but NOT Dot 5. Dot 5 is a silicone based brake fluid and cannot be mixed with anything but Dot 5. Most brake systems use Dot 3 or Dot 4. Although you can mix Dot 3 and Dot 4 I prefer not to. I Use whatever brake fluid type the brake's manufacturer calls for.

Now comes the fun part.

1. Put a clear hose, of the right size, on the Caliper Bleed Nipple and put the end in a jar.
2. To just replace the Brake Fluid, open the bleeder nipple on the Brake Caliper and pump the lever or peddle till all the old fluid is pumped out and the new fluid starts to come out. Keep checking the Master Cylinder fluid reservoir and add fluid as it goes down.
3. To fill the brake lines and caliper with brake fluid open the caliper brake bleed nipple and squeeze the brake lever (Brake Peddle) and hold it. Now close the bleeder nipple and release the lever (Brake Peddle). Keep doing this until you feel the lines are full.
4. To bleed the brakes pump the brake handle or pedal several times and then hold it on. Open the bleed screw, on the caliper, and brake fluid mixed with air will come out. Close the screw, pump it up again and repeat the process. Keep it up until you have a firm feel to the lever and no air in the brake fluid coming out. Top off the master brake cylinder.
5. Lastly, hose everything off with water to remove any trace of brake fluid.

Sounds so easy... Yes? It can be, if all the parts are new. Unfortunately, by the time I see these things they are pretty far gone. If you were to replace everything... caliper(s), master cylinder, hoses...you could easily lay out $500 or more. Because of this we end up using a lot of old parts, which is OK if we keep it within reason.

So, you pump and you pump... nothing. Now what?

1. Try bleeding the air from every fitting on the hose, such as where the hose attaches to the master cyl. and anywhere else that there is a fitting.
2. Try filling the system from the bleeder screw with an air pump and bleeder jar.
3. Tap the fittings lightly with a hammer to jar the air bubbles loose.
4. Let things set overnight, then do everything over again.
5. Be patient, keep bleeding the system... this may take quite a while.
6. On at least one China clone bike I had to take the master and slave cylinders off the bike and turn them every which way while pumping the master. I left the caliper loose on the rotor so the piston didn't pop out. It took forever but it finally pumped up.
7. The last brake job I worked on was somewhat interesting to say the least. Long story short. Bike crashed and landed on front master cylinder and lever. Lever unjammed. Brake would pump up, push bike three or four feet and it would loose prime and it was pure HL to get it pumped up again. After lots of bleeding (Brake Fluid, not blood) I could get it back and it would hold prime as long as the wheel did not turn. Turn the wheel and bang, prime was gone. After much hair pulling and cursing I found that the rotor was just slightly bent. You would think that if a wobbly rotor were pushing the brake pistons, it was a two piston caliper, back too far a simple extra squeeze would make the brake work but no... the whole thing failed and would not come back. New rotor and problem solved. Somehow two good caliper pistons plus a very slightly bent rotor was screwing things up... I think... maybe. Go figure.

Speaking of rotors. They should have a run out of .004" (.1mm) to .012" (.3mm), which is not much. The Disk thickness limit varies and is given in the shop manual for each model of motorcycle. If the rotor is bent or too thin, replace the rotor.

Even after lots of effort, the brakes can feel spongy. This can be from old brake lines which are expanding just a bit. The cure is new lines.

If you find your brake pads are contaminated with oil there are break cleaners you can spray on them that will clean out all the oil. Just be careful not to get these cleaners on to any rubber parts of the brake system.

DRUM BRAKES

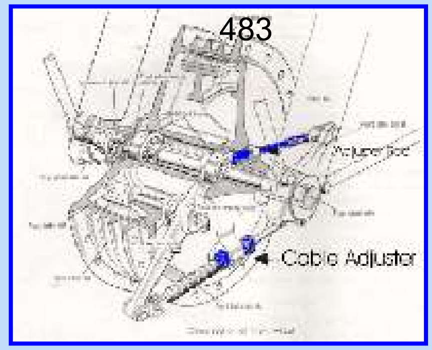
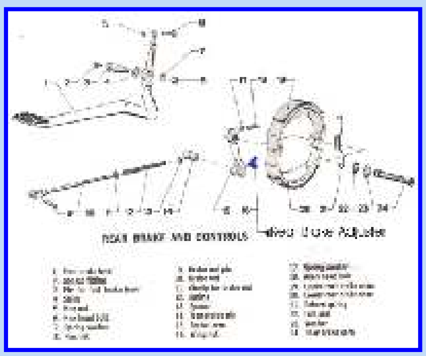
Drum Brakes are used mostly on the rear wheel these days. If you are working on early 1980s, or earlier, you will find them on the front wheel too. They come in two general types. Single Leading Shoe and Twin ( Dual ) Leading Shoe.



The Single Leading Shoe has a cam which pushes one side of each brake shoe out to make contact with the brake drum, when the brakes are activated. The Twin Leading Shoe has two cams on each end of the brake shoe pushing both ends out to meet the drum. This gives better shoe to drum contact, increasing braking power. They are, however, more difficult to adjust and if not adjusted right, give less braking power than Single Leading Shoe types.

Most motorcycle brakes die from abuse not wear. The brake cam shaft rusts up tight and/or the glue holding the linning to the shoe fails. In both cases you will need to remove the wheel, remove the brake shoes and drive out the brake cam and clean it.



To replace the Brake shoes simply lever one up and they both will pop off, but still be connected by the springs. Switch the springs to the new set of shoes and lever them back on. If they still have thick, within spec, linings, sand the glaze off with sand paper and reuse them. Do not breath any of the brake dust. Clean up the brake backing plate, grease the brake cam shaft and pivot post. Then put it back together. Take some sand paper and sand the inside of the brake drum. Again, don't breath the dust. Very probably it will have some wear and/or grooves in it. It should be turned down to give the best braking, however this takes special equipment and can be expensive. Most times, just sand it as smooth as you can and things will work just fine.

Front Drum Brakes are normally cable operated. You need to adjust the connector between the two Brake Cam Levers (arms) so that both ends of each shoe contacts the brake drum at the same time. To do this, loosen both the cable adjuster and the rod connecting the two brake cam levers. Tighten the cable adjuster. The one on the brake drum, not the one on the handlebar. When the brake starts to drag, keep turning the wheel and get a good " feel " of how much drag there is. Now tighten the rod going to the other brake cam lever till the drag " feels " about twice as much as before. Tighten the lock nut, then adjust the cable so that there is at least an 1/8" of play at the handlebar brake lever. By adjusting the play you can make the brake lever engage the brake wherever you like. Like closer to the handlebar if you have small hands. Don't be afraid to make the lever fit your hand. Just make sure there is enough free play in the cable so the brakes don't drag, and that the lever does not touch the handlebar when they are full on. How do you tell if they are dragging ? Feel the drum after riding a ways. If it is really hot and you have not used the brakes much, they are dragging. If you are sure the brakes are not dragging and the drum is still hot, check your wheel bearings.

Rear Brakes can be cable or shaft operated. They need about 1/2" of play. Normally, they are adjusted by a nut or wing nut on the rear end of the cable or rod that is actvated by the Rear brake Pedel. Most, if not all, are of the Single Leading Shoe type. Repair them just like the Front Brakes.

When everything is back together, but before you tighten the axle, spin the wheel and put on the brake hard and hold it. Then, still holding the brake on, tighten the axle. This aligns the brake shoes and drum, making the brake work better. Do this for both Front and Back Drum Brakes, Single or Twin Leading Shoe.

FRONT FORKS

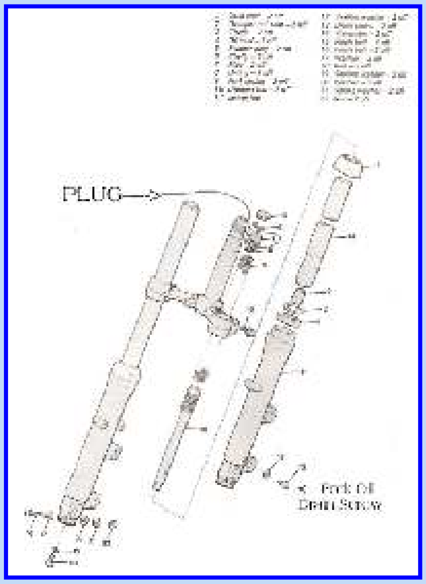
Sooner or later, it will happen. You look down at your front forks and there it is... Oil... leaking... not good. On most bikes it's really not that hard to fix, but before we start there are some things to consider. There are three things that just should not be seen in public. Front Fork Tubes, Rear Chains and my knees. The first two because of dirt and the last one because of ugly. We won't dwell on the last two, but we will consider those tubes.

In the old days when we really did " Live to ride, Ride to live " We didn't bother putting stupid sayings on our points covers, but we did put covers on our fork tubes. They were called Fork Gators or Fork Boots and they kept the dirt out of fork seals and flying rocks from dinging our fork tubes. Now, no one seems to ride much but we got to look trick. So Fork Gaters which worked so well in the past aren't put on anymore. The point is this. If your fork tubes are dinged and rough they will wear out any new fork seals we put in. The cure is new fork tubes. If the forks look OK, and you ride a lot, it might be a good idea to put on some gators !

Now on to the repair. This will cover about 85 % of the forks out there. While there can be a fair number of moving parts lurking inside a fork, they seem to have a very long life... except for the seals. Barring accident damage, seals are what go out first. To replace a seal you must first drain the fork fluid, if possible, and then remove the front wheel, fender, fork brace ( if there is one ), and, if the brakes are hydralic, the brake calipers. Take a wire or rope or the like and tie the caliper(s) up so it (they) are not hanging from the brake line. Loosen the fork pinch bolts on the top and bottom of the Steering Stem or Triple Tree. On some makes there is no top pinch bolt. The forks are held to the top mount by the same bolt that also keeps the fork spring in. This bolt is under a lot of tension and can pop loose as you unscrew it, hit you in the chin and give you stitches. Yes, indeed it can and don't ask how I know, just be careful, OK ?



Once you get the fork off, look at the bottom of the lower fork leg and you will see an allen bolt up inside the end. This has to come out.

The trouble is that this bolt has been in there awhile and is screwed into what is called a damper tube. This tube can turn, so it needs to have something to keep it from turning. Most times, the tension from the fork spring will hold it enough that you can unscrew the bolt. If you took the spring retaining bolt off when you removed the fork leg, put it back on. Sometimes, even with the spring in, the damper rod may still turn. You will have to buy or make a tool to keep the rod from turning. Some of these tools can be bought, or made out of a steel rod and the right sized bolt. A lot of the Kawasakis need a special socket that can fit on the end of a 3/8" extention. I use a 1/2" Air Gun to pop the allen bolt out but, once in a while even that and everything else will not get that allen bolt out. If this happens you will need to drill out the bolt. If you need help in this see the Stuck Bolts Page

If you loosen the allen bolt a few turns, more fork oil may come out. You might want to set it upright in a pan for a while to let it drain. OK, now that we have the allen bolt loose, take the fork spring retaining bolt off. Some forks, like those on a lot of Yamahas, require you to push in on the plug in top of the fork tube and against the spring pressure. Pry the circlip out. Now the spring pressure will push the retainer plug out of the fork tube, so be careful. You can now remove the fork spring and, if you have not already done so, the oil. Take the allen bolt out, and the fork tube should slide right out. Look at the top of the fork leg for the dust cover and gently pry it up with a screw driver. Under it you will find a circlip. There are several different kinds and you may need a special tool to get it out. Sometimes, the tube will come right out very easily. If it does, then the seal probably stayed in the fork leg and you will have to pry it out. You can use a screw driver to pry it out or one of several specially made tools, to pull them out.

If the leg does not want to come out and you have the bolt and circlip out, the problem is a bushing under the fork seal. Push the fork leg in and then pull it out sharply. You may have to do this several times. This will slowly work the seal and bushing out of the fork leg. Clean all the old fluid out of the leg. Slide the old seal off the leg. Cut a very thin piece of plastic, like from a plastic milk jug, and wrap it around the fork tube. Push the new seal over the plastic and then push the plastic down the fork so the plastic protects the seal lips as you push. It helps to lube the seal really good with grease.

You can now drive the seal home and reassemble the fork in reverse order. There are several ways to seat the seal. They make special tools to do it, but they cost a lot of money. I usually just take a socket, turn it around and gently drive it in. If you have to put the the fork and bushing in first, before the seal, things are a bit more fun. The bushings are a semi-tight fit, so you will need to gently and carefully tap the bushing in with a flat punch. Tap at one spot, then shift 180 degrees and tap again. Keep working your way around the bush or seal. Take your time. You can also use a 24 inch ( or so ) long piece of tubing, of the right diameter, to drive both the bushing and the seal home. You can get tubing, fairly cheap and in different sizes, at auto driveline repair shops. Just smooth the inner edge with a file and be very careful as you slide it down over the upper fork. You know, come to think of it, schedule 40 ABS plastic pipe might work too. I've never tried it, though. Now refill the fork with the right amount and weight of fork oil and reassemble your front end.

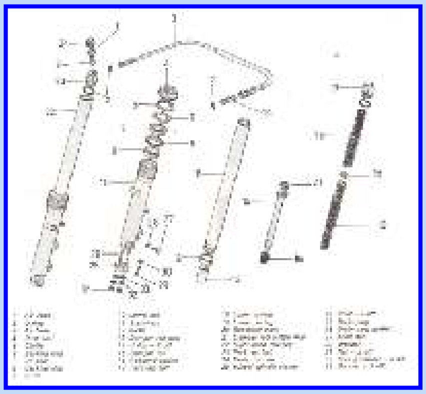
Many newer bikes require the fork oil level to be set too. You use a special tool for this. This tool allows you to suck out any excess oil. Set the gauge to the level specified in the shop manual, stick it into the fully compressed fork tube and use the syringe to suck out any excess oil. Some bikes require the fork tube to be fully extended. Check your shop manual. If you don't have the special tool, one can easily be made out of a length of pipe, some tubing and a chicken baster.



You can stiffen up you fork action with heavier weight fork oil. If your spring has sagged a bit, or you want stiffer springing, you can make a spacer out of a piece of 3/4" CPVC hot water plastic pipe. Just cut it to the length you want and put it on top of the spring, under the top fork bolt.

Align Your Front Wheel

After servicing your front end you may find that the front wheel is out of alignment with your handlebars. This can also happen after knocking the bike off it's side stand or after a very low speed fall.

I loosen the fork clamp bolts, top and bottom. Don't loosen them too much. We don't want the forks sliding up or down in their clamps. We just want the forks to be able to twist a bit in their clamps. Then kind of knock the rubber of the front wheel against a stout pole or side of a building using the handle bars. This will twist the forks in the triple tree. Do it gently and it will align the handle bars with the front wheel. If you go too much just knock it on the other side of the wheel.

When it is straight, retighten the fork bolts. If you can't get the handle bars to line up with the wheel using this method, it would indicate that your frame, forks, axle, or triple tree is bent.

Front Wheel Removal

Several people have E-Mailed me, wanting to know how to remove their wheels. At first glance you might say "How simple", but just like computers, it's only simple if you know how. So here are a few thoughts on how to do it. Basically, for a front wheel with a disk brake, you just remove the axle and pull out the wheel. Of course it's never that easy !

The axle can just go through the fork legs and wheel hub and have a nut on the end.

Or it can screw into the fork leg.

Pinch Bolt with Nut.

Allen Head Pinch Bolt, screws into fork leg.

Of course they couldn't just leave it at that so it can also have a pinch bolt (or nut) on one (or both) sides, that pinches or locks the axle to the fork leg. These pinch bolts can take several forms. They can be just a single bolt, like the ones picture above or they can pinch with two or four nuts like the ones below. Loosen or remove the pinch bolts or nuts, unscrew and remove the axle and pull the front wheel. To reassemble simply do the reverse. There will be a gap on the two and four nut types. Usually the gap goes to the rear (tighten fully the front one first, then the rear one) on the two nut type or to the bottom (tighten fully the upper ones first, then the lower ones) of the four nut type. If there is an arrow on it, it usually goes up. Always check the shop manual for the right torque. If in doubt, and you don't have a manual use the standard torque for that bolt size.

Two Pinch Nuts.

Four Pinch Nuts.

You should look at the speedometer drive, before you remove the wheel. If it is on the outside of the hub, it will probably have an ear on it that prevents it from rotating. If on the inside of the brake plate, it will have ears that fit into the wheel hub. You will need to replace it in the same position when you reinstall the wheel. Most disk braked bikes have the drive on the outside of the hub. Drum braked hubs usually have them on the inside of the hub, but not all of them do. When you replace the wheel and axle tighten the axle nut (or whatever) slowly, and make sure everything fits right. You know, the little speedo drive ear is in the right position and anything else. If you do it slow with a hand wrench you will feel things start to bind up, if it is going on wrong, and before it breaks !

Once you get the axle snugged up good and tight take a hammer and sharply rap the end of the wrench or ratchet to tighten it just a bit more. You are trying to kind of snap the nut to the final tightness or torque. For some reason, which I don't know, a nut or bolt put in this way will tend to stay tightened better then one that is just slowly tightened.

If you have drum brakes, finger tighten the axle bolts, nuts etc. and then spin the wheel and then lock the brakes and keep them on. Now tighten all the bolts and nuts. This centers the brake shoes in the drum. This makes the brakes work better.

Speedo Drive outside the hub.

Speedo Drive inside the hub.

Sometimes, there will be plastic protectors covering the forks and/or disk brakes. Just take them off, but handle them gently. Contrary to what the environmentalists tell us, plastic doesn't always last forever. It tends so get brittle over the years and fall apart, especially if it sits in the sun a lot. This plastic can be very expensive and hard to get.

Rear Wheel Removal

Rear wheels are basically the same as front wheels except now you have some sort of drive like a chain, belt, or shaft. Simply remove the axle nut, loosen any pinch bolts and pull the axle out. On shaft drives and some chain drives the wheel will pull loose from the drive and come off leaving the drive portion attached to the swing arm. On others you have to remove the chain or push the wheel far enough forward to slip the chain off the sprocket. Now the wheel should come off to the rear and slip past the fender, at least sometimes it does !

In the old days they realized that sooner or later you, the owner/rider would have to take these wheels off. Now-a-days I guess they figure you will just get out the cell phone and call for help because a lot of bikes don't come with center stands. If yours doesn't have a center stand, you will have to figure out some way of holding the rear wheel off the ground. You may also have to remove mufflers and/or shocks, so you can get the wheel out.

Remove the axle nut, brake rod nut and brake anchor bolt.

Remove the Axle nut, axle, and then the wheel. The sprocket stays on the swing arm.

If the wheel has drum brakes, you will need to remove the bolt that anchors the brake to the frame. This anchor prevents the brake from spinning around the wheel when you apply the brake. Also, remove the brake rod adjusting nut. This nut adjusts the length of the brake rod. This length controls the amount of free play in the rear brake pedal. As you remove the axle, watch for any spacers. These spacers center the wheel in the swingarm. There may be one, two, or none.

A thing to remember on disk brakes. If you work the brake lever when there is no disk between the brake pads, they tend to pop out... not good. Maybe put a piece of steel or wood between the pads so any unauthorized brake usage does no harm.

Loosen Nut, push forward and unhook chain.

Pull wheel to the rear.

A lot of dirt bikes have open slots to the rear of the swing arm so the wheel can be pulled off easily.

Some bikes have a removable block, held on with a bolt, on the rear of the swing arm. Remove the axle, push forward, pop off the chain, remove the block and then slide out the wheel to the rear.

Some bikes have a pinch bolt on the rear axle.

Some bikes (Certain models of Ducati, BMW, Honda and a few others) have a single side swing arm. the wheel is held on by one, three or four lug nuts or bolts. Remove any saddle bags and mufflers that are in the way, unscrew the lug nuts or bolts and remove the wheel.

One lug nut.

Four lug nuts

On some of the older bikes, the rear fender has hinges on it so you can swing it out of the way to remove the wheel. Most, if not all, late model bikes don't do such things.

TIRES & TUBES

I hate changing tires. They are a pain in the rear, or front, as the case may be. I charge way too much money to change a tire or tube in hope that they will take it somewhere else ! If you have a tire changing machine, it's real easy. I'm poor. I don't have a machine. I have tire irons, a bad back, and a weak mind. The best way to change a tire or tube is to take it to someone else and have them do it. But you want to do it yourself, don't you ?...and I'll bet you don't want a hole in the tube either.

There are a number of secrets to changing tires and tubes without putting a hole in the tube.

1. You need the right Tire Irons.
2. Lube of some sort.
3. A breezer tire tool.
4. A bead breaker of some kind.
5. Compressed air ( politicians should have no trouble with this ! )
6. Something to expand the bead ( if necessary ) and, finally,
7. A little bit of knowledge !

Here is the drill. Let the air out by removing the valve stem with a valve stem tool. Support the wheel. I use a 30 gallon steel oil drum with the top cut out. ( It doubles as a trash can ! ) Break the bead loose on both sides. This can be easy ( hand pressure alone ) or hard ( get the bead breaker out, a big vice will work too ). With two the tire irons lever the bead over the rim, and work your way around the rim of the wheel. Most times, I also use a third, little tire iron I have to help out. It has cut outs that fit onto the spokes. Some lube, or soapy water will help too. Then pull the tube, if it has one, out. Then lever the other bead off the wheel rim and it is off. Sounds so easy, doesn't it... and it can be. Just remember to push the bead opposite the bead you are working on, down into the center of the wheel rim. This allows the bead you are working on to easily slip over the wheel rim. To get the new tire on ... reverse the process ! Remember, some tires have a directional arrow. Make sure the arrow, if there is one, is pointed in the direction of the forward rotation of the wheel. Got that ? The way it normally spins. Don't install it backwards.

Now comes the fun part. After putting the tube in and aligning the balance mark ( light spot ) on the tire with the valve stem hole, install the valve stem nut and the valve stem. Add just a little air to the tube. That is so the tube has a little shape to it and is harder to pinch with the tire tools. Lube and push the bead on one side down into the center of the wheel rim and use one tire iron to keep it from coming out. On the side of the wheel, use the Breezer tire tool, and start levering the tire bead over the wheel rim in very small "bites". Maybe two inches at a time. Each time you move the Breezer, work the bead opposite the Breezer, deeper into the center of the rim. BEING CAREFUL NOT TO PINCH THE TUBE ! Tap the breezer gently with a hammer, if necessary, to move it around the rim, but do not use a "cheater" lever on the end of the breezer, it can break. ( Don't ask, Don't ask ) Add some more lube all the way around the bead on both sides, make sure the valve stem is pointed toward the axle, air it up and you're done ! Make sure the bead seats fully on the rim, if not let the air out, relube and air it up again. Only use 56 PSI. Any more and you could blow the bead off the rim.... very bad. Tighten the valve stem nut only finger tight. Oh, yes...one other thing....

NEVER PATCH A MOTORCYCLE TUBE ## REPLACE IT.
YOU ONLY HAVE TWO WHEELS
AND ONE LIFE !

Now if you have a tubeless tire, just lever that dog on, air it up and you are done...right ? Well, maybe....and then again, maybe not. Many times there is a gap between the bead and the rim. You either use a Bead Expander to expand the bead till it touches the rim, or a Rubber Donut to fill in the gap between the bead and the rim. It seems the rubber donuts are getting hard to find and they share the problem bead expanders have... they are all a bit pricey if you are only doing a few tires. Another method is to tie a rope around the tire and make a loop in the rope. Stick a long screw driver in the loop and twist it round and round. This tightens the rope on the tire, expanding the bead. Most times anyway. A large volume air tank and large hoses on your air compressor or a special air tank can help too. If you can put in a lot of air fast, it can literally blow the tire bead onto the rim. Sometimes this is the only way to get the big ATC tires to seat. Getting the tire to hold air so it will seat the bead to the rim can be... well, just a lot of fun.

O yeah, most dirt bikes have rim locks to keep the rim from turning on the bead and ripping the valve stem out when you run low tire pressure. They are a necessary pain in the rear. You just have to work the bead in around them.

Make sure the rubber rim strip, that big rubber band that covers the spoke nipple ends, is in good condition. If you don't have or can't get a rim strip, a couple of wraps of duct tape works great.

Whenever you air up a tire or check tire pressures, always put a little soapy water on the end of the stem. This is to check for air leakage from the stem core. If it leaks, retighten or replace it. I have found the valve stem cores rarely go bad. They just sometimes don't like the stem they are put in. If one leaks a bit replace it with another one and save the old one. Odds are it will like the next stem it is put in and hold air. There are two different styles, a long and a short, but they all seem to fit. Go figure !

TIRE SPECIFICATIONS

What tire should I use ? That is hard one to answer. Good cornering tires wear out quicker. long lasting tires do not corner as good. You will have to pick tires for the way you ride and how much money you have to spend. One thing to remember, if you vary from stock sizes...whatever you do to the front , do the same to the rear. In other words, if you go a little bit bigger on one, go the same amount on the other. The tire width must be within the spec's of the Rim Width. Click HERE to get the word on Tire Specifications

As if that wasn't enough, there are lots of different types of valve stems.
For those, Click HERE

Don't know what size tire you have ?
To read the size codes, on the sidewall of the tire, simply Click HERE

Most tires have a marker in the tread grooves. When the tread wears down to the marker, replace the tire. To find the marker, look for a small triangle on the side of the tire. This triangle will be pointing to the marker. There may be several on each tire.

Tires have a date code, cast into the side of the tire. The last four numbers give the week and the year that the tire was made. This tire was made in the 39th week of 2002. It's only good for the current decade, but that's better then nothing.

Never mix Bias and Radial tires.

Always replace the tube, if it has one, with a new one.

New tires have a coating on them. This is a mold release coating. It let's the tire pop out of the tire mold easily. It also makes the tire slippery for a while, till it wears off. This process takes, maybe, 50 to 100 miles. Take things easy till the mold release is worn off. Using Goo Gone cleaner on new tires seems to help too.

All manufacturers say replace a tubeless tire and not patch it. That's the official word. Unofficially, I don't see why you can't patch the tire, put a new tube in it and drive on. You decide.

OK, what tire pressure should we use. We know what the maximum tire pressure is, it's the MAX PSI listed on the side of almost every tire. But what if we aren't carrying the maximum load ? Your owners manual will list a general tire pressure that is good enough for most uses. If we ride at hi high speeds we want to add a few PSI. BMW tells us "For sustained speeds over 100 MPH, add three PSI." But what if we don't go quite that fast and carry more weight than normal, but not the Max ? A long time ago, while touring, I met a BMW dealer. He was also on tour. He told me a tire rep he knew, gave him a formula to find the right tire pressure. The drill was this. With the tire cold, take the tire pressure. Now ride for 15 minutes or so at freeway speed. Stop and take the pressure again. If the pressure has gone up more than three PSI the tire pressure is too low. This allows the tire to heat up too much, raising it's pressure. If it's the same, the tire pressure is too high. It's not allowing the tire to warm up right. If it's hot pressure is three PSI higher than it's cold pressure, the cold pressure is correct. The tire is the correct temperature and all is right with the world ! It's a bit of a hassle, but sounds logical to me. If you are a big tire master with one of the tire manufacturers and have a better way, let me know.

Now on wheel balancing. If you have a machine or can get access to one I'm sure it's a great Idea to rebalance the wheel. So the official word is do it. But, well, I ah... well, I never do. I ride an old BMW 750cc twin. In my younger days I liked to tour a lot. My cruising RPM was was 5000. This is about 90 MPH ( yes, I know, bad boy, bad ! ) More than once I was able to cruise at 105 or so. ( Yes, again, bad boy. ) By cruising, I mean spending several hours or more at these speeds. I have never balanced my wheels. I kinda figured BMW did it. If it works don't fix it. I've used many different makes of tires and I have just never had any trouble with vibration. My BMW has over 100,000 miles on it. It's your bike, if it vibrates, balance it. If it don't... well, you decide.

Spoke Wheel Lacing

I like Spoke Wheels. They just look good ! But, unfortunately, it seems looks is as far as anyone ever goes with wire spoke wheels. They need regular maintenance, but seldom get it. The problem with spokes and nipples is that they do, over a period of time, get loose. Lots of times no one notices that they are loose till they fail. A quick, down and dirty way of testing them is to just tap them. A loose spoke will have a dull sound, while a tight spoke will have a hi pitched, tinkly sound. Go try tapping some spokes and you will see what I mean.

If you have some loose spokes you will need to tighten them with a spoke wrench. Tighten the loose spoke until it has a nice ring to it. Now, you would think that all the spokes would need to have the same sound to have the same tightness, but this is not really true. Tap the spokes of a new bike with no miles on it and you will see they have different tones. New wheels are put together with nice new parts, special spoke torque wrenches, and people who actually know how to assemble wheels. I think we can safely assume that the new wheels are trued and torqued right, but the ones I've tried have different sounds. Very similar to be sure, but different. So I just tighten the loose ones till they have a nice ring to them, and leave it at that.

Sometimes we find a spoke has broken. Depending on which spoke has broken, you may be able to replace it. If not, you can tape or wire it to another spoke, or cut it out. I leave the old nipple in to fill the hole in the rim. Lots of dirt racers wire spokes together where they cross so if one breaks it will not wrap or flail around the wheel. One broken spoke is usually not much of a problem. Two is not so good, but as long as they are not close together you should be OK. Three means you had better deal with things real soon and if they are close together the wheel could fail very suddenly.

DO NOT RIDE THE BIKE IN THIS CONDITION.

So, we find our wheel has a bunch of broken spokes or a broken hub and things are not going well. We have several choices.

1. Get a new wheel assembly. This is very expensive. I would do this only if the bike is very new and the wheel really trashed.
2. Replace the broken spokes, rim, and/or hub. Then relace and true the wheel. This would seem to be the best way except for a couple of things.
   - The spoke nipples, on older bikes, often get rusted so tight to the spoke you can't get them off without cutting the spoke.
   - The spoke nipples, on a high performance bike, can stretch the threads on the nipple and spoke. This can lock them together. This, in turn makes you cut all the spokes off. The spoke and nipple sets for some bikes only cost $30.00, which is not too bad. However, I know at least one high performance dirt racer who's spokes cost almost $200.00 for the set.
3. Get a used wheel. If you have an older bike, I think the best plan is to look for a used wheel at a motorcycle salvage yard. Check both the spokes, and the truing of the wheel before you buy the wheel and plan to replace the wheel bearings. The cost of the used wheel will be a lot less than going any other way.

If you must go the wheel relacing route, here are some things to remember. Count how many spokes there are, 36, 40, whatever. You must have the same number of spokes in the rim as in the hub (well, DUH !). The replacement spokes have to be of the right length, and gauge (diameter). The spokes have to have the right ends. That is, with no bend in the head, some bend, or a lot of bend. Straight spokes with no bend in the head are the strongest. Most spoke wheels do not use tubeless tires BUT, some DO, the spokes being off set in the rim, so there is an airtight seal. There are different thread pitches too, but as long as the spokes and nipples are the same, who cares, right ?

OK, we looked for a new wheel and found nothing. So we got a new rim or hub, got all our spoke nipples loosened, and are ready to do it to it. Now this is how I do it. I don't do very many wheels so I find this way to work best for me. I tie each pair of spokes (Right and left sides together) together with some wire. I then take all the nipples off the spokes. I then take the rim off the spokes. I then cut the wire on one of the spoke pairs and remove the two spokes. Then I put them into the new hub, or replace them with new ones. I do this 'cuse I aren't too smart. I get confused easily. There can be as many as four different types of spokes on a wheel with a conical hub. Two different types of spoke ends and two different lengths. Most times there are just two different spoke types per wheel. I keep changing spoke pairs and rewiring them together till all the parts are replaced. If you are doing a lot of wheels and they are all the same, you will not have to do this. It will become second nature to you. But if you are only doing one wheel, this method will save you time and aggravation.

Now screw in the nipples the same amount on each spoke and finger tight. Take the assembled wheel and put it on the bike and tighten the axle. If it's a rear wheel, adjust it like you would if you where adjusting the rear chain. Now comes the fun part. Truing the wheel. You wheel must be no more then two, onehunderths of an inch in out of roundness and side play. Set up a dial micrometer to measure out of roundness and side play. If it is a dirt bike wheel and it doesn't go very fast and your not too picky, you can fix a piece of wire as a pointer, instead. Set the pointer of the micrometer so that it almost touches the inside of the rims. Now turn the wheel. You will see rim move up and down. Now here comes the tricky part. Locate the spoke (call it #1) that is at the highest point of the wheel. Tighten it a little. Then tighten four or five spokes (#s 2,3,4,5) on each side of that (#1) spoke. Tighten each one a little less as you get further from the highest (#1) spoke. If you tighten the highest (#1) spoke one turn then tighten the next spoke three quarter of a turn, the next half a turn, the next a quarter turn. Do this on either side of the highest (#1) spoke. Now turn the wheel, again find the highest spoke (point) and do it all over again. After a while the height of the highest point on the rim will get smaller and smaller. Soon you will be turning each spoke only a little bit. Once you are pretty close, and before the spokes are real tight, change and measure the side play.

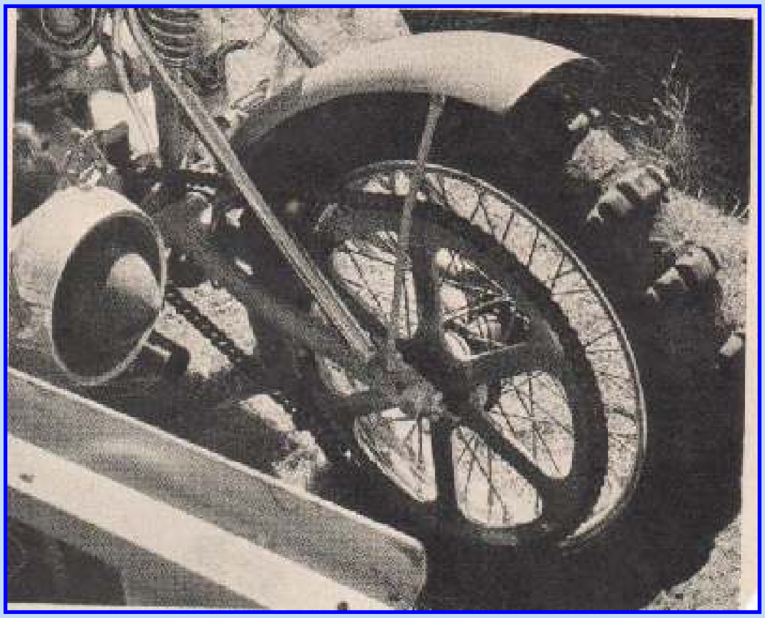
Set the dial indicator point on the side of the rim, and spin the wheel. Pick the point of the rim that moves furthest to the right. Again tighten the nipple on the (call it #1) spoke at that point, however, make sure that that spoke (#1) goes to the opposite side of the hub. Now tighten every other spoke (#s 2,3,4), ahead and behind of that spoke (#1), decreasing the amount of the tightening on each spoke as you get further away from the first (#1) spoke. Make sure all the spokes you tighten go to the left side of the hub. This will pull the rim to the left. Spin the wheel again, find the high spot, or rather high side spot, and do it all again. You will need to keep measuring side play and out of roundness, back and forth, as you tighten the nipples. Also, remember to keep the rim centered in relationship to the swingarm or front fork tubes, depending on whether you are doing a rear or front wheel. When I say turn the #1 spoke on either side play or out-of-round one turn I don't necessarily mean one turn. Use your head. You may need to turn it several turns OR only a half or quarter turn. Same with each of the other spokes before and after the #1 spoke. Turn them in proportion to the amount you turned the #1 spoke. Each one a little less than the one before it. #1 one turn, #2 half turn, #3 quarter turn, #4 one eighth turn, ETC. In some instances you might have to loosen or tighten the spoke nipples on the opposite side of the wheel to the ones you are working on, too.

Got it ? If you don't completely understand, reread the above till you do. Do it wrong and with each adjustment things will get further and further out of kilter ! If things start going wrong, STOP. Try doing the OPPOSITE of what you were doing. If things are still going wrong, loosen all the spokes up and start over. DON'T just keep tightening things up and further out of whack. You can really bend up a rim by being bull headed and just driving on no matter what.

Take note, you may have to go back and loosen the nipples or tighten the nipples to get the rim to move into the right position. You may have to experiment a bit, before everything starts to come together. Go SLOW. Lots and lots of small adjustments is the trick.



You will want to have the rim centered, trued, and round before you get the spoke nipples real tight. This means no more that two, onehunderedths (2/100") of an inch out of true, both side and out of round. Doing it better than that would not hurt anything, especially if you like going fast. Faster you go, the truer it needs to be. Once this is done, tighten up all the spokes about half a turn at a time. Keeping a sharp eye on all three things, center alignment side movement and out-of-roundness, tighten the spokes till they make a nice crisp sound. If you happen to have a spoke torque wrench, use it now to set the right torque. Check everything one last time ands make sure the spokes do not protrude through the nipple, possibly putting a hole in the tube. If they stick through, grind them down.

Remember, this is the trick. If you want to get this done right and as quick as possible, GO SLOW. Try to do this fast and you will just screw things up and it will take forever to get it right. Lots of little, tiny adjustments. Hundreds of them. That's the way to go.

REAR CHAIN & SPROCKETS

Motorcycles use chain because it is a very efficient way to transfer power from the transmission to the rear wheel. In the old days rear chains were totally enclosed and sometimes run in an oil bath. These chains lasted a long time. Sometimes as much as 40,000 miles or more. These days we gotta look trick so no more enclosed chain. This means you have to lube the chain a lot more often. I would say you need to lube a chain with a good chain lube a minimum of once every time you fill the gas tank. Once an hour would be better. Most of my customers lube their chains, Oh... about once a year. That might be optimistic I think. As a result most chains and sprockets are worn out in less than a thousand miles. Usually, when the chain is worn out so are the front and rear sprockets. This is because a chain does not "stretch" as it wears. It becomes elongated due to wear in the joints. This changes the pitch, which in turn wears out the sprockets. I have seen some big bikes, with big 630 chain, that seem to have worn out their chains without wearing out their sprockets too much. They were all well oiled all the time, they had big, low power engines AND I haven't seen very many of them. The biggest chain tip I can give is to oil that chain all the time. You can't do it too much.

In the old days, you would take the chain off, clean it off real good in solvent with a tooth brush and put it in a pan of grease. Put the pan on the stove and melt the grease so it will penetrate the bearing area, in the links of the chain. That's still a great way to really lube that chain, however, no one today will ever take the time to do it. 90 weight gear oil works good too, but it does tend to fly off. Fortunately, we have lots of different chain sprays on the market that work great. They go on as a liquid and penetrate the chain rollers, then dry, leaving the grease behind. The drill is to spray it on good and heavy, while spinning the wheel. Try to spray the edges of the chain. Now let it set for 10-15 minutes and you are good to go.

Now, I know what you are going to say. "I've got an O-Ring Chain. The ad said I don't have to lube it !" Well, How do you define "Lube" ? The picture to the left is of an O-Ring chain I took off a customers bike. Believe it or not, this is not the worst I've seen. One customer brought in an O-Ringed chained bike(XR200R Honda) and I could barely push it into the shop. You can't tell me that's not soaking up some horse power. The moral of the tale is this. Lube your chain even if it's an O-Ring chain. Just to complicate things, make sure the lube is OK for O-Ring chains.

A chain must be adjusted from time to time. Both front and rear sprockets must be in line with one another, otherwise the chain will wear more on one side than the other. To help in this there are marks on each side of the swingarm. Simply match the marks. Yes, it is true the marks may be off, but I don't think they are as far off as some people say. If it bothers you that much, look down the chain and see if it going to one side or the other. Adjust it so it tracks straight. There are tools, like the one to the right, that you can use to help. When adjusted right the chain will have 1/2" or so, up and down play in the center between the sprockets. This is for bikes with normal shock travel. If you have a long shock travel bike (most dirt bikes) this play may be as much as 1 1/2". Check you shop manual for the correct amount.

You can tell if the chain is worn by pushing up on the chain in the middle (between the sprockets) with one hand, while pulling on the chain at the rear sprocket. If you can pull the chain out from the sprocket much at all, say 1/4" or more, the chain is worn out. Another way is to measure the total length of the chain, when new, and replace it when it has lengthened by 2 1/2 %. You will also find that a worn chain is hard to adjust because some spots will be tight and others loose. You will want to adjust the chain slack when the chain is at its tightest. If you find that the chain has stretched so much that there is no more adjustment, simply take out two rollers. This is very GROSS but it is effective. You normally have to remove them in pairs. Sometimes, you can get a special link that adds only one roller. In other words take out two rollers and add one, to shorten the chain by one roller. Chain is always measured in rollers. Now that we are talking about chain and sprocket wear, the question arises... how much is too much ? If you are removing rollers, you are already well past the "Worn Out" stage and into the "Total Garbage" stage. But, how much is too much ? To get the answer, we need to consider several things. How much horse power do we have ? If the bike has a lot of suds the danger of chain breakage goes way up. When a chain brakes, it normally shoots one end through the crankcase. This can be quite expensive. If the chain jumps off the sprocket it can lock up the rear wheel. If you are going really fast, shoot, even if you are not going fast, this can be very exciting. Also painful. If you are willing to live with the breakage and lockup risk, you can run the chain and sprockets untill the teeth get bent and rounded so bad the chain jumps teeth on the sprocket. Now, this is not the best thing to do but it can be done. Is there some sort of steel chain guard in front of the sprocket ? This could protect the crankcase in the event of a chain failure. Could you make one ? Is your health insurance paid up ? All in all, the best thing to do is replace the chain and sprockets and then keep them well oiled.

But, back to the question of how far can you push it. Bob Lane sent me this picture from England and said...

"Back in 1981, 3 of us set off from England for a 2-week touring ride around mainland Europe. I was on my T150V Triumph Trident and the other 2 had Z1000 Kawasakis. Before departing, giving more thought to the fact that we would only be away from home for 2 weeks rather than the fact that we would be putting in some serious mileage, one of the guys decided that with a fairly worn rear drive chain, he would remove a link to provide more adjustment should he need it. 5 days and 2500 miles later in Athens (yes, Greece!) the photograph shows the result. As you can imagine, the last 300 miles or so, were only achieved by tightening the chain to provide friction drive with what was left of the sprocket. Indeed, such was the strain on the chain, that the rollers had flats worn on them by the time we arrived at our final holiday destination. ".

Always replace the chain and front and rear sprockets as a set. Never mix used parts with new parts. Yes, I know there may be rare exceptions to this rule (like big, well maintained, street bikes) but they are few and far between. It seems to be Ok to replace used with used because everything is ... well used !

To replace the chain and sprockets, first remove front chain guard and the front sprocket keeper. Most front sprockets are held on by one of three ways. With a E-clip, a big nut and lock washer, or with a clip that is bolted to the sprocket. The E-clip is a down and dirty way that is used for quick sprocket removal. A big "E" clip is used to hold the front sprocket on. Just pop it off and pull off the sprocket. This actually works pretty good but is not as secure as the other ways and usually means some one has replaced the factory keepers because not too many factories use this method to retain the sprocket. The big nut keeper uses a big nut (Well DUH !) and a special lock washer. The lock washer fits over special teeth machined in the counter shaft. These keep it from turning. Then part of the washer is bent over one of the flats on the nut, keeping it from turning. The big nut will have an indention or groove cut in one side. This goes toward the sprocket.

The Bolted Clip type fits in grooves on the counter shaft and then twists and bolts to the sprocket with two bolts. It is easiest to remove these bolts or nuts when the chain is still on so that it will hold the sprocket. If the sprocket still turns, you may have to get someone to hold the rear brake on while you unscrew things.

Now we take the chain off. Spin the tire around untill you find the master link and gently pop the clip off. Even if you are replacing the chain, save the clip and put it in the tool kit you carry on the bike. You never know, but you might need it some day. If the chain is endless you will need to break it. The best way is to use a chain breaking tool. Another way, is to put a grinding wheel in a drill and grind the ends of the chain link rivets flush with the link side plate. Then knock the rivet out with a punch. Gross, but effective and cheap.

After the chain is off, remove the rear wheel. The rear sprocket is usually bolted to the rear hub. Sometimes it is bolted to a sprocket carrier, which slides into rubber cushions in the hub. Don't lose the nuts or bolts or lock washers. Often, they are of a special length or design. Now is a good time to look at any chain guides on the swing arm or chain slack adjuster rollers for wear and replace them if necessary.

Bolt everything back together. If the sprocket is of a dished type, make sure it goes on the right way. Put it on backwards and things wear really quick. Please don't ask how I know this... trust me, it can be done and it does wear quickly ! Don't forget to bend over the locking tabs if there are any. Sometimes it helps to have a special tool to hold the chain ends together. 530 and 630 chain master links can be a very tight fit so it helps to have a chain press to press the side plate on with. You can also use a set of vice grips of the right size. If you are using a clip type master link make sure the closed end is pointed in the direction the chain travels. Rivet links need a chain riveter. At least that's the easiest way. You can also ping the rivet end over with a punch and hammer if you back up the master link with a big sledge hammer or piece of heavy metal.

That's about it. Lube it up and you are done !

Chain comes in a number of sizes. The more power a bike puts out the bigger the chain. Sometimes the next grade up in strength is just a wider chain. 428 and 428H are the same pitch, but 428H is a bit wider and stronger. 520, 525 and 530 are like that too. Pitch is the distance between two roller centers. Having the same pitch means they will all fit on the thinner sprocket. 520, 525, and 530 will all fit on a 520 sprocket, but a 530 sprocket will only fit 530 chain. So if there is the side clearance, a bigger chain will sometimes fit. Just to make things fun, Suzuki came up with an odd ball chain size called 532. It's a good idea no one seems to like. This chain is lighter than a 630 but stronger than a 530. I've only found Suzuki to use it on some of their bikes, no one else does. It can be hard to find. EK makes it and somebody else too, but I forget who !

O-ring chains are a good idea, but they cost more. Some just have a regular O-ring and some have fancy styles of O-rings with special grooves for extra lube. Remember... YOU HAVE TO LUBE THEM !

You can get the rear sprockets in either aluminum or steel. Both wear well if lubed often. Steel is cheaper but weights more and comes in fewer sizes. Aluminum is light weight and comes in a lot of sizes, but costs a lot more than steel. Front sprockets come only in steel... well, there might be a few aluminum ones, but I can't think of any.

When you get new sprockets, you might want to consider changing gear ratios. This can really help the bike be more enjoyable to ride. For example, if you want to lower your engine RPM at highway cruising speeds you can either get a bigger (more teeth) front sprocket or a smaller (fewer teeth) rear sprocket. If you need more power up through the gears on a dirt bike, you can get a bigger rear sprocket or a smaller front sprocket. Generally speaking, one tooth change on the front sprocket equals about a 3 1/2 tooth change on the rear sprocket. It's best to keep the front sprocket as big as possible to lessen chain velocity as the chain rounds the sprocket, however it is cheaper to change the front sprocket as opposed to changing the rear. Bottom line... if your bike has trouble climbing that hill, (not enough power) go one tooth smaller on the front (counter shaft) sprocket. If it revs too high in top gear... just won't go fast (MPH) enough... go up one tooth on the front sprocket.

Wheel Bearings

Installing motorcycle wheel bearings is quite simple. The wheel usually has two bearings and two seals. One bearing and one seal on each side. In addition, the bearings are usually shielded on both sides, but not always. Between the bearings there is a spacer that the axle passes through. Older bikes may have three bearings and older bikes may or may not have shields. Most wheels will have ball bearings but some may have tapered roller bearings.

Repair is simple. Lever the seals out and then, with a drift, drive the bearings out. It helps to change the end of the drift from one side of the bearing to the other as you hammer the drift. Work your way all around the bearing so it does not get cock-eyed in the wheel as you drive it out. When both of the old bearings are out drive the new bearings back in, being careful to keep the bearing level and streight in the bore. Only drive the bearing in from the outside race, NOT the inside race. If you apply force to the inside race, all the force goes through the balls of the ball bearing, knocking them out of alignment and RUINING the bearing. Then replace the seals. Remember to place the bearing spacer in between the bearings before you drive the second bearing in. You can use a special seal/bearing driver to drive the bearings in or just turn a socket around and use it as a driver.

Special Bearing Driver Tool.

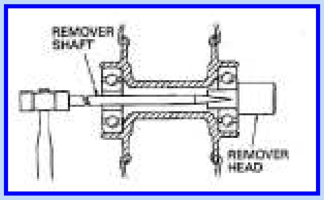
Wheel bearing driven in with a socket.

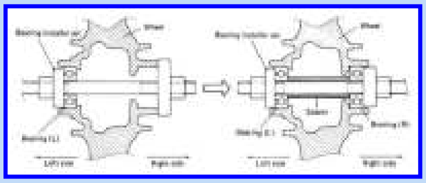
Wheel hubs are made of aluminum so if you heat them up with a hot air gun the hub will expand and the bearings will come out and go in much easier. If the bearings are shielded on both sides you don't have to add any grease but I still like to put in plenty of grease into the hub just for the general principle of the thing. If the bearings only have one shield put the shielded side to the outside and pack the inside with lots of grease. On some mag wheel hubs adding extra grease is not practical. Don't worry, in principle there is enough grease in the sealed bearings to last the life of the bearing.



On some Mag wheels the center spacer can only go in from one side. This is because the wheel has a smaller inside hole on one side of the wheel, than on the other. On this type of wheel you need to be very careful when you drive the bearings out too. You must make sure your drift is pressing on the bearing and NOT on the inside of the wheel casting. If you are sloppy you will BREAK the wheel casting... VERY EXPENSIVE!

Large hole side of a Mag wheel.

Small hole side of a Mag wheel.



There are several kinds of tools to remove wheel bearing other then using a drift. One uses an expanding plug in the center hole of the bearing. Another uses two fingers to pull the bearing out. All involve putting pressure on balls of the bearing. This will ruin the bearing so if you have to drive out a bearing always replace it. On tapered roller bearings you can remove the bearing cone and regrease it because you are not driving it in or out with the rollers.

Instead of driving the bearing in with a hammer you can make a small press out of a threaded rod, nuts, washers, and a socket to slowly press the bearing into the hub.

Hand Made Bearing Press.

Cross Section of a Press Tool.

On occasion the inner race of the bearing and the balls will have been destroyed or are so badly damaged that they fall out when you try to drive out the bearing. If this happens you will have to grind a groove in the outer bearing race grinding stone. A Dremel tool works best for this but a regular drill with a small grinding stone will work too. Always wear saftey goggles when you do this. Grind the outside bearing race, in one spot, till you just start to see the aluminum of the wheel. Grind it all the way across the width of the race. Once you grind the groove all the way across the width of the bearing it will normally come loose and you can pry the old race out with a small screw driver. Very rarely, it will really be rusted in there and you will need to put some penatrating oil on it and perhaps even grind another groove in another spot and take the bearing race out in pieces!

Replacement is the best option but sometimes you can repack used bearings with grease. If the bearings are tapered bearings or ball bearings without seals, the bearings can be easily repacked with grease. If the bearings are ball bearings with seals, things are a bit harder. If the shield is rubber you can usually pop it off, with a very thin screwdriver, without any damage. Then you just clean the bearing, add more grease, and pop the rubber shield back on.

If the bearings use a steel shield the shield will be almost impossible to get off. It can be done but usually the steel shield is bent and will not go back on. If the bearing is on an old piece of equipment, that you want to get going cheaply, it is possible to drill a small hole through the steel shield and then use a Needle Fitting on the end of your grease gun and pump in some grease. Very GROSS but it will work. You can also use the Needle Fitting to put grease into any bearing that has a rubber boot around it. Just push it through the rubber boot and pump in the grease. When you pull it out the rubber seals off the hole and sort of self heals.

Wheel bearings usually last quite a while, perhaps 15,000 to 30,000 miles. If you feel any play in the bearings replace them. If the wheel hub feels very hot to the touch, check to see if the brakes are dragging. If the brakes are not dragging, replace the bearings because there has been a lubrication failure. The bearings have overheated and are ruined. Likewise, if you have the axle out for some reason, like a tire change, and you notice it is discolored, as if it had been heated up with a torch, replace the bearings and the axle too. If you are going on a long trip and can't remember when you last replaced the wheel bearings, replace the bearings. If in doubt, replace the bearings. You only have two wheels. If one locks up at speed, you will be in BIG trouble!

Steering Bearings

Matthew 7:14 "Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

If we want to steer straight and narrow our Steering Bearings must be in good condition.

Motorcycle Steering Bearings come in three styles.

1. Loose ball bearings.
2. Caged ball bearings
3. Tapered roller bearings.

Ball Bearings

Caged Ball Bearings

Tapered Roller Bearings

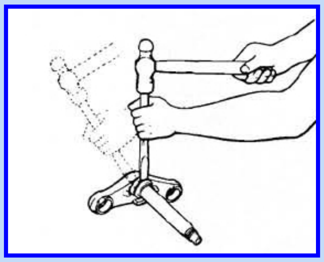
The entire basic steering assembly is called a Triple Tree, Triple Clamp, Steering Head, Steering Head Yoke, or Steering Stem. Up until around 1985 most, but not all, bikes used loose ball bearings for their steering races. These bearings have upper and lower outer races that are a tight press fit in the frame and a lower inner race that is press fitted to the steering stem. The upper inner race is a loose fit.

Lower Ball Bearing

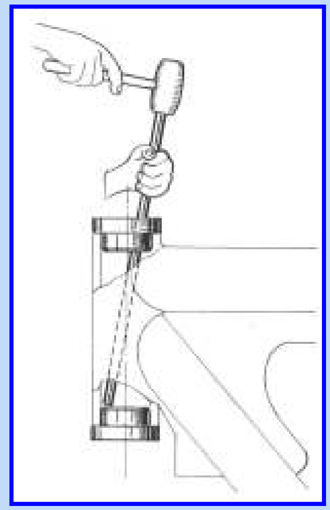
Upper Ball Bearing

The balls are held to the races with grease during assembly. A large nut, threading onto the steering stem, holds the lower triple tree (Lower Fork Yoke), balls, and races to the frame neck (Steering Head). Tighten this nut until there is no play in the bearings, but the triple tree still moves freely. Now install the top triple tree (Upper Fork Yoke), the second steering stem nut and then the front forks.

Most late model bikes use either tapered roller bearings or caged ball bearings. Caged ball bearings and tapered roller bearings are lubed the same way and are much easier to handle. I once regreased the steering bearings on a BMW R69S. This bike uses loose ball bearings and has a leading link front end. Even with the front wheel removed that front end felt like it weighed a thousand pounds! I slid everything together and "Ping" one lousy ball bearing popped out. I recounted all the balls, cleaned everything and relubed them so they would stay in place. I tried again. "Ping" out popped one ball again! Do it again and third time was the charm, in it slid with all ball bearings in place. Regular Triple Trees weigh about five pounds and usually go together smoothly on the first try. Just remember to count the number of balls you take out and put the same number back in!



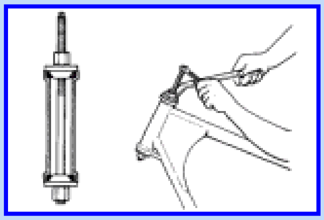
Most newer bikes use tapered roller bearings. Roller bearings use caged rollers in place of ball bearings. When they are fitted to the triple tree, Tapered Roller Bearings normally use a tight fit on the lower bearing and a loose fit on the top bearing.



Lower Roller Bearing

Upper Roller Bearing

To remove the lower bearing or bearing race, from the steering stem, simply pry the bearing or bearing race off with two screw drivers or a bearing puller or carefully use a chisel to pull the bearing off. The lower bearing/bearing race can be on VERY tight. Some heat with a hot air gun may help. To remove the top and bottom steering races from the frame neck, drive them out with a long drift and a hammer.



To install the lower bearing or bearing race on the steering stem, use a piece of pipe, of the right diameter and a hammer to drive the bearing or race home. Use a piece of pipe whose inside diameter is just a bit bigger then the steering stem's outside diameter. You want to apply pressure only to the inner part of the bearings so no damage is done to the bearing rollers.

To install the bearing races into the upper and lower frame neck you can drive them in with a large socket or you can make a press.

To use a socket, pick one that is the same diameter as the bearing race you are trying to install. Turn the socket upside down and put in a 6" extension onto the socket through the open end. Now you have a nice flat driver of the right diameter to drive the race into the frame neck. Put the race on the frame neck and gently drive it into the neck with a hammer.

To make a press take two fairly thick (3/8" or more) round pieces of steel with a diameter equal to the outer bearing race and drill a 1/2" through the center of both. Place one steel piece on the bottom of the frame neck with a long piece of 1/2" threaded rod and nut through it. Then place the upper race on the frame neck and then the other piece of steel. Add a nut to the 1/2" threaded rod and slowly start to tighten it. This will press the upper bearing race into the frame neck. Do the same for the lower race. If things seem to be excessively tight some penetrating oil and some heat from a hot air gun may help with both disassembly and assembly. Be careful to get things too hot and ruin the paint job.

Grease up the bearings and slide the fork stem through the frame neck and put on the top bearing and nut or the top triple tree. Now tighten the nut. On most bikes you will want to tighten the nut till all play is removed but the Steering Stem moves smoothly. Torque the steering stem adjuster nut to about ten foot pounds of torque and then loosen the adjusting nut about an eighth of a turn. Some bikes require twenty-five to thirty-five foot pounds of torque, turn the triple tree back and forth five or six times, then loosen the adjusting nut till it turns smoothly. The basic idea is to set the bearings in tight and then loosen up the adjustment nut till everything turns smoothly with no detectable play. Then put on the top triple tree and torque the top nut. The top nut, that holds on the top triple tree, can require as much as eighty foot pounds of torque. Check your shop manual!

Adjust caged ball bearings the same way as tapered roller bearing. The reason for the higher initial torque is to make sure the bearing races and balls are fully seated in the frame steering head.

There are lots of different ways to hold the steering bearings and top Triple Tree on. Some bikes have a nut and a pinch bolt to secure the top Triple Tree. Others have an adjuster nut to adjust bearing tightness, then the top Triple Tree is installed and held on with a bolt on the steering stem. Still others use an adjusting nut and a second jam nut to hold the adjusting nut in place. Sometimes there will also be a Lock Washer with bendable ears to lock the adjusting nut in place. Again, check your shop manual!

To check the Triple Tree bearings put the bike on it's center stand or otherwise lift the front wheel off the ground. With the front wheel pointing straight forward, grasp the lower fork legs with your hands and try to move the forks forwards and backwards. If there is any play or if the if the forks do not turn from stop to stop smoothly, adjustment or repair is indicated.

Steering Bearings generally last a long time. They are quite protected from the elements and the bearings they use could be used on shafts turning 6000 RPM instead 1/2 of a revolution per minute. Here is a picture of a well used 1981 Honda XR200. It is 26 years old and has set out in my bone yard for the last 10 years. I just pulled it apart for this page on steering bearings.

Looks pretty good doesn't it?

Wear comes from one of three things.

1. Good honest usage.
2. Long hours of riding in the bed of a truck or trailer.
3. Abuse and lack of maintenance.

I've seen worn steering bearings that tended to keep the steering in one place. You could turn the handlebars to the right or left OK but with the handlebars straight forward there is a definite "Groove" that the steering sort of "Falls" into. I've seen this on high mileage street bikes with roller bearings. I've also seen it on dirt bikes with ball bearings which have spent many hours riding in the back of pickup trucks. To get rid of this the bearing must be replaced.

If rust or dirt has gotten into the bearings they should be replaced. Sometimes you can clean the rust or dirt out, regrease the bearing and everything will work OK. You will have to decide on a case by case basis. If possible, it is best to replace the bearings.

TWIST GRIP THROTTLES

There are many types of motorcycle twist grip throttles, but they all do the same thing. Open and close the engine's carburetor(s). When a throttle cable fails it usually fails at the twist grip end. This is because the end of the cable is being flexed back and forth repeatedly as you use the throttle. Because of this, motorcycle manufacturers use lots of different ways of pulling the end of a throttle cable.

Notice on these examples. The cable is curved gently as it inters the twist grip to lessen the bending of the cable. The less bend there is the longer the cable will last. To help this some twist grips eliminate the bend entirely by pulling the cable in a straight line. BMW uses a gear arrangement like a bevel shaft drive.

Some twist grips use a grip with a spiral groove cut in it. A small block holds the end of the throttle cable. This block fits into rectangle slot cut in the handle bar. A small knob cast into this block fits into the groove in the twist grip. When the grip is turned, the block slides back and forth in the rectangle slot in the handle bar. This pulls the cable which, in turn, opens the throttle. I have seen this type of throttle on cheap mini-bikes, small Hondas like the old Trail 90 and of all things, older shovel head Harley-Davidsons.

Now, just to make things interesting, we also have twin cable twist grip throttles. These throttles have one cable to open the throttle(s) and one cable to close the throttle. Now you might ask why? Well, I remember riding my old trail 90 one winter back in 1967. It was quite cold out, maybe 15 degrees Fahrenheit. I was running about 50-55 miles an hour and I shut off the throttle. Only thing was, the bike didn't shut down but kept right on going! The throttle had frozen wide open! I realized what had happened and reached down and shut the key off, killing the engine. Theoretically, a twin cable set up would have prevented this... maybe. Anyway, that's the idea. You can always close the throttle. I always considered twin cable setups a royal pain in the rear. Most twin cable set ups make it a hard to replace a broken cable. I've seen a lot of guys just take the return cable off and run things like a single cable set up. I DO NOT recommend this. It's really not that much hassle making the twin cable set up work so keep it, if possible. The twin cable set up was all the rage in the 1980's but then seemed to fall out of favor. However, there still are a lot of new bikes with them. I must confess I don't like them. I prefer the cables that just pop off the carbs.

All these throttle set ups are sort of the same for replacement or service. Loosen the cable adjuster and run it in so you have lots of throttle play. Unscrew all the screws holding the twist grip on the handle bar and unhook the cable ends. For lube I like light oil or graphite. If there are any gears or it's one of the sliding designs use grease.

While we are talking about twist grips maybe I should cover grip cover replacement. Usually you cut off the old ones and glue on the new ones. Sometimes you can get them off by slipping a very thin screw driver between the grip and the handle bar. Then squirt some penetrating oil in along the screw driver shaft. Pull the screw driver out and work the grip back and forth. That will get them off in one piece perhaps 30% of the time. I don't like to glue them on because sometimes, for whatever reason, you just need to take the grips off. If they are glued on you will probably ruin the grips getting them off. What I do is this. I wrap the handle bar with plain, ordinary masking tape. I wrap it the length of the grip and then try to put the grip on. If it feels loose I add another layer of masking tape. It's a bit hard to get on but you can take it back off without ruining the grip. If you don't like this method then just glue it on!

One last kind of throttle you will run into is not a twist grip throttle at all, but a thumb throttle. These are used on three and four wheel ATV vehicles. You service them just like all the others.

① Corrected compression ratio is calculated by using the effective compression stroke of the piston (from the top edge of the exhaust port to TDC) rather than the full stroke.
② Equipped with racing kit.

(1) Maximum allowable taper or out-of-round. Deviation is obtained by subtracting the largest bore measurement from the smallest bore measurement.

(2) Mark the piston skirt at this height from the base, and then measure the piston thrust diameter (front-to-back) at the mark.

(3) To obtain the piston clearance, subtract the piston reference diameter (measured at the specified height) from the smallest cylinder bore measurement.

(4) Cast iron cylinder.

(5) Iron sleeve pressed into aluminum cylinder.

(6) Aluminum cylinder cast around and bonded to an iron sleeve.

(7) Top and bottom rings are chrome-plated, tapered-type (keystone) and are interchangeable top and bottom grooves.

(8) Top ring is chrome-plated, flat-type and bottom ring is parkerized (black), flat-type—not interchangeable.

(9) Top ring is chrome-plated, tapered-type (keystone) and bottom ring is parkerized (black), flat-type—not interchangeable.

(10) Top ring is chrome-plated, tapered-type (keystone) and bottom ring is chrome-plated, flat-type—not interchangeable. Model F50 uses an expander spring under bottom ring.

(12) Top and bottom rings are chrome-plated, flat-type and are interchangeable top and bottom grooves.

(13) Both rings are tapered-type (keystone); top ring is chrome-plated and bottom ring is parkerized (black)—not interchangeable.

(14) Up to Engine No. M10-425199, see Note 8; after Engine No. M10-425200, see Note 9.

③ Top ring is chrome-plated, flat-type and bottom ring is parkerized (black), flat-type—not interchangeable.

425200, see Note 9.

Use 20W-40 multiviscosity automotive oil in the transmission case.
Use low-lead or regular-grade leaded fuel with a research octane rating of 85-95.
Unless otherwise noted, use Suzuki C.C.I. 20W oil or an equivalent non-diluent 30W two-stroke cycle motorcycle oil or outboard motor oil.
Pre-mix engine lubrication. Use a 20:1 gasoline-oil mixture in the fuel tank. A simple method of obtaining the proper mixture is to pour one quart of two-stroke cycle oil into a five-gallon container, and then mix throughly with one gallon of gasoline. Fill the container with gasoline and agitate for an homogeneous mixture.
For competition, use a degummed castor-base racing lubricant, such as Castrol R 30W, Blendzall Green Label, or Shell Super M.

(1) Tighten the spark plug to 14 ft-lb of torque. Tighten cylinder head nuts with engine cold to prevent warping.
(2) Use an impact-type screwdriver to tighten the crankcase screws.
(3) For all models, tighten the oil pump flange mounting screws to 3 ft-lb torque; tighten the oil pump union bolts to 2 ft-lb torque.
(4) Model M15D with DC Generator-Starter.
(5) Model TC120.
(6) Models TC120-2 and TC120R.
(7) First torque is for the cylinder head nuts; second torque is for the cylinder base stud nuts.
(8) Unless otherwise noted, crankcase joint is sealed with a gasket.
(9) Crankcase joint is sealed with a coating of SUZUKI LIQUID GASKET (BLACK).
(10) Crankcase joint is sealed with a coating of SUZUKI SEAL (SILVER).

(1) Unless otherwise noted, piston distance is measured with a dial indicator installed in the cylinder head spark plug hole.

(2) The angled spark plug hole prevents an accurate dial indicator measurement through the cylinder head. Remove the head and mount the indicator on the cylinder top surface so that the indicator shaft is approximately parallel with the bore axis.

(3) Use 1½ turns for the early TS90 units equipped with the single air-jet carburetor; up to Engine No. TS90-27503.

(4) Using the dial indicator, position the piston at this distance BTDC, at which the timing marks on the flywheel and crankcase must line up. If not, scratch a new mark on the flywheel and then use a strobe light to inspect the dynamic timing at this RPM.

(5) Rotor-type magneto.

(3) Rotor-type magneto.

① Model F50 only; other specifications are for Model M31.
② Models B100 and B105 up to Engine No. B100-90165; all other 120cc models use the larger clutch assembly for longer life.
③ Number of steel plates depends on the number of shim plates used for adjustment.
④ Longer springs are used with heavy-duty clutch hub employed after Engine No. K10-352311.
⑤ Three-plate clutch assembly used up to Engine No. M10-111728.
⑥ Heavy-duty clutch springs used in Model TC90J; these can be used in other 90cc units to prevent slipping.
⑧ Use a feeler gauge to inspect the clearance between the clutch plate "pack" and the pressure plate; refer to the text for details.

① Oil quantity shown is for one fork tube only.
② The fork oil level is measured from the top edge of the inner tube for internal-spring-type forks. For external-spring-type forks, measure the oil level from the upper surface of the top bridge. The fork must be fully extended for an accurate measurement.
③ Unless noted otherwise, use 30W oil in the fork tubes.
④ For motocross-type, internal-spring forks, use 10W-30 multiviscosity oil or automatic transmission fluid.
⑤ Use 265cc for Model TS250 with 34mm diameter fork tubes; use 250cc for Model TS250-2 with 32mm diameter fork tubes.

Days of Yore

¶ Back in the days of Yore, when the earth was young and Dinosaurs ruled, we tried lots of different things to make our motorcycles run better. Those things are now 30 to 40 years old, possibly more. To some of you, that is a lifetime ago. Maybe, even before you were born. To me, it is like yesterday.

On this page I am going to reprint some old ideas whose time has come and passed. Kind of like me. I hope you find this stuff as interesting as I did.

Electronic Ignitions were but a dream. However, you could do a lot if you had a Coil.

1. Coil # 1.
2. Coil # 2.
3. Coil # 3.
4. Letters on Coils.
5. Coil # 4.
6. Magneto for the old Honda 450 twin.

7. The poor man's fuel injection, "Pumper Carbs."
8. Pumper Carb #2
9. Pumper Carb #3
10. Pumper Carb #4
11. Gasohol, wait a minute. Are they still trying to push that?

Wheels and Brakes — Heavyweight Twins

To remove the front wheel

With the machine on the central stand: Detach the brake cable from the expander lever. Detach the brake cable adjuster from the brake plate. Detach the right hand spindle nut. Release the pinch stud in left fork slider end. Take the weight of the wheel by the left hand, pull out the wheel spindle. The wheel can be taken out of the forks.

To refit the wheel

Reverse the procedure described for removal, with the following precautions. Remove traces of rust from the spindle and grease. Exercise care to correctly locate brake plate in the fork slider. Do not tighten unduly the slider pinch bolt, overtightening can cause a fracture.

Note—If the fork motion is stiff after refitting the wheel, slack off the spindle nut and work the forks up and down (the fork tubes will take up alignment), then retighten the spindle nut.

To remove the rear wheel

The rear wheel is detachable from the brake drum. With the rear wheel clear of the ground: Take out the three rubber grummets (4). Remove the sleeve nuts (8) which retain the wheel to the brake drum. Unscrew the wheel spindle (20) and remove it. Take away the distance piece, between the speedometer drive, which will come away also, there is no need to separate the cable from the drive. Pull the wheel away from the driving studs in the brake drum. Incline the machine to the right side, then pass the wheel under the left side silencer, clear of the machine.

To remove the brake drum

With the rear wheel removed: Take off the brake rod hand adjuster, then remove the rear chain connecting link. Release the nut securing the dummy spindle, pull back the brake drum clear of the fork ends.

To dismantle the front hub

The wheel hubs are packed with grease during initial assembly, and should not need further lubrication for at least 10,000 miles, when the hubs should be dismantled for cleaning and fresh grease used. To dismantle the front hub, with the wheel removed take away the brake plate with brake shoes.

Unscrew bearing lock plate on left side of hub, holes are provided for a peg spanner or use a punch. If the plate resists removal use a little heat which will facilitate removal, take out felt sealing washer and distance piece.

To eject the bearing use a drift through the brake side (the front wheel spindle can be used for this purpose) when a few light blows from a mallet will drive out the bearing until it is clear of the hub, and no more, as the other bearing goes into the hub during this process.

Take out the spindle, or drift, invert the wheel and repeat the process to eject the double bearing which will bring with it the large steel washer, the felt washer, also the thin steel washer.

Assembling the hub

Clean and repack both bearings with fresh grease (see table of lubricants). Press into the left side of the hub the single bearing, fit the distance washer (flat side against the bearing), then the felt washer and secure with the lock plate.

Invert the hub, insert the distance tube (small end first) against the bearing.

Enter the double bearing square with the hub, use the drift through both bearings and drive home until the bearing abuts against the distance tube.

Fit the smallest of the two washers, the felt washer, then the large steel washer.

With a suitable punch peen the hub material, where it joins the washer in three equidistant positions to retain the washer.

Rear hub dismantling

With the wheel removed, remove the speedometer drive lock ring (this has a left hand thread), take out felt washer and distance piece. To eject the bearing use the wheel spindle with its washer also the distance piece that goes between the speedometer drive and the frame placed on the spindle. Partially drive out the bearing until it abuts against the reduced diameter inside the hub. Take out the spindle, use a short length of steel tubing with the outside diameter slightly smaller than the inside diameter of the bearing and drive out the bearing.

Invert the wheel, then drift out the other bearing, which will take with it the steel cup, felt washer and the thin steel washer.

Assembling the hub

Deal with the bearings as already described and assemble by first fitting the single row bearing, in the reverse order described for dismantling, with the following precaution: when tightening the left hand lock ring avoid damage to the slots for the speedometer drive. Finally "peen" the hub dished washer to the hub. The hub assembly sequence is shown in fig. 46.

Dismantling the brake drum

A bearing is not used in the brake drum; when the spindle

The Ultimate Shop Manual

As of today, June 1, 1987, I am owed over $1,000 for work I have performed on different motorcycles. On this date, I have $10.91 in my checking account.
Because of this nothing and I mean nothing goes out of this shop unless it is paid for completely.
There will be no exceptions!
Please do not even ask!
When will I learn? Nov 7th 1992. 3 times I let people take out stuff that was not paid for in full. 3 times. To date none has paid me! No one! When will I learn?

HOW TO BUILD A LOW-COST BUZZ-BOX

If you're presently using the H.O.M. (Hit Or Miss) method of timing your bike, you can put an end to the guesswork by building this simple buzz-box for about is a little steep. Of course, if you run your engine with incorrect timing, it could result in damage that will cost you many times the price of a buzz-box. Considering this, the price isn't so high.

I teach a class in motorcycle mechanics, so I frequently bring my buzz-box to class for the students to use make sure the alligator clips don't touch when the unit is not in use. The oscillator module is a must because it prevents the rapid discharge of the batteries when the breaker points are closed.

Here is a list of the necessary items, plus Radio Shack's part numbers for them:

simple buzz-box for about ⅓ the cost of a commercially-available one

by Mike Capalite

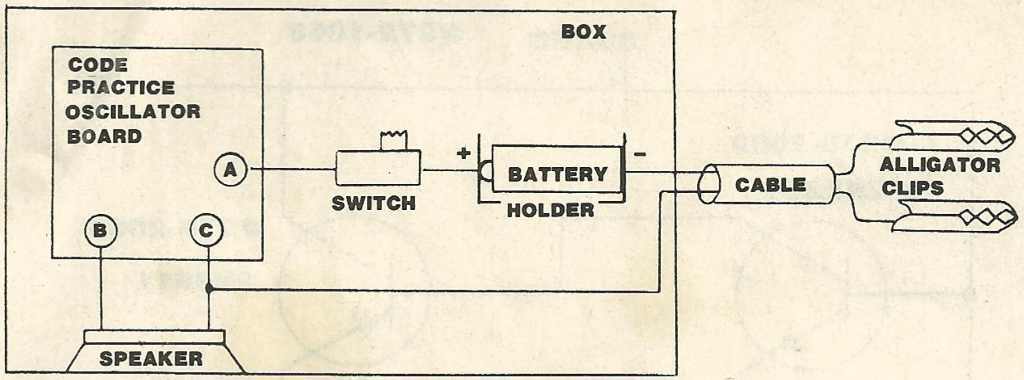
In many of my tune-up articles, I talk about using a buzz-box when setting the ignition timing. A buzz-box is simply a battery-operated circuit tester that uses a buzzing sound to indicate if a circuit is open or closed. To check your bike's timing, connect one buzz-box lead to the point spring and the other to ground. Rotate the crankshaft forward until the buzz changes tone; when this occurs, the breaker points have just opened or closed. If you match this tone change to the position of the piston before top dead center (either by using factory flywheel marks or a dial indicator), you can determine if the timing is correct or if it needs adjustment.

The main drawback with these units has been their high cost, usually in the $20 range. For the rider who only checks his timing a couple times a year, this price box to class for the students to use. Recently, one of my students, who works for an electronics firm, commented that this unit was very similar in design to a code practice oscillator he built for practicing Morse code. When he brought the oscillator to class and used it in place of the buzz-box, it worked perfectly. He then informed me that he built it for less than seven dollars. All of the parts are available at most electronics stores, but he chose Radio Shack because they have numerous locations across the country.

He drew a schematic for me and then I assembled one; to my surprise, it worked. I then proceeded to build a couple more units, trying to see how cheaply I could do it. By using an old transistor radio, I got the total price down to about $4.75.



You can probably save some money by using parts you have around the house. For instance, a plastic food container or a coffee can makes a suitable housing for the unit, but the mini utility case is hard to beat for neatness. The on-off switch can be eliminated if you them:

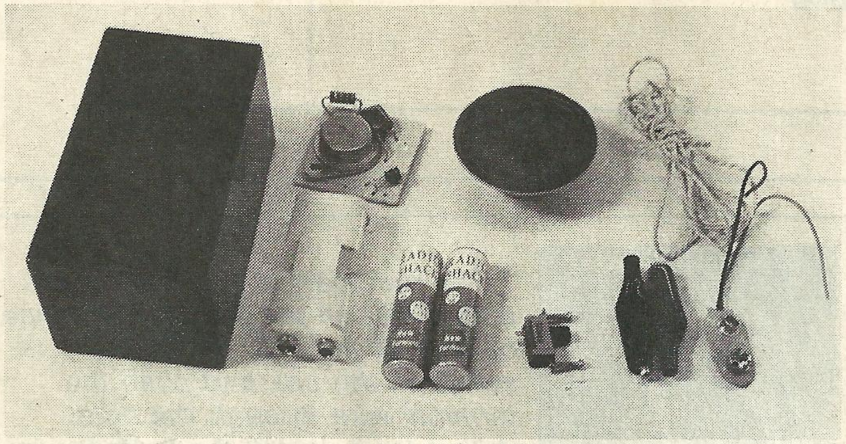
|---|---|
| 1—20-1155 | Code practice oscillator module |
| 1—40-245 | Miniature P.M. 8-ohm speaker |
| 1—270-231 | Mini utility case |
| 1—270-382 | Penlight battery holder |
| 2—23-468 | AA penlight batteries |
| 2—270-378 | Mini alligator clips |
| 1—270-325 | 9-volt battery snap |
| 1—275-406 | SPST subminiature slide switch |

1—12-inch length of wire



Since some of the required parts are only packaged in multiples, it might be a good idea for you to go together with some friends and build several units. One word of caution: Do not use a 9-volt battery because the unit is designed for use with a 1½- to 6-volt power source only. Another tip: Make sure you do not connect the battery backwards, for this can damage the module.

Here is the step-by-step procedure, with wiring diagrams, to assist you in making your own buzz-box.

This is the basic wiring diagram for the oscillator unit. As you can see, it is quite simple and all you need for assembly is a soldering gun and a small amount of solder. The A, B, and C terminals shown on the diagram are actually printed on the code practice oscillator board so it makes the operation almost foolproof.

Drill a small hole (about 3/32'') on one side of the box for the test leads to pass through. If you are using the slide switch, you must make a square hole, and this can be tricky. Begin by drilling a 3/16-inch hole as shown here. Carefully square the hole with a small square or triangular file and then lengthen it until it measures 3/16'' x 3/8''. The hole must be longer than it is wide so the switch can move. Next, mark and drill the two holes for the switch mounting screws. The switch and lead wires are mounted toward the edge of the box because the battery holder fits in the center.

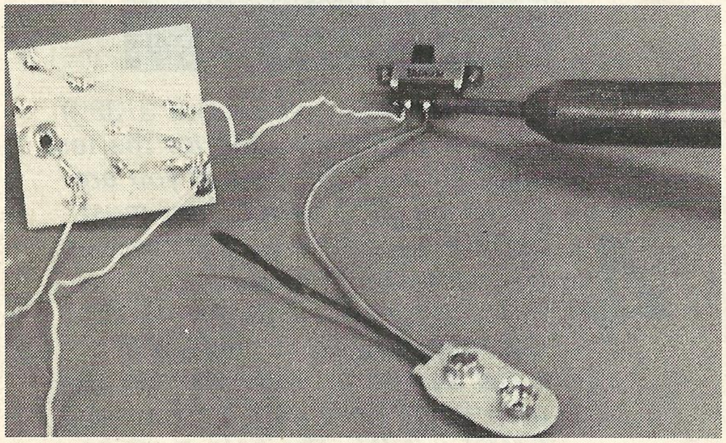
3 Position the speaker on top of the box as shown here, then draw a pencil line around the circumference. Next, drill several holes within the outline. These holes let the speaker's sound out of the box so you can readily hear it. Just a few random holes will suffice, or you can drill a professional-looking pattern. But remember, if you drill a bunch of holes, drill slowly and with light pressure because the case is made of plastic.



5 Once the case is drilled, cut three pieces of wire, each about three inches long. This photo shows the back side of the code practice module. Note that the terminals are marked A, B, and C and correspond to the diagram. Carefully solder one of these wires to each of the terminals as shown. If the soldering iron is good and hot, all it takes is a touch of the tip to solder the wires and this results in less heat transfer to the other components.

If you cannot find a ready-made oscillator module, use this schematic diagram and build one from scratch. I have included the Radio Shack part numbers for the necessary items, but if you purchase them individually, they run about half-again as much as the assembled module. Be sure to "heat sink" the components during the soldering procedure to prevent thermal damage. A printed circuit board is not mandatory; a section of perfboard makes an ideal base for mounting the components.

7

Solder the wire from the A terminal on the module to one side of the switch. Next, solder the red wire from the battery snap to the other switch terminal as shown here. Caution: It is very important to have the red wire from the battery snap connected to the switch. This

9

The nice part about making this unit is that all the soldering is done outside of the box. Install the switch in the box and push the terminal wire through the hole drilled for it. Install the batteries in their holder, making sure the bottoms are toward the springs. Push the speaker down into position; it's a tight fit, so it should remain in place. Now, if you slip the battery case in the position shown here, the speaker will hold the battery case in place and vice-versa.

10

snap connected to the switch. This insures the correct polarity as shown in the wiring diagram.

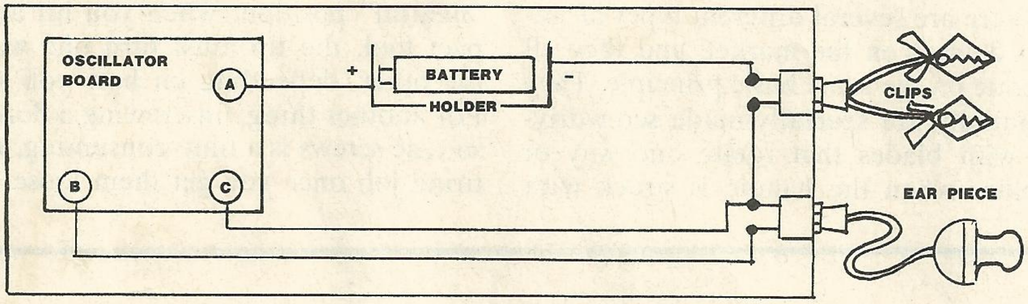
Following the wiring diagram, connect the B wire from the module to one side of the speaker. Take the test lead wires and solder one of them to the C wire from the module. Now, solder them to the other side of the speaker as shown. Attach the other test lead wire to the black lead from the battery snap and solder; cover this junction with a small piece of electrical tape. The knots tied in the test lead wires prevent them from being pulled out of the case.



Although the components could just be stuffed in the box, they shouldn't be allowed to bounce around. You can prevent them from moving by inserting a small piece of foam rubber between the module and the battery case and gluing another piece to the case cover. A ¾-inch piece of styrofoam over the speaker, as shown, holds it in place. Solder the alligator clips on the test lead ends, put the cover on the box, and you have a buzz-box for less than $7. To operate: connect one clip to the contact points and the other clip to ground. When the points open or close, the tone changes.

11

There are alternative ways to build one of these units as long as the oscillator is wired into the system. The unit on the left uses an ear plug and phone jack instead of a speaker and a switch; the alligator clips connect to the phone jack wires. The phone jack acts like a switch; when it's unplugged, the unit is off. But the amount you save on the speaker and switch is about the same you will spend for the ear plug and phone jack, so this one is priced about the same as the previous one.

12

Here is the wiring diagram for the ear plug/phone jack unit. This unit is handy to use when outside sounds prevent you from hearing the speaker.

The unit on the right in picture #11 is an economy model; one that

14

It's even cheaper to convert an old transistor radio into a buzz-box since it already has a speaker, an on-off switch and a battery snap.

#11 is an economy model, one that costs about $4. There is no switch and the wires are soldered directly to the battery. Without a switch or phone jack, you cannot let the alligator clips touch one another when the unit isn't in use because the battery will run down. This is the schematic for the low-cost unit.

on-off switch and a battery snap. The ear-piece plug assembly can be converted to accommodate the alligator clips by cutting off the ear piece and installing the clips. If you want, you can even drill a hole in the module board and mount it in the case where the radio board was mounted.

This diagram shows how to convert a transistor radio for use with the module to make a buzz-box. I found that not all transistor radio speakers work, so if yours doesn't, replace it with a 2¼-inch speaker (Radio Shack Part No. 40-246). Whichever buzz-box you choose to build, it will save you a considerable sum of money. CG

CODE OSCILLATOR MODULE

Catalog Number 20–1155

INTRODUCTION

This Printed Circuit Board contains two transistors, two resistors and one capacitor which together form an oscillator circuit. You'll also need a small speaker, telegraph key and battery (all available at your Radio Shack store). After you have connected the parts according to these instructions, you'll be able to practice sending messages in Morse Code.

HOOKUP AND OPERATING INSTRUCTIONS

- ☐ Connect the Telegraph Key to the solder pads marked "KEY".
- ☐ Connect the Speaker leads to the solder pads marked "SPKR".
- ☐ Connect the Battery leads to the solder pads marked "+" and "–". (Battery may be 1-1/2 to 9 volts.)

CAUTION

Observe correct battery polarity (plus to +; minus to –) to avoid transistor damage.

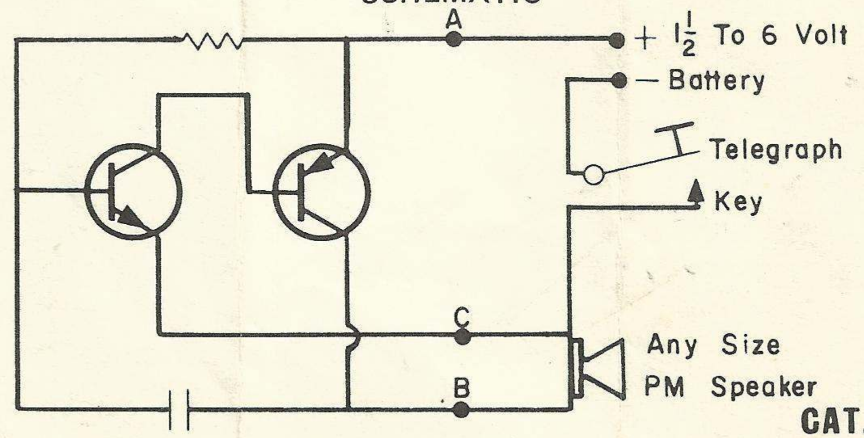
- ☐ To operate, press and release the Telegraph Key.



CUSTOM MFD IN U.S.A. BY RADIO SHACK A DIVISION OF TANDY CORPORATION, FT. WORTH, TEXAS 76102

OPERATIONAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. ( ) Connect lead A to the positive (+) battery connection.
2. ( ) Connect lead B to a speaker terminal (either one).
3. ( ) Connect lead C to the other speaker terminal. Then connect a lead from this speaker terminal to one terminal of a telegraph key.
4. ( ) Connect a lead from the other telegraph key terminal to the negative (-) of the battery.
5. ( ) Press key for operation. Maximum efficiency is obtained by using 3 volts (two 1½ volt batteries in series). You can increase the volume by using a higher voltage battery up to 6 volts.

WARNING: OBSERVE BATTERY POLARITY TO AVOID TRANSISTOR DAMAGE

REMOVAL

1. Unlock and open seat.
2. See Figure 2-105. Remove seat tether (2) from the hole in frame.
3. Pry hinge clip (1) from seat hinge pins. Slide seat rearward to release hinge pins from bushings on frame.
4. See Figure 2-106. Remove pillion mounting bolt and washer (5). Save bolt and washer for reinstallation. Slide grabstrap (2) forward off pillion.
5. Push pillion forward to release slot on the bottom of pillion from tongue on fender. Lift pillion back and away from motorcycle.
6. If necessary, remove grabstrap.

1. Hinge clip
2. Seat tether

CLEANING AND INSPECTION

1. Inspect all components for wear or damage.
2. Clean underside of pillion and seat. Clean fender and frame mounting surfaces.

NOTE

Do not use ordinary soap to clean the seat. Thoroughly clean with a quality saddle soap. Once the seat is dry, it can be treated with HARLEY-DAVIDSON LEATHER CARE DRESSING (Part No. 98261-91V).

INSTALLATION

1. If necessary, install grabstrap. Tighten to 11-17 Nm (97-150 in-lbs).
2. Push pillion toward front of motorcycle until mounting hole in base is approximately 25 mm (1 inch) in front of mounting hole in frame.
3. While applying downward pressure on middle of pillion, slide pillion rearward to fully engage slot on bottom with tongue on top of fender. Push rearward until mounting hole on pillion base is aligned with mounting hole in frame.
4. Install pillion base to frame.Tighten fastener to 11-17 Nm (97-150 in-lbs).
5. Install seat. Make sure both seat pins engage their bushings on the frame.
6. Press clip over seat hinge.
7. Install seat tether to hole in frame.

⚠WARNING

When closing the seat, make sure the ignition switch is in the FUEL position. If the ignition switch is in any other position when the seat is closed, the seat latch mechanism could be damaged.

8. Turn ignition switch to FUEL and close seat. Then turn ignition switch to LOCK.

⚠WARNING

After installing and locking seat, pull upward on the latch side of the seat to be sure it is locked in position. If seat is loose, it could shift position during vehicle operation resulting in loss of control of the vehicle and death or serious injury.

Seat Latches

This chapter covers body components including the seat, fenders, footrests, forward controls, sidestand and fork lock.

Fuel tank removal is covered in Chapter Ten or Chapter Eleven.

Table 1 is at the end of this chapter.

SEAT

Removal/Installation

1. Remove the seat retaining bolt (Figure 1).
2. Move the seat towards the rear of the motorcycle so the seat disengages from the frame tab.

NOTE
On 1997-2003 models, account for the nylon retaining clip that retains the seat bolt nut in the fender.

3. Reverse the removal steps to install the seat. Be sure the seat is secure before operating the motorcycle.

FRONT FENDER

Refer to Figure 2.
1. Hold the front fender so it cannot fall after removal of the mounting bolts.
2. Remove the locknuts and bolts on both sides of the fender.
3. Remove the front fender.

REMOVAL/INSTALLATION

Seat Strap

Seat strap installation depends upon model being serviced. Install bolt in appropriate hole according to Figure 2-158.

Seat

⚠WARNING

After installing seat, pull upward on front of seat to be sure it is in locked position. While riding, a loose seat can shift causing loss of control, which could result in death or serious injury. (00070a)

See Figure 2-159. Seat (2) attaches with two fasteners (1) through the sissy bar. When installing seat, insert tang at front of seat into the channel in the frame and install rear fasteners through sissy bar. Tighten fasteners to 60-80 in-lbs (6.8-9.0 Nm).

Thread Information

If you think that threads are just wrinkles on a bolt, invest a couple minutes and read on.

It is a fact that we are the largest tap and die supplier in the motor-cycle industry. Sets or open stock, we have it.

American Threads

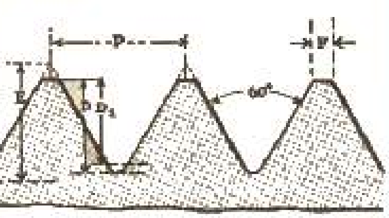
THE AMERICANS USE THE U.S.S. OR NATIONAL COARSE AND THE S.A.E. OR NATIONAL FINE AS THE BASIC THREAD PATTERNS. IT USES A 60 DEGREE IN-CLUDED ANGLE WITH THE TOPS AND BOTTOMS FLAT.



AMERICAN NATIONAL THREAD
Depth D = 0.6495 x pitch
Width of flat F = 0.125 x pitch
Angle = 60 degrees in plane of axis

Metric Threads DIN ISO JIS

THE FRENCH, GERMANS, ITALIANS, JAPANESE ETC. USE BASICALLY THE IN-TERNATIONAL STD. METRIC THREAD FORM WHICH ALSO USES A 60 DEGREE INCLUDED ANGLE, BUT THE DEPTH IS A LITTLE GREATER AND THE BOTTOM IS ROUNDED, WITH THE TOP FLAT, SIMILAR TO THE AMERICAN NATIONAL.

INTERNATIONAL STANDARD METRIC THREAD
Max. depth D = 0.7033 × pitch
Min. depth $D_1$ = 0.6855 × pitch
Root radius
Max. = 0.0883 × pitch
Min. = 0.054 × pitch
Angle = 60 deg. in plane of axis p = pitch
F = width of basic flat
E = pitch diameter

The Old British System

THE BRITISH HAVE FOUR SYSTEMS OF THREAD FORMS WHICH ARE ALL AVAILABLE AT FLANDERS COMPANY.

BSW

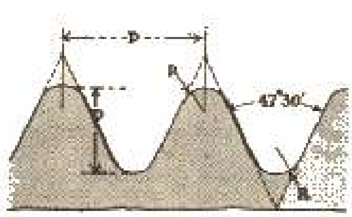
THE BRITISH STD. WHITWORTH THREAD FORM IS SIMILAR IN PITCH TO THE NATIONAL COARSE OR U.S.S. THREAD FORM. IT HAS A 55 DEGREE INCLUDED ANGLE WITH ROUNDED TOPS AND BOTTOMS.



BRITISH STANDARD WHITWORTH THREAD
Depth D = 0.6403 x pitch
Radius R at crest and root = 0.137329 x pitch
Angle = 55 degrees in plane of axis

BSF

THE BRITISH STD. FINE THREAD FORM IS SIMILAR IN PITCH TO OUR NATIONAL FINE OR S.A.E. THREAD FORM BUT LIKE THE B.S.W. IT USES A 55 DEGREE INCLUDED ANGLE WITH ROUNDED TOPS AND BOTTOMS.

BA

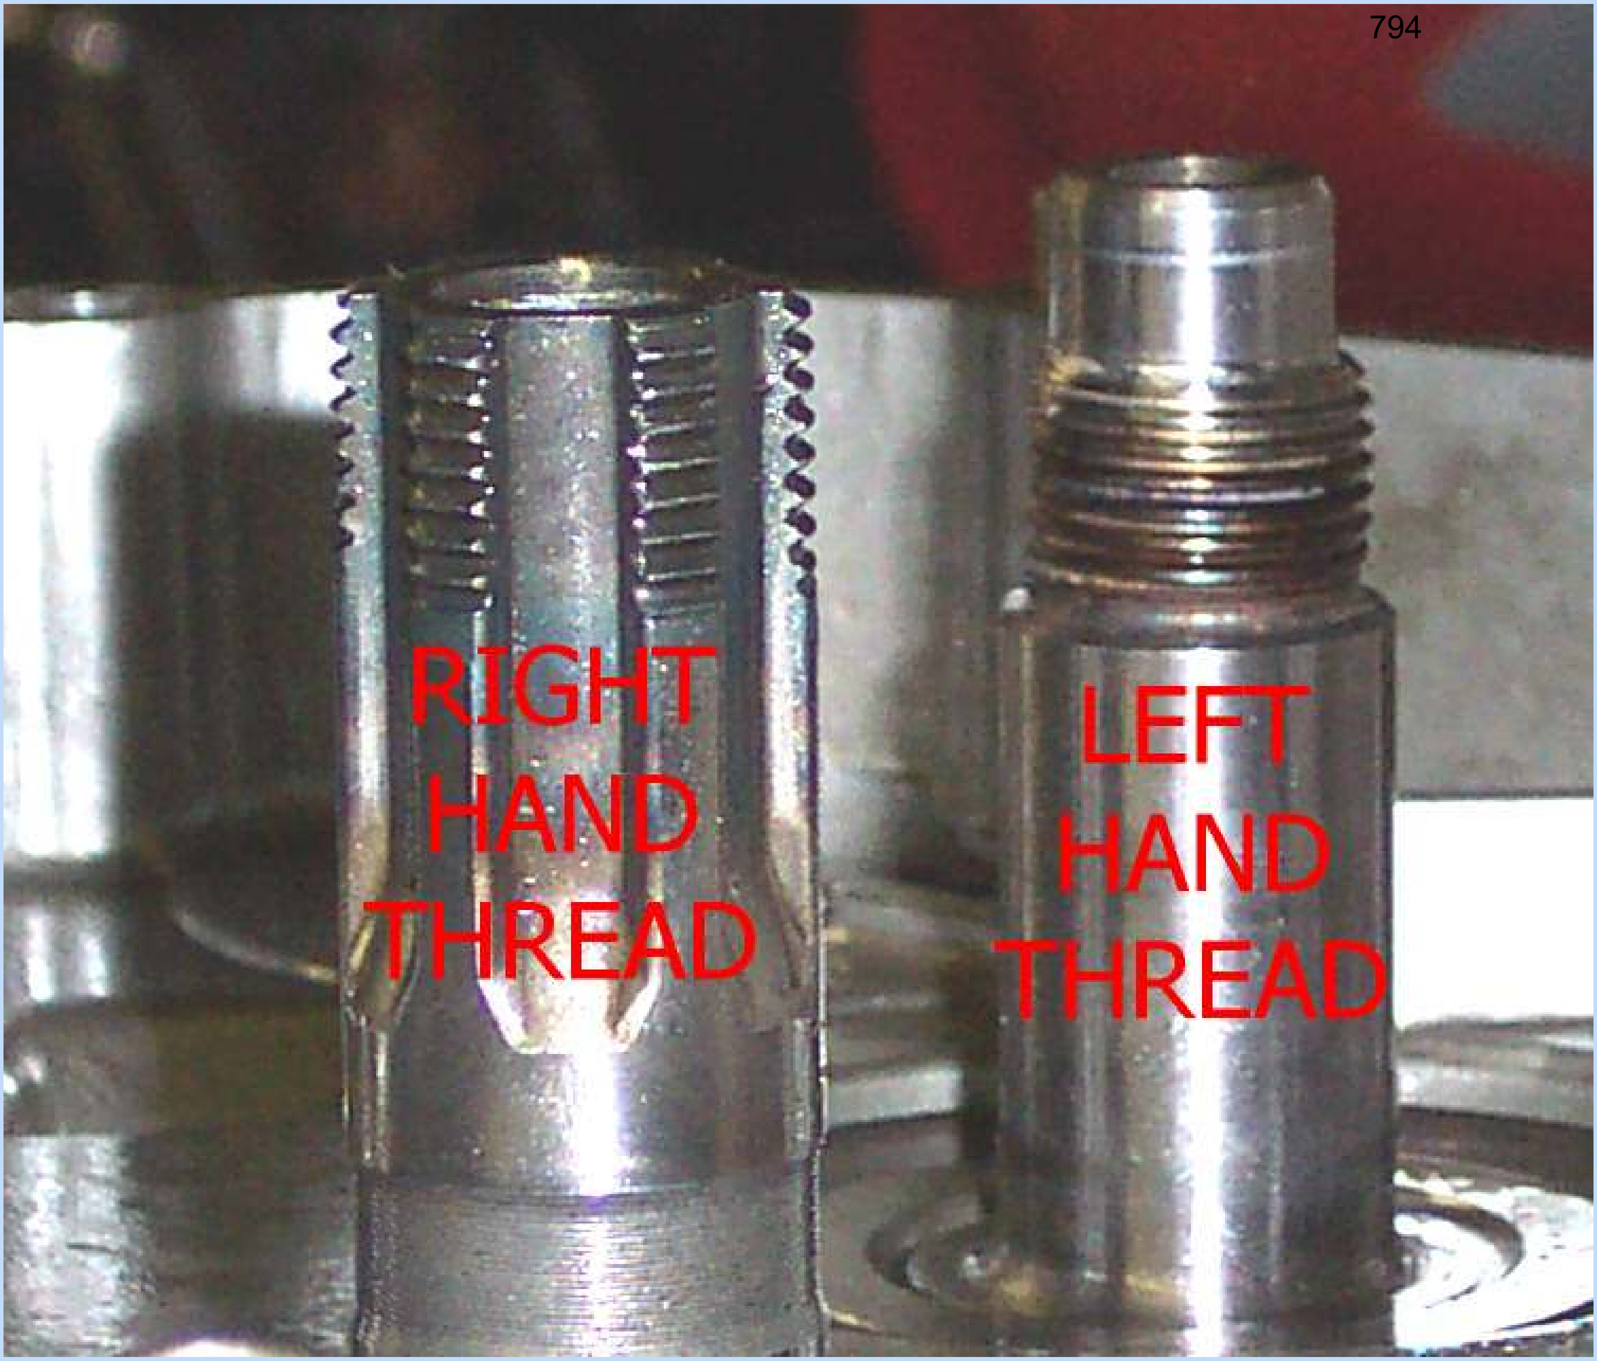
THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION THREAD FORM HAS ROUNDED TOPS AND BOTTOMS SIMILAR TO B.S.W. BUT USES AN IN-CLUDED ANGLE OF 40 DEGREES 30'. IT IS USED FOR SCREWS 1/4" DIAMETER AND LESS, AND IS BASED UPON METRIC PITCH AND DIAMETER MEASUREMENTS.



BRITISH ASSOCIATION THREAD
Depth D = 0.6 x pitch
Radius R at crest and root = 2 x pitch ÷ 11
Angle = 47½ degrees in plane of axis

CEI

THE CYCLE ENGINEERS INSTITUTE THREAD FORM IS USED ON MOTORCYCLES AND BICYCLES TO AVOID VIBRATION FORCES. IT HAS A FINE PITCH AND HAS A 60 DEGREE INCLUDED ANGLE THAT IS SIMILAR TO THE AMERICANS WITH ROUNDED TOPS AND BOTTOMS.

IT HAS A FINE PITCH AND HAS A 60 DEGREE INCLUDED ANGLE THAT IS SIMILAR TO THE AMERICANS WITH ROUNDED TOPS AND BOTTOMS.

Helpful Hints For Twisting Your Wire

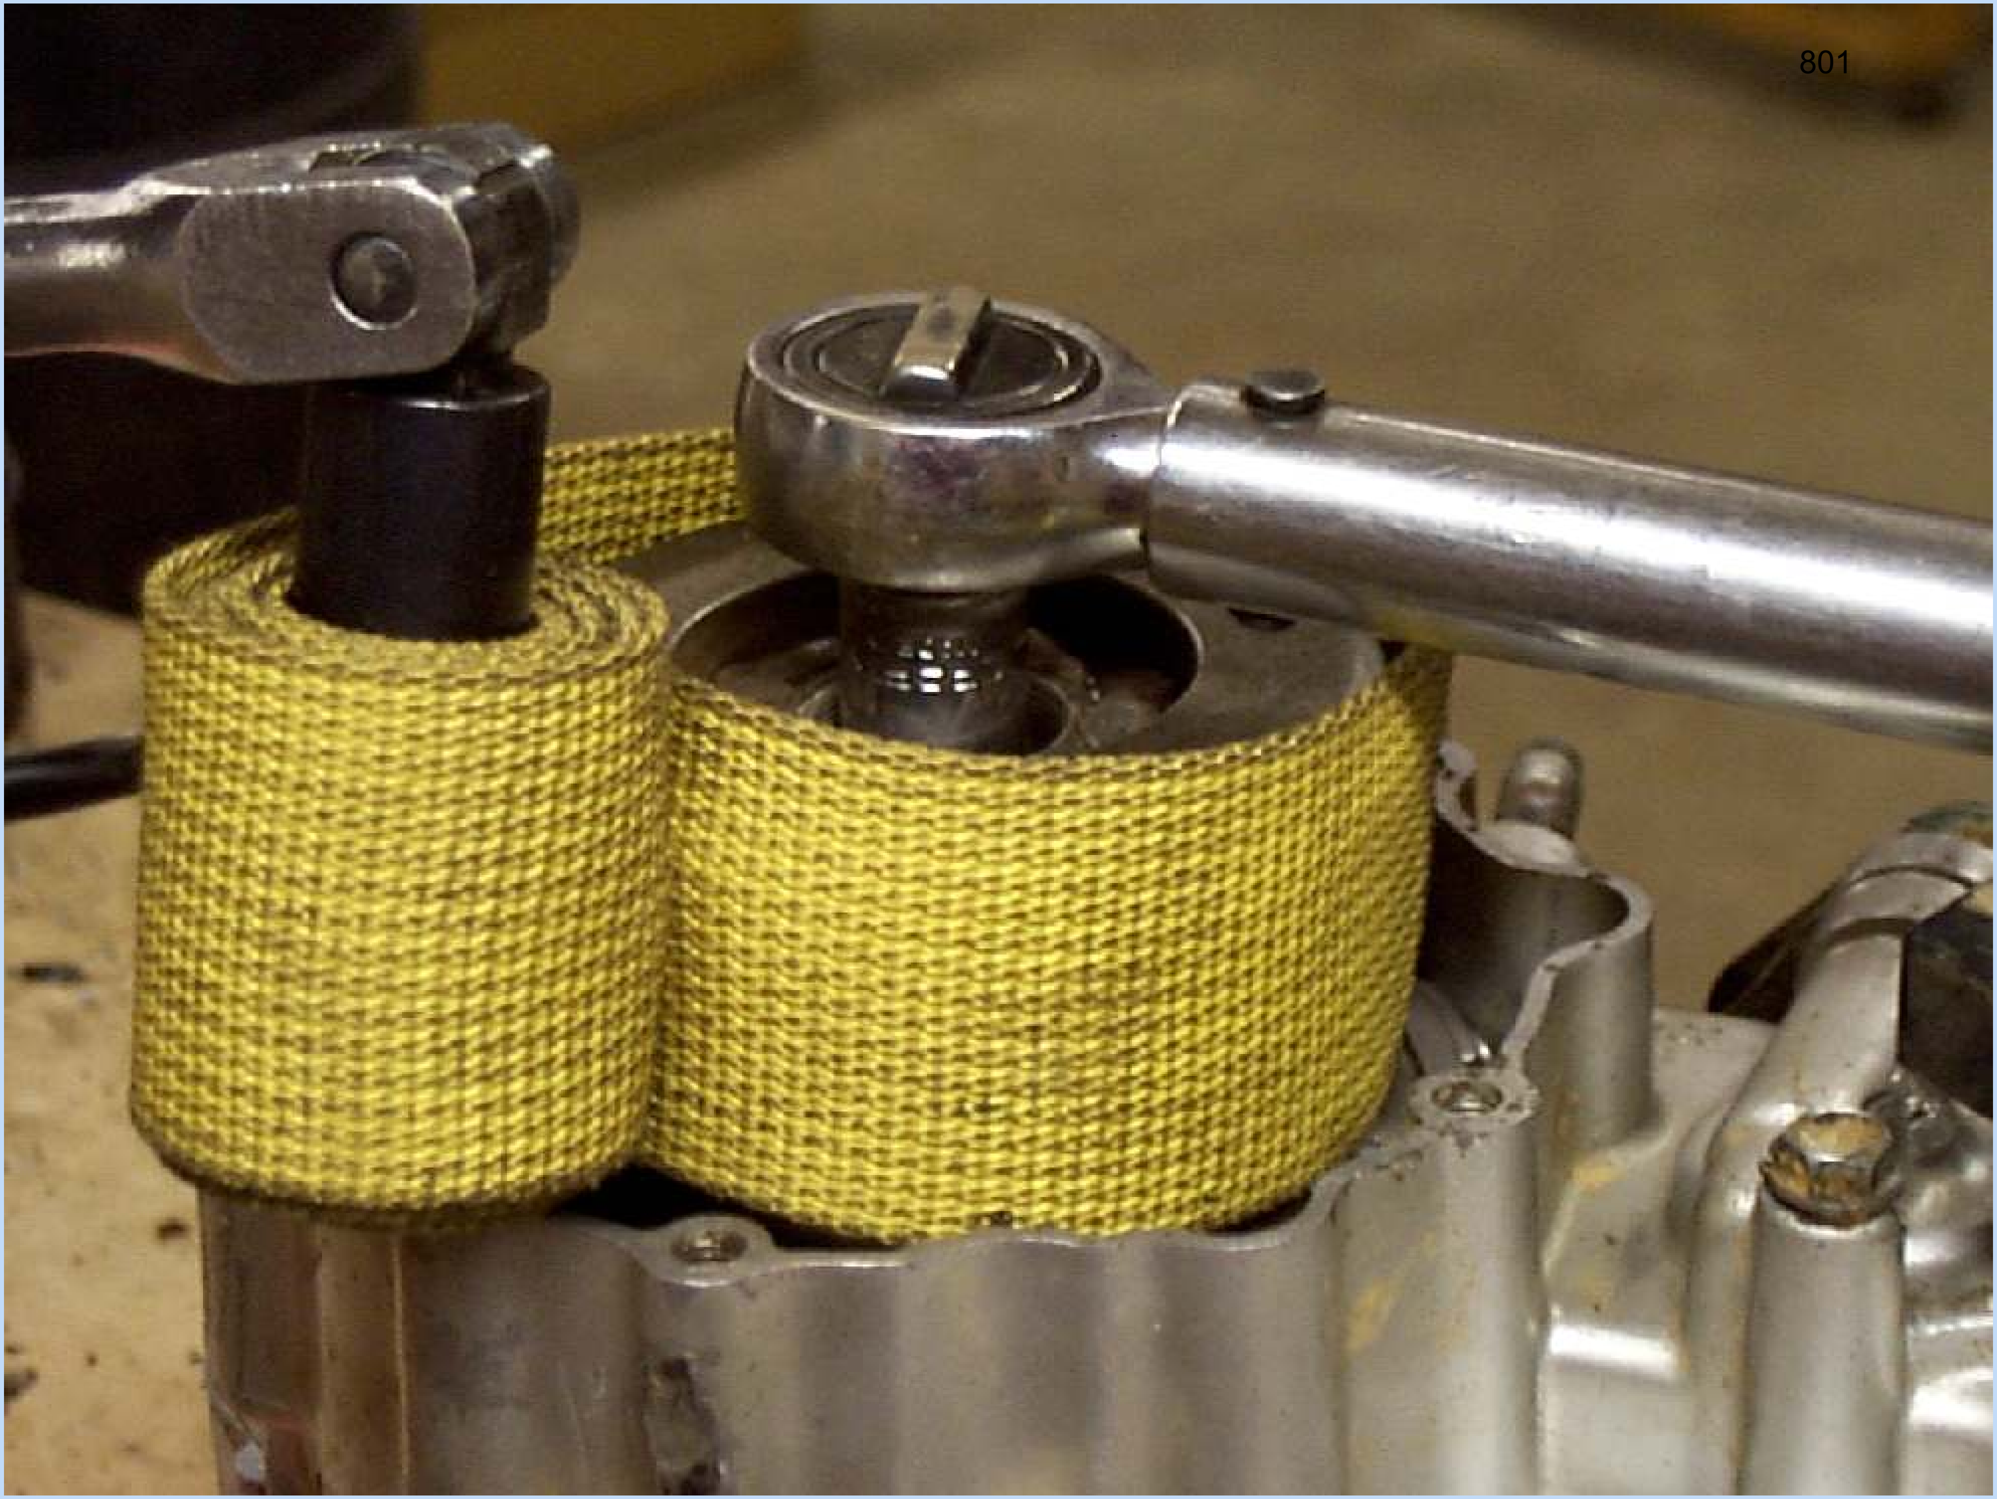
Lockwire should be installed only one at a time. If the wire is removed, for any reason, it should be destroyed. Kinks and sharp bends should not be made in lockwire.



Note: All illustrations are for right-hand thread;
Reverse procedure for left-hand thread.
Lockwire must pass over the head of the bolt, but can pass over or around the head of screws.

Lockwire should be as short as possible, attached in the most direct way using the two (2) wire only and installed so the lockwire tends to tighten the bolt or nut. The ends of the wire should have a minumum of three (3) turns.

500-c.c. Gearboxes

The 500-c.c. machines are fitted with the Burman BAP gearbox, with the exception of the Grey Flash, which features the Albion component for which a wide choice of internal ratios is available. This gearbox is lubricated with engine oil.

The Burman gearbox can be lubricated with oil, grease or a mixture of both, but experience shows that a fifty-fifty mixture of engine oil and light grease gives the best all-round results. If grease only is used, the recommended quantity to be packed into the box before the end-cover is fitted is 1¾ lb. (0·8 kg.). Gearboxes lubricated in this manner are known to have developed a screeching noise which can easily be cured by the addition of ½ pint (¼ litre) engine oil.

Mixture Enrichener - Thermowax Type (Automatic)

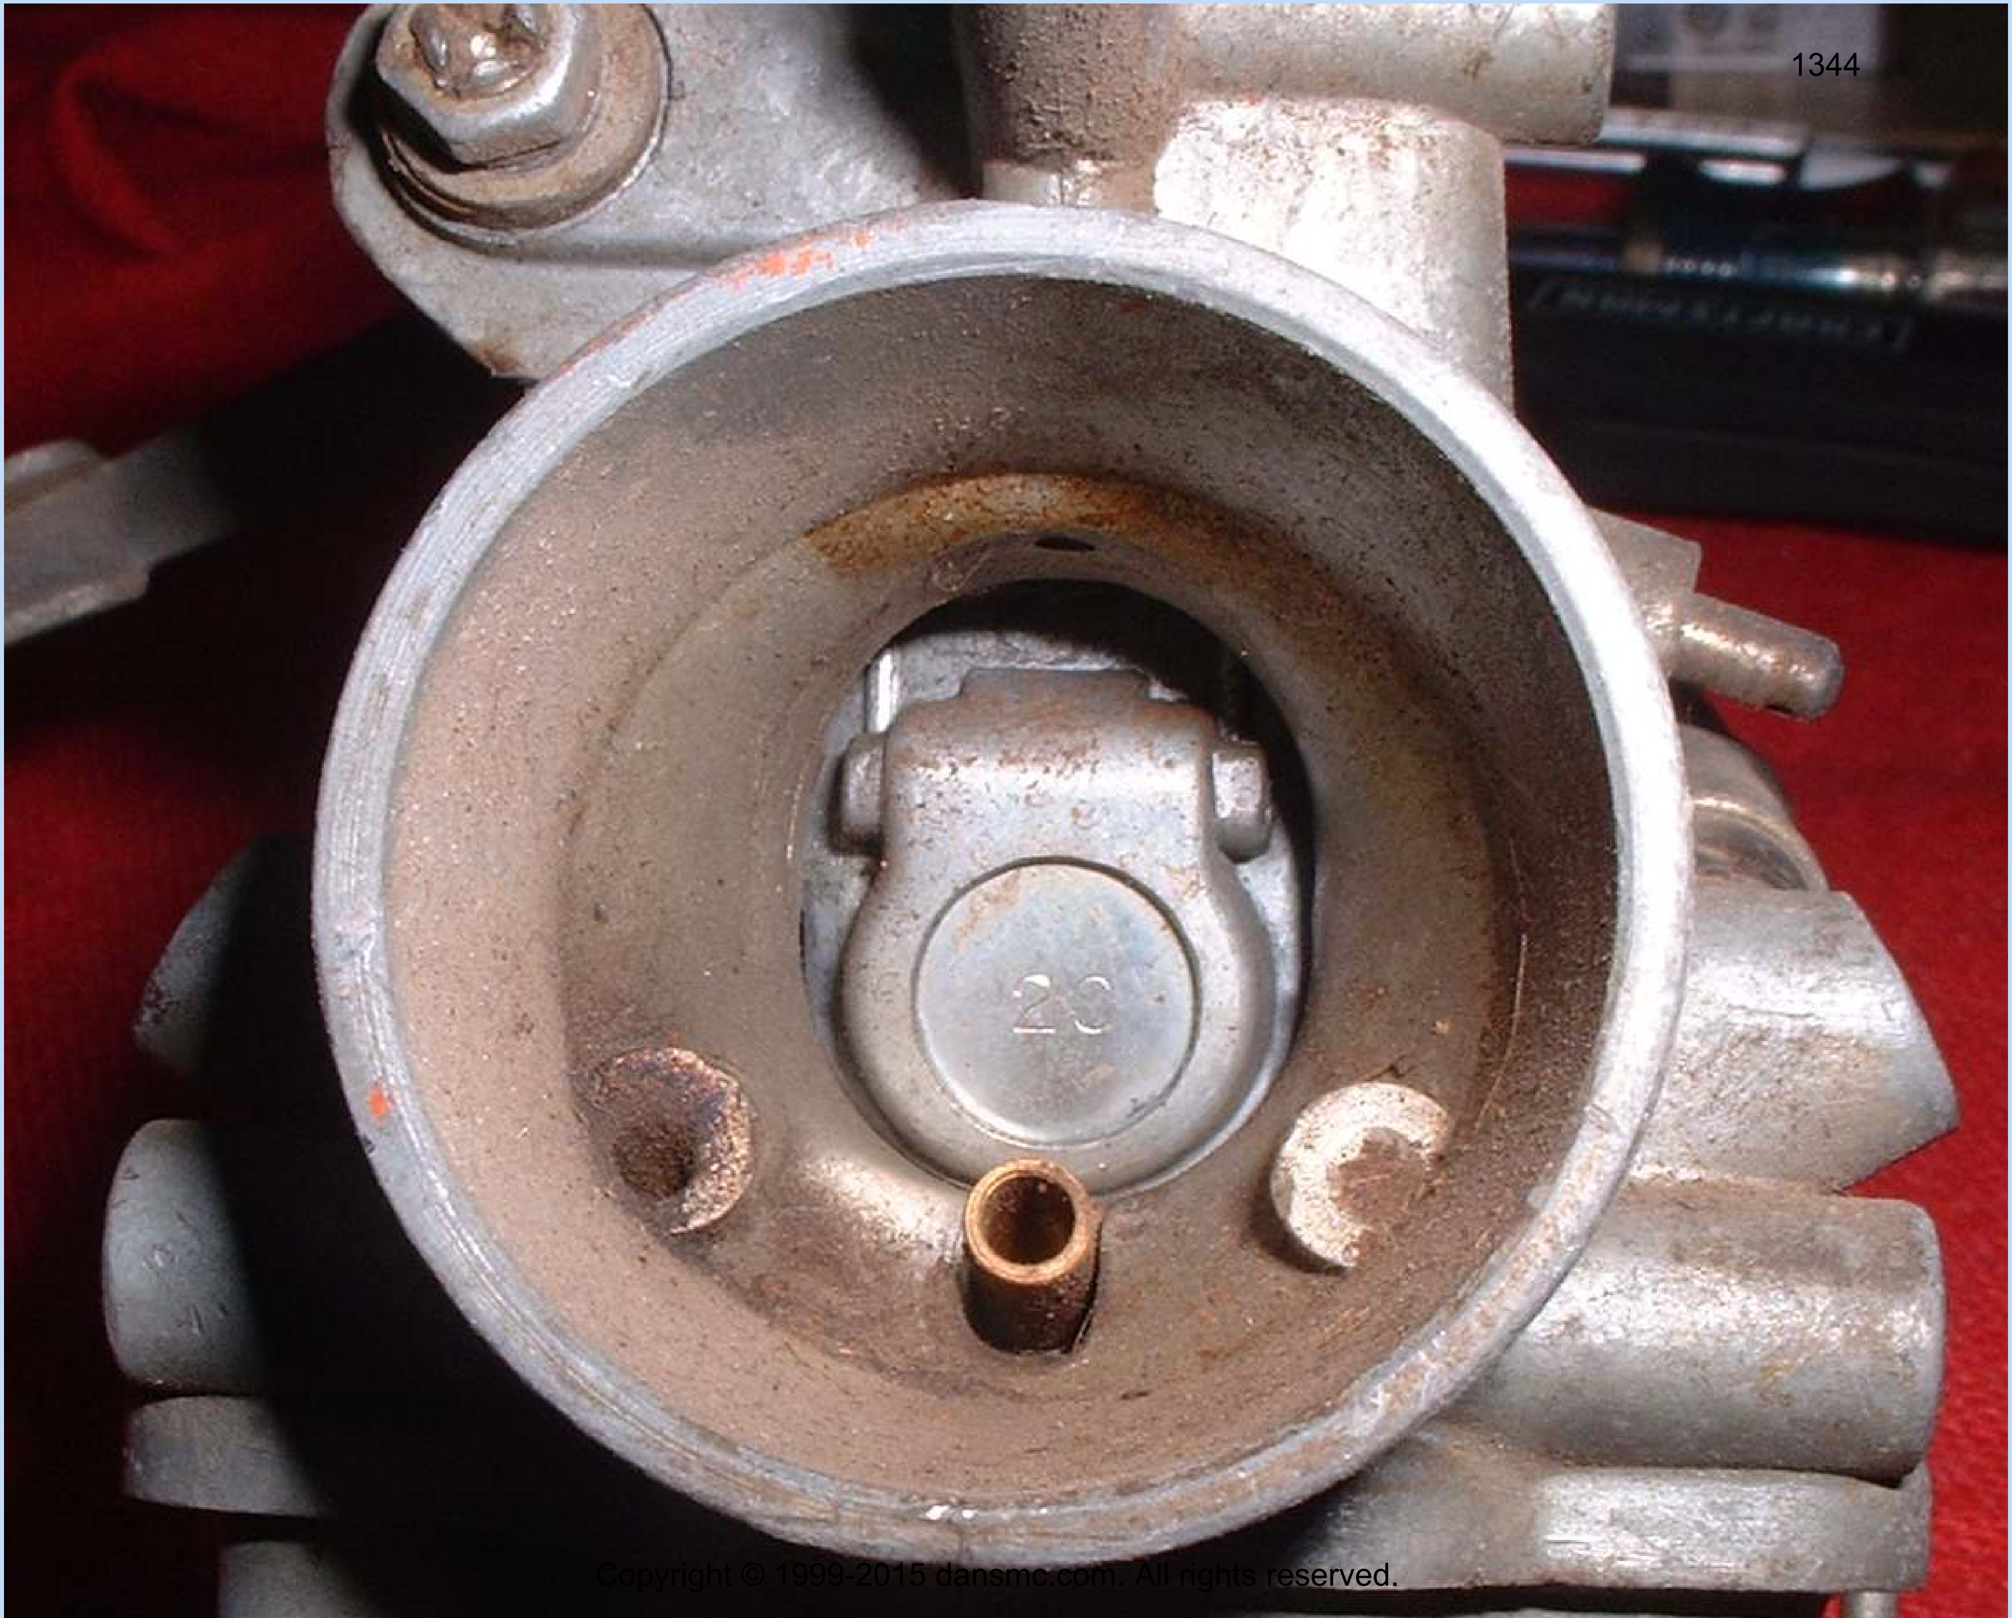
The thermowax valve is a plunger or needle valve that retracts when cold or when no current is flowing (i.e. such as when the ignition key is in the off position). When the ignition key is switched on, or when the engine is running, current flows to the thermowax valve and heats up wax inside of the valve. The heated wax expands. As the wax expands it causes the valve to extend and slowly close the metering jet.



Operates Electrically

Mixture Enrichener - Bimetal Type (Automatic)

The bimetal strip deflects when the engine is cold to allow the enrichener passage to be open. As the engine heats up, the bimetal strip deflects in the opposite direction and slowly closes the enrichener passage, thereby canceling the enrichening effect.

Standard Model Starting Circuit

HDC Operating Functions

1 Fuel Inlet: Fuel drawn from Tank.

2 Surge Chamber: Dampens Fuel Flow.

3 Inlet Valve: Opens on demand from Fuel Pump.

4 Fuel Pump: Responds to engine impulse force.

5 Outlet Check Valve: Forced open by pump pressure.

6 Filter Screen: Filters fuel.

7 Engine Impulse: Actuates Fuel Pump Diaphragm #4.

8 Throttle Valve: Regulates engine speed as it exposes Primary, Second and Third Idle holes, then Nozzle for fuel delivery.

9 Third Idle Hole: Increases fuel flow at Part Throttle.

10 Second Idle Hole: Allows additional fuel flow on acceleration.

11 Primary Idle Hole: Only fuel source to engine at Idle position.

12 Idle Needle: Adjust for fuel richness to 3 Idle holes.

13 Inlet Needle Valve: Lifts off seat to allow fuel entry.

14 Metering Lever: Lifts Inlet Needle off seat.

15 Metering Lever Spring: Transmits force to Metering lever.

16 Atmospheric Vent: Allows air pressure against Metering Diaphragm.

17 Metering Diaphragm: Drawn up by vacuum to activate Metering Lever.

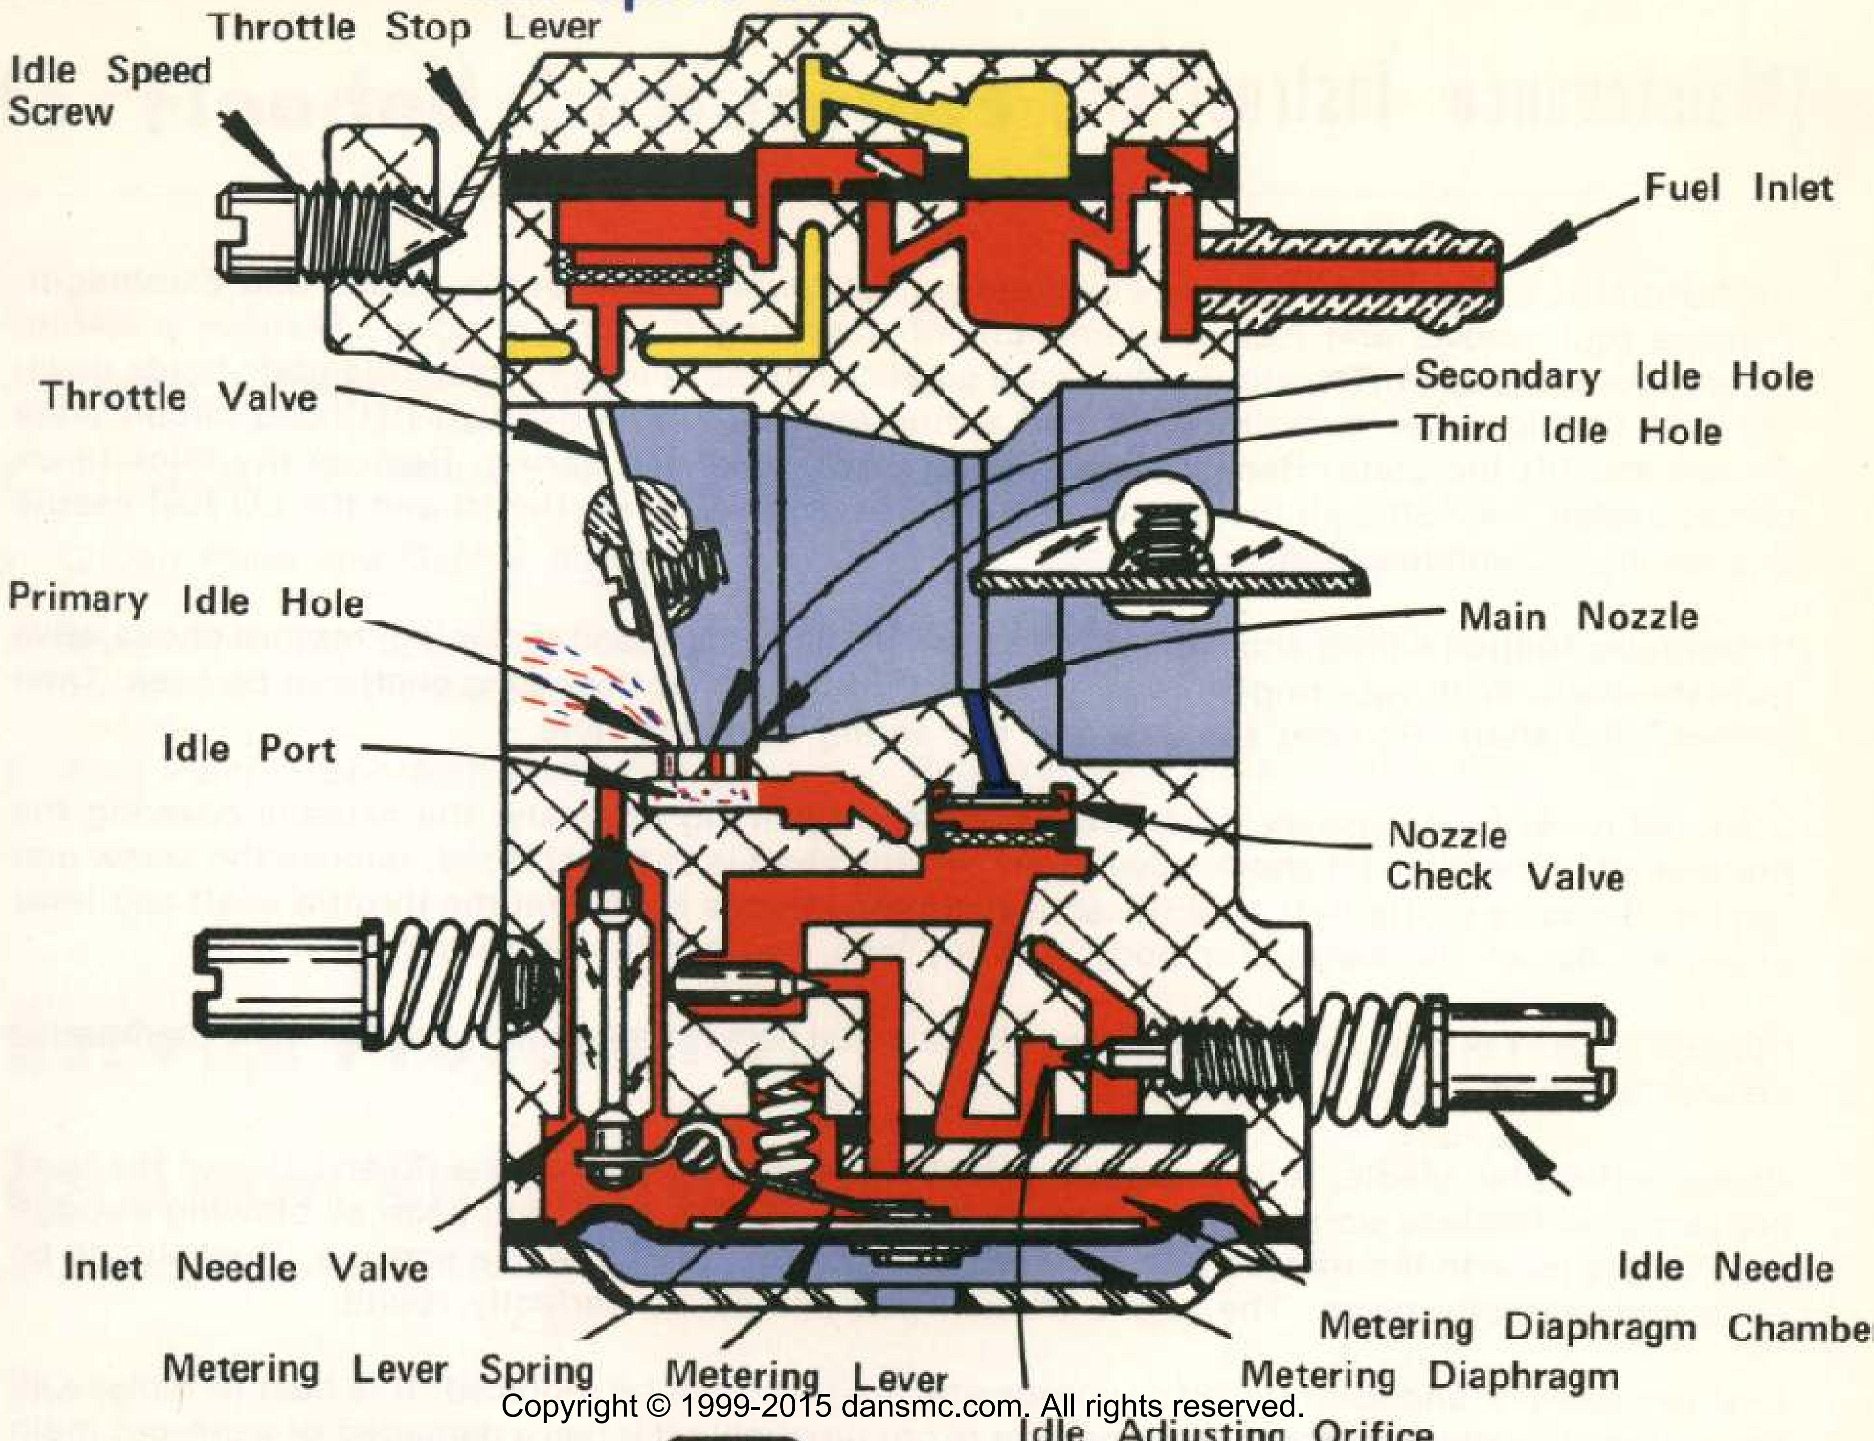
18 Metering Chamber: Fuel reservoir, feeds to idle and nozzle holes.

19 Hi Speed Needle: Adjust for fuel richness at high speeds.

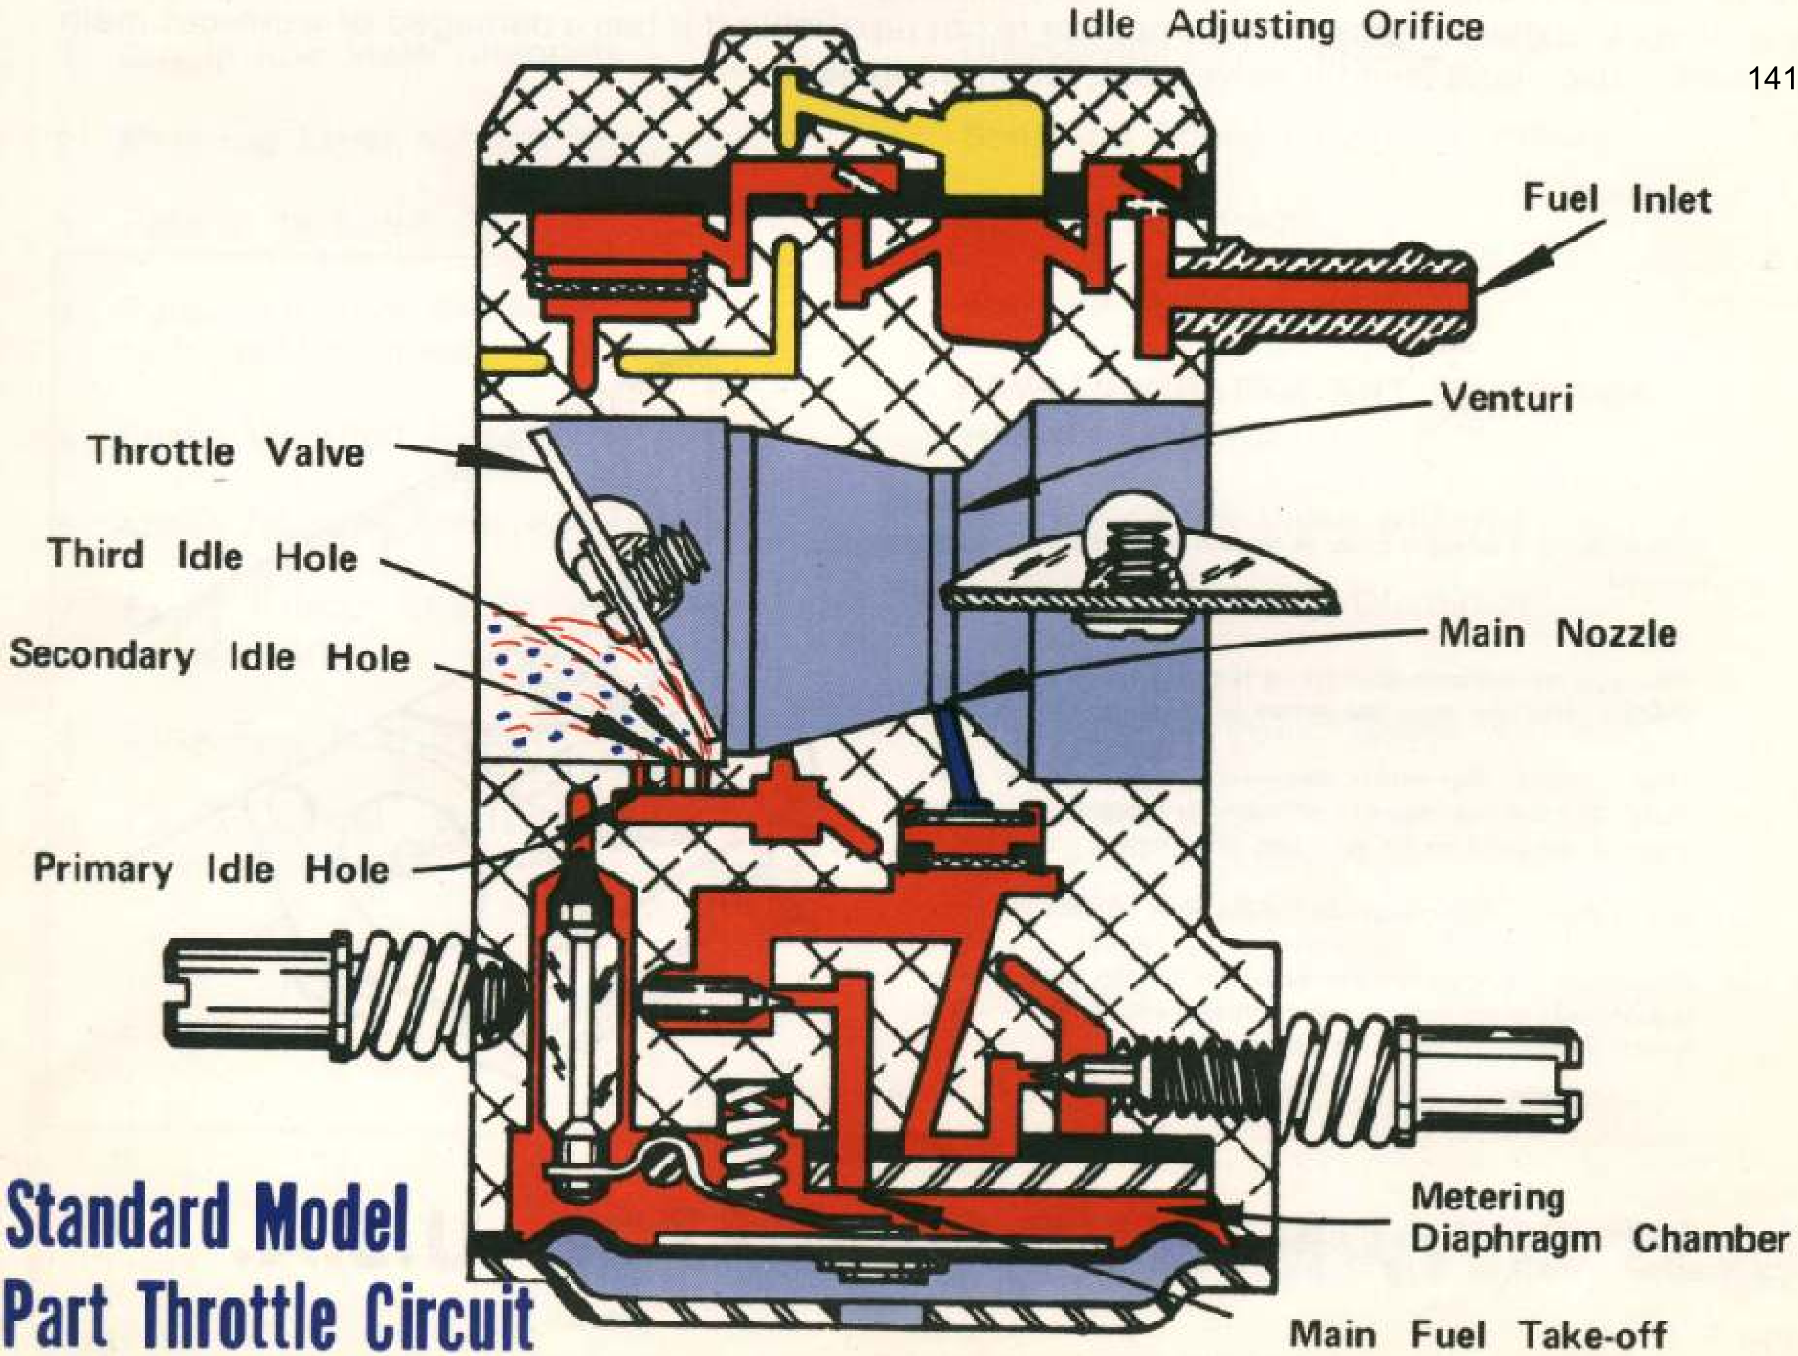
20 Nozzle Well: Fuel is drawn in from Metering Chamber at high speed.

21 Idle Take-off: Fuel entry for Idle and Part Throttle holes.

22 Nozzle Check Valve: Engine vacuum draws valve open.



23 Idle Port: Fuel reservoir for Idle and Part Throttle holes.



24 Nozzle: Increases fuel discharge for high speeds.

25 Venturi: Increases air velocity at Nozzle, creating a suction to draw fuel into Throttle Bore passage to engine intake.

26 Choke Valve: Closes air passage at starting position.

Trouble Shooting Guide

1. Fuel Source - In-tank filters, lines, fittings — check for leaks or obstructions, venting and air filter.
2. Choke and Throttle - Check mechanical linkage and cables - Look for ice, kinks, etc.
3. Adjustments - Idle and Main needles, 1 turn off seat - Tune from rich side by 1/8 turn, gradually.
4. Ignition - Spark plugs - Change if back-fire or preignition - when timed correctly, white plugs mean fuel is too lean, black - too rich, chocolate brown = normal.
5. Fuel Mixture - Use 16 to 1 or as recommended by engine manufacturer.
6. Tighten all screws on the carburetor - tighten all mounting bolts - check for cracks or leaks at flanges and manifolds.

TIGHTEN ALL SCREWS

COLOR GUIDE

NEEDLE SETTINGS

The power and idle needles control the lubrication received by the engine. Adjustments should be done carefully. Start by turning the needles all the way in (do not force them). Set Power (high speed) needle one (1) turn open and the idle (low speed) needle one (1) turn open. This puts both slightly on the rich side and leaner adjustments can be made as needed. (Too lean an adjustment can cause improper lubrication).

(Maintenance Instructions)

DISASSEMBLY: Remove the large cover screw, fuel pump cover, pump gasket and diaphragm. Remove four screws and lock washers. Lift off metering diaphragm cover. Remove metering diaphragm and gasket. The circuit plate with positioning tab is now visible. This plate holds down the inlet needle valve, metering lever and spring assembly. Remove two flat head circuit plate screws and lift the plate. Remove inlet needle valve, lever and spring. Remove the thick black circuit gasket, exposing all fuel passages and idle ports. Unscrew the HI and the LO fuel needle and spring assemblies.

If the choke friction spring and ball, or the choke shaft or valve need replacing, remove choke valve from the shaft. With your finger, cover the hole through which the choke shaft can be seen. Then pull out the shaft. Remove the ball and the spring from the hole.

It should never be necessary to remove the screen-retaining rings and the screens covering the limiting jet or the main jet check valve. If the throttle shaft is to be replaced, remove the screw and the throttle valve (butterfly); also the screw and the throttle stop. Pull the throttle shaft and lever assembly out of the carburetor body. Do not lose the throttle-return spring.

INSPECTION: For best results, first soak all the metal parts in a regular solvent, not a "carburetor cleaner solution.

Examine the inlet needle, lever and spring, looking for needle wear at the tip and also at the lever contact area. Replace worn parts. Make sure the limiting jet is clean and open by blowing through the limiting jet with the throttle in open position. Examine the three fine screens. They should be open and perfectly clean. The choke friction ball should be perfectly round.

Cracked gaskets, and torn, frayed or porous diaphragms must be replaced. It is best to replace all the gaskets and diaphragms. The carburetor is not repairable if it has a damaged or worn-out main the gaskets and diaphragms. The carburetor is not repairable if it has a damaged or worn-out main jet check valve, inlet needle valve seat, or limiting jet.

ADJUSTING THE METERING LEVER

With metering diaphragm cover (4 screws) and metering diaphragm removed:

1. Make sure the metering lever spring is seated in its hole in the chamber floor and under the dimple in the metering lever.
2. Place a straight-edge across carburetor body casting, as illustrated. Metering lever should just touch the straight edge. Slight pressure will bend needle valve end up or down.
3. Gasket must be assembled next to the body as shown.
4. Special care should be taken to make sure that the metering lever is assembled to the hook on the diaphragm and the inlet valve to prevent malfunctioning of the carburetor.

Heat Sealed Case to Cover protects against seepage and corrosion – bonded unit gives extra strength.
Thru-Partition Construction provides shorter current path with less resistance than "over the partition" construction – you get more cranking power when you need it.
Patented Sealed Post prevents acid seepage, reduces corrosion – extends battery life.
YUAS
Y50-N18L-A Special Active Material is compounded to withstand vibration, prolong battery life and dependability.
Special Grid Design
withstands severe vibration, assures maximum conductivity.
Polypropylene Cover and Container assures reserve electrolyte capacity for cooler operating temperatures; gives greater resistance to gas and oil – and impact in extreme weather conditions!
Heavy Duty Glass Mat resists shredding of active material even under severe vibration.
Special Separator provides high cranking power.

STARTER DRIVE SHIMMING

This bulletin replaces M82-019A; please remove M82-019A from your files and destroy it

The starter drive assembly (front bracket assembly) on some affected units may slip during operation. To correct this problem, three shims must be placed in the starter drive as shown in the following procedures. Installation of these shims will increase starter torque and alleviate starter slipping.

AFFECTED MODELS

PROCEDURES

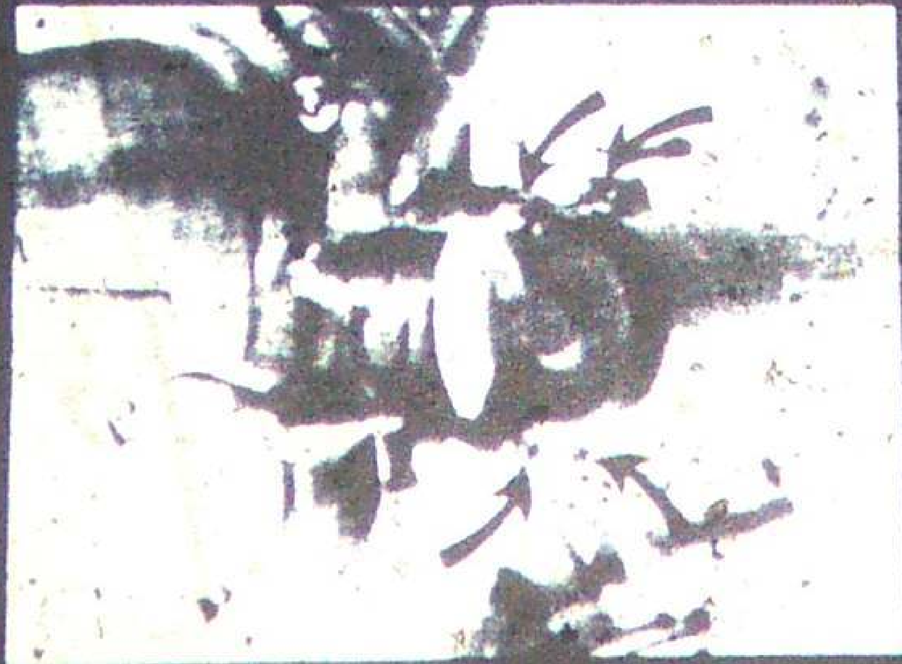
NOTE: Before beginning these procedures, check the battery and the charging system of each affected unit. A fully charged battery is necessary for proper starter operation.

1. Disconnect the solenoid cable from the starter.

2. Remove the two 6 x 25mm starter mounting bolts; see the arrows in the photo.



3. Remove the two long starter bolts; see the inside rim of the front bracket assembly, stays in place. The arrow in the photo shows the locating tab's position. This tab is critical for correct reassembly of the starter motor; use care that it is not misplaced.

6. Place three shims on the starter motor as shown in the photo. Coat each shim with a thin layer of grease to hold the shims in place during reassembly.

3. Remove the two long starter bolts; see the arrows in the photo.

4. Holding the starter motor by its center section, remove the starter motor from the front bracket assembly. Make sure the rear section containing the brushes stays in place.

5. As the starter motor is removed, be sure that the small locating tab, situated along the

7. Reinstall the starter motor onto the front bracket assembly, making sure that the shims stay in place. Align the notch on the outer edge of the starter motor with the locating tab for proper positioning.

8. Reinstall the long starter bolts; tighten them with an impact screwdriver.

VACUUM/PRESSURE TESTER ACCESSORY PART NO. 3800

Two cycle engine performance relies upon good engine sealing, especially in the crankcase where the primary compression of the fuel/air mixture takes place. A vacuum/pressure tester should be used to check an engine for leakage and pin-point any problem area before actual dissassembly work is begun. This not only saves valuable time, but eliminates guess work and unnecessary parts replacement.

Making both vacuum and pressure tests on an engine are easily done with this tester. It is important to remember that an engine may pass the vacuum test but fail the pressure test or vice versa. Therefore, both procedures must be followed for successful results.

Where to Check for Leaks

(1) Spark Plug — Threads & Gaskets

(2) Head Gasket — Warped or Cracked

(3) Cylinder Base Gasket — Defective Intake Gasket

(4) Cylinder — Porous Casting — (check all areas)

1) Remove exhaust pipe and carburetor.
2) Tester kit contains a hose adaptor which fits into the spark plug hole and a neoprene gasket with hose adaptor. Also included are a selection of rubber stoppers and neoprene gasket material for sealing purposes.
3) If tester is to be connected at spark plug, remove spark plug and fit adaptor. Turn engine so piston is at BDC. Plug both exhaust and inlet using rubber stoppers and/or neoprene gasket material.

NOTE: Plug exhaust on single cylinder models by removing exhaust pipe holder and fitting neoprene gasket material (cut to size with scissors) between holder and cylinder. Plug exhaust on three cylinder models by installing a rubber stopper in exhaust port and securing in place by attaching a bar across exhaust flange studs. Plug intake by fitting a rubber stopper into rubber carb holder and securing in place with clamp or by fitting neoprene gasket material (cut to size) between aluminum carb holder and cylinder.

4) If tester is to be connected at exhaust or inlet, leave spark plug in cylinder head and attach neoprene gasket with

(5) Cylinder Oil Line — Defective Line, Banjo Fitting or Bolt — (improperly installed parts and washers)

(6) Crankcase Gasket — Warped Cases or Sealant — (mating surfaces leaking).

(7) Outside Crankshaft — Defective Case & Seal Area (to incl. porous areas).

(8) Inside Crankcase — Defective Case and Seal Area (to incl. porous areas).

(9) Rotary Valve — Defective Parts, O-rings & Gaskets

(10) Slip Type Carb. Mount — Defective Fitting on Carburetor Mounts for Rotary Valve Engine

(11) Oil Line Check Valves — Not Sealing — (Loose union bolts and/or defective union bolt gaskets) One way valves allowing backflow.

plug in cylinder head and attach neoprene gasket with adaptor to either intake or exhaust. Use rubber stopper or neoprene gasket material at opposite port.

5) To check pressure, place pump hose on pump pressure outlet. With shut off valve open, pump pressure to 5-7 psi. (read pressure side of gauge). Turn shut off valve to the closed position and remove hand pump. Check all tester connections for leakage. After tester has been throughly checked, watch gauge for pressure drop. A pressure loss of more than 1 lb./min. indicates a leak. Determine location of leak by using a squeeze type sprayer containing soap and water solution and watching for bubbles.

6) To check vacuum, place pump hose on pump vacuum outlet. With shut off valve open, pump vacuum to 5-7 in Hg (read vacuum side of gauge). Turn shut off valve to the closed position and remove hand pump. Again, check all tester connections for leakage. After tester has been throughly checked, watch gauge for vacuum loss. A loss of more than 1 in. Hg/min. indicates a leak. To determine location of leak, squirt oil around possible leakage areas and watch for a decrease in the leakage rate.

7) After locating leak(s) make necessary repairs and recheck in same manner as outlined in steps 5 and 6.

Cassettes

¶ It has been pointed out to me that some of you younger folks, and to me anyone under sixty is a younger folk, may not know what a Cassette is. A Cassette is a unit of something - gears, tape, whatever - that slides inside some kind of holder or player.

BSA Cassette Gearbox

Mini Cassette

Back in the Days of Yore we had big, black, twelve inch diameter, CDs. We called them Records. Now-a-day those are just called Vinyl. Vinyl Records were what the real modern, hip people used instead of Reel to Reel tape. But Records were big and had to be played on big Record Players. We wanted to be cool and carry our vibes with us. Trouble was, our vibes had to go on Records or tape. They came out with small, portable, Reel to Reel recorders but you still had to thread and wind the tape on each tape. Not cool.

Reel to Reel

Vinyl Record

Portable Reel to Reel

So in comes Cassettes. First came Eight-Track Cassettes, which worked good in your car. Eight different songs and then it starts over. I liked my Eight track. However, we wanted more so in come regular sized Cassette Music Players. They were in all the cars and everywhere and then came CDs and that was that. Then MP3s did to CDs what CDs did to Cassette tapes.

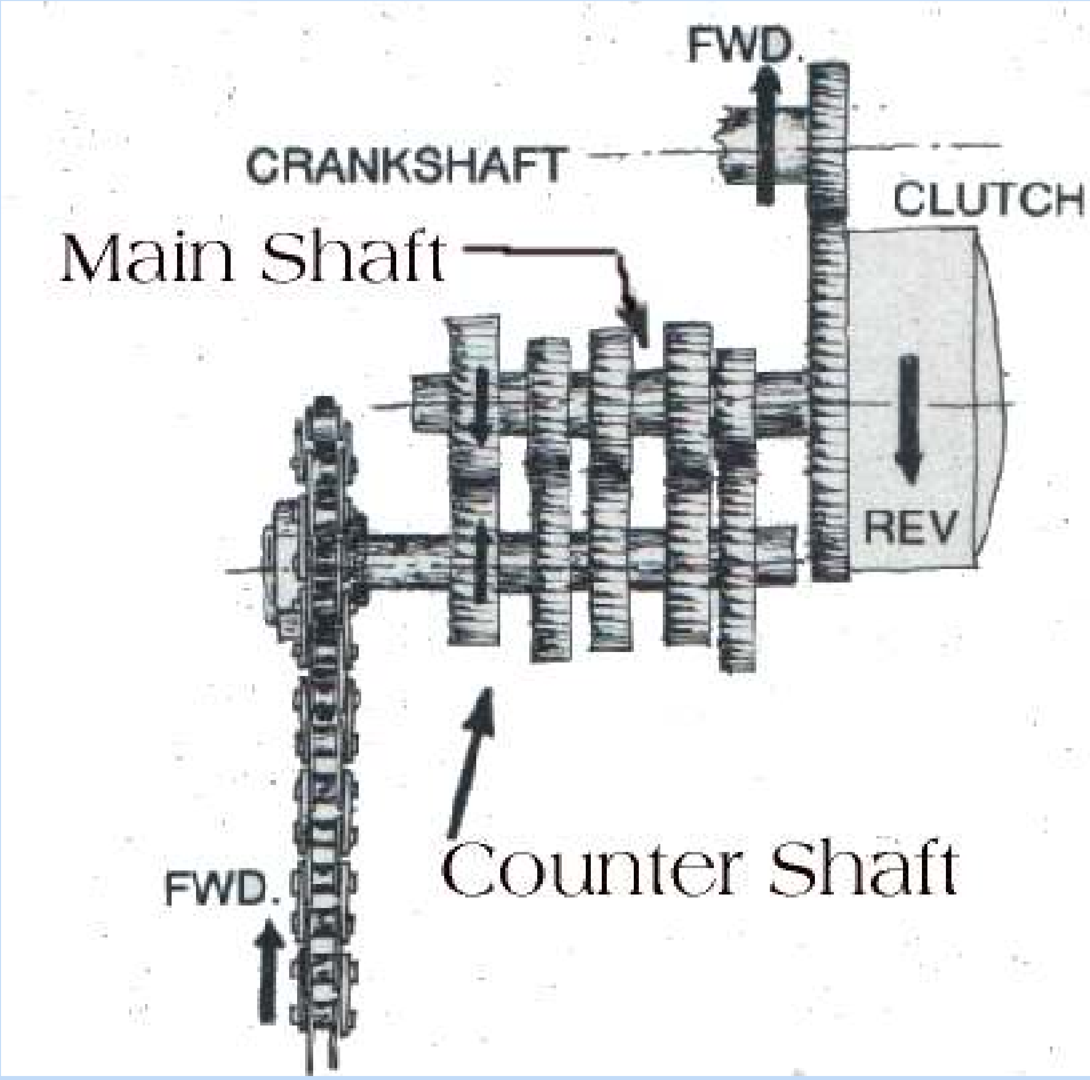
Full Size Cassette Player



So now you younger folks know what a Cassette is.

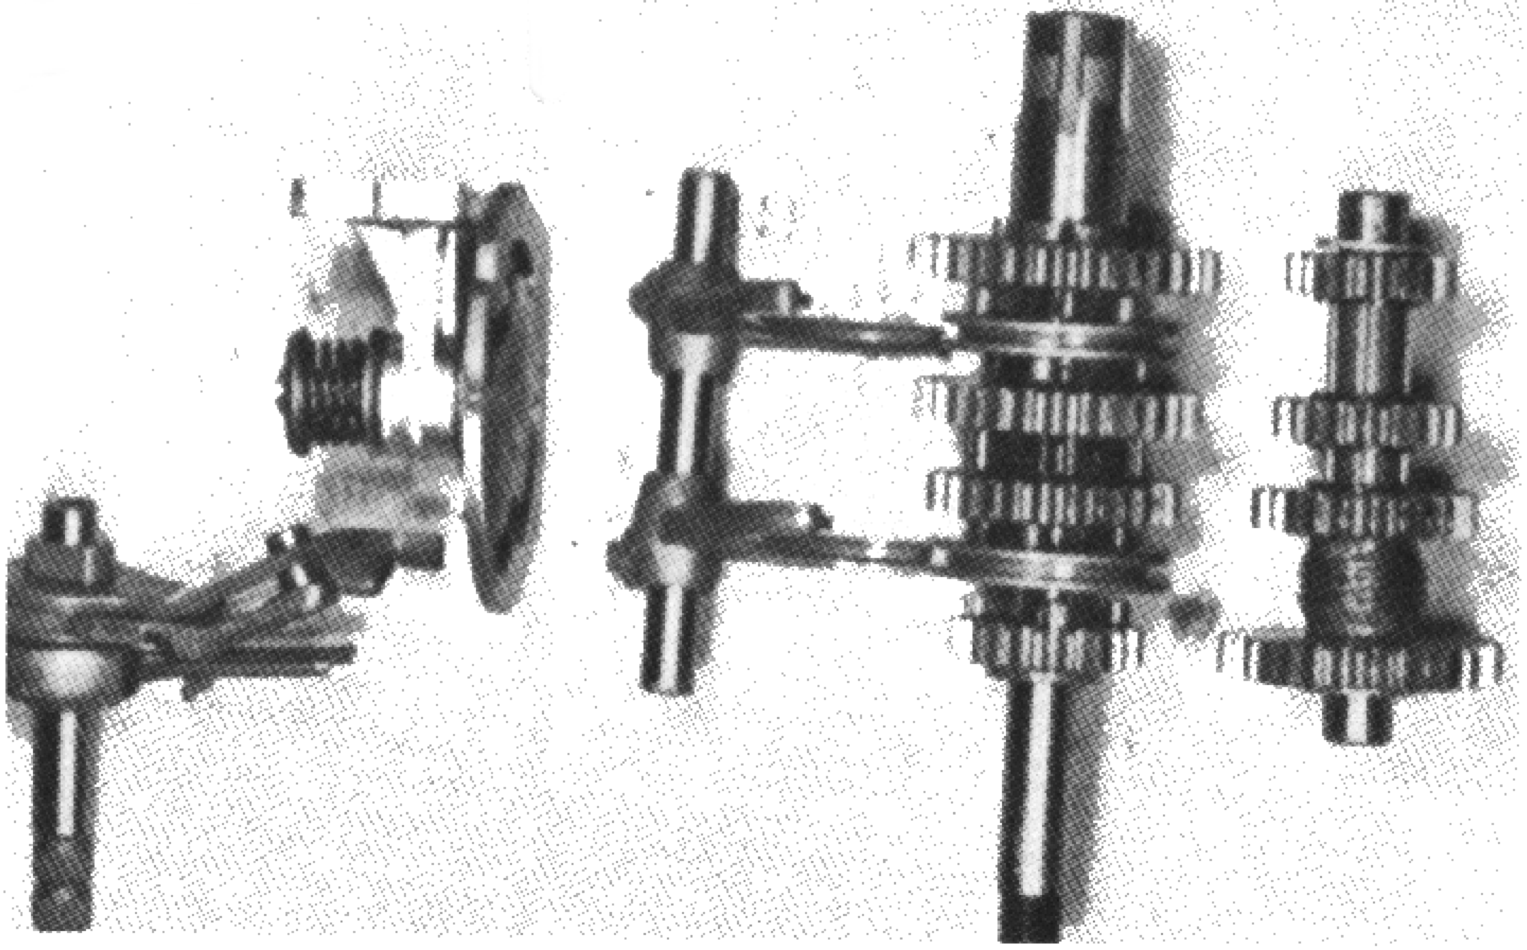
B.S.A. TWIN GEARS AND GEARSHIFT MECHANISM 1950-53 TWINS

This illustration shows the layout of gears and gearshift mechanism on the 500-650 c.c. Twin plunger frame model gearboxes. Parts indentified by letters, are listed below:



A. Mainshaft Sliding Gear (2nd Gear)
B. Mainshaft Sliding Gear (3rd Gear)
C. Layshaft Sliding Gear (2nd Gear)
D. Layshaft Sliding Gear (3rd Gear)
E. Mainshaft Selector Fork
F. Layshaft Selector Fork
G. Selector Fork Shaft
H. Cam Plate
J. Selector Fork Pegs that locate in Cam Track
K. Selector Plate Boss
L. Footchange Pedal
M. Ratchet Lever with spring-loaded ratchet pawl.
N. Ratchet Lever Ball End
O. Footchange Inner Lever
P. Ratchet Pawl.

C15-B40 GEARSHIFT DETAILS

"A" shows the shifter forks, "B" the shifter camplate. Camplate gear positions are shown as they register with the camplate locating spring. "C" shows the shifter quadrant with ratchet plunger. If any gear change difficulty has been experienced, the condition of the ratchet plungers and also their engaging slots should be examined when overhauling and these parts replaced if noticeably worn. "D" is the quadrant and footchange pedal centralizing spring, and "E" is anchor screw.

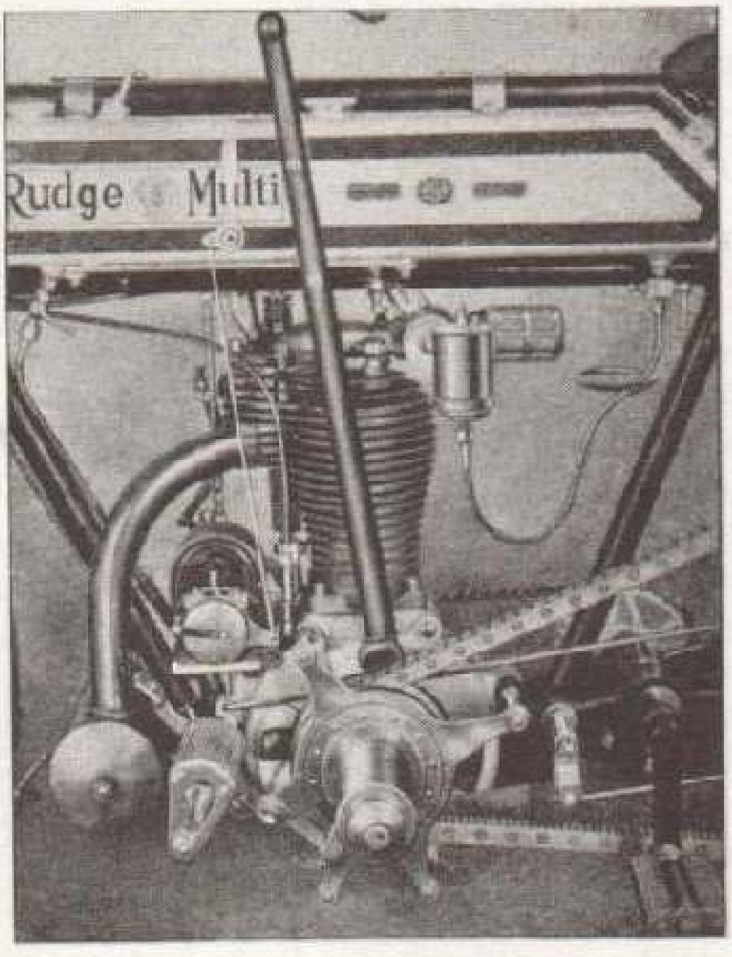
3½ H.P. (499 c.c.) Rudge Motor Bicycle.

Free Engine Clutch, showing Cover removed.



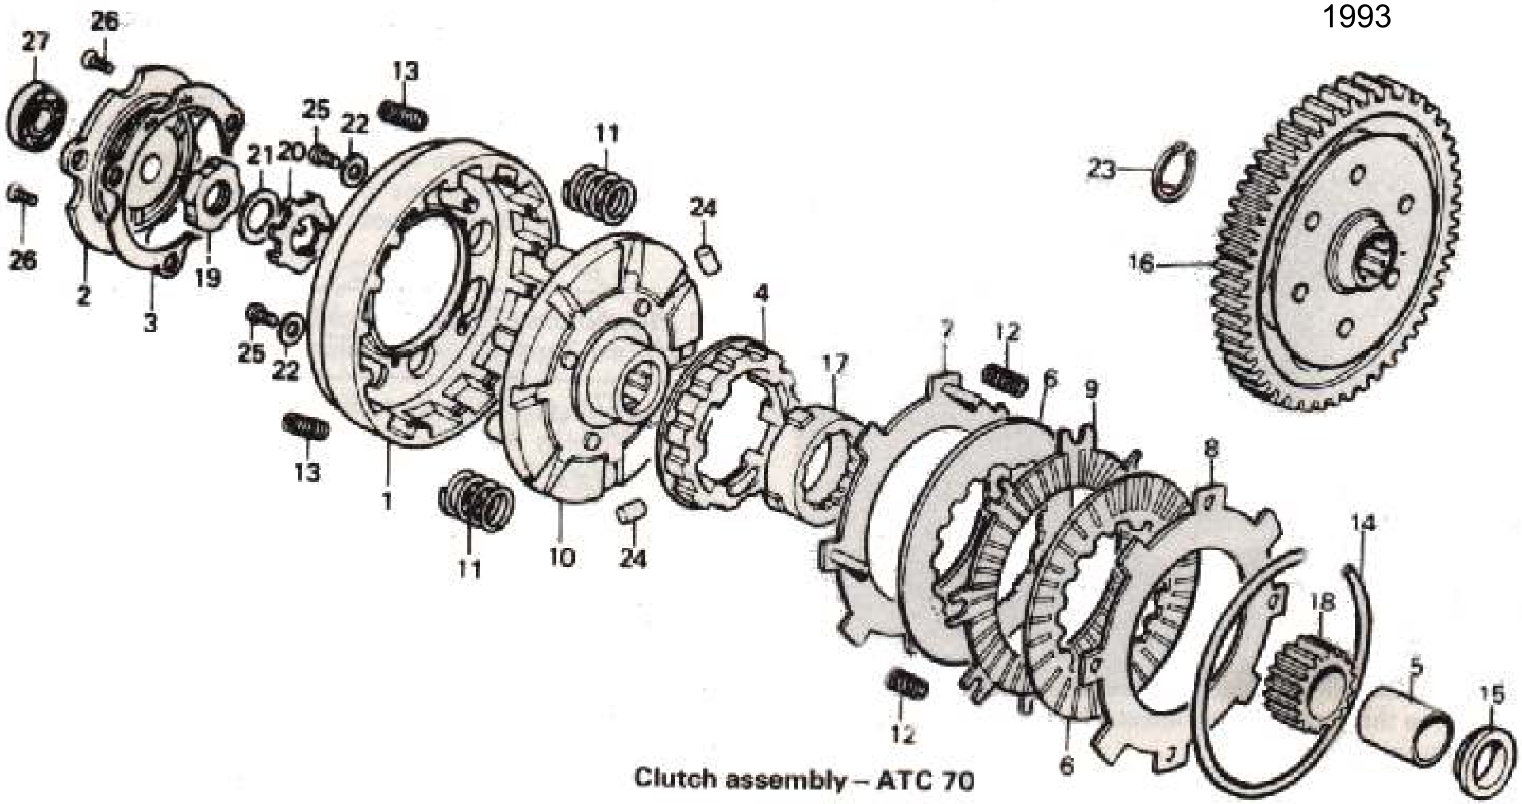
When pressed together by the powerful spring, the discs cannot slip past each other and the clutch drives solid. The pressure is relieved by the handlebar control, the plates are then free to slip past each other and the engine is free. The plates are oiled automatically through the centre hole of the axle. It will be perceived that a high speed clutch of this type can be slipped almost indefinitely without damage.

It is hand-operated, thus leaving both feet free for balancing—a great advantage when using the Clutch either for starting or stopping.

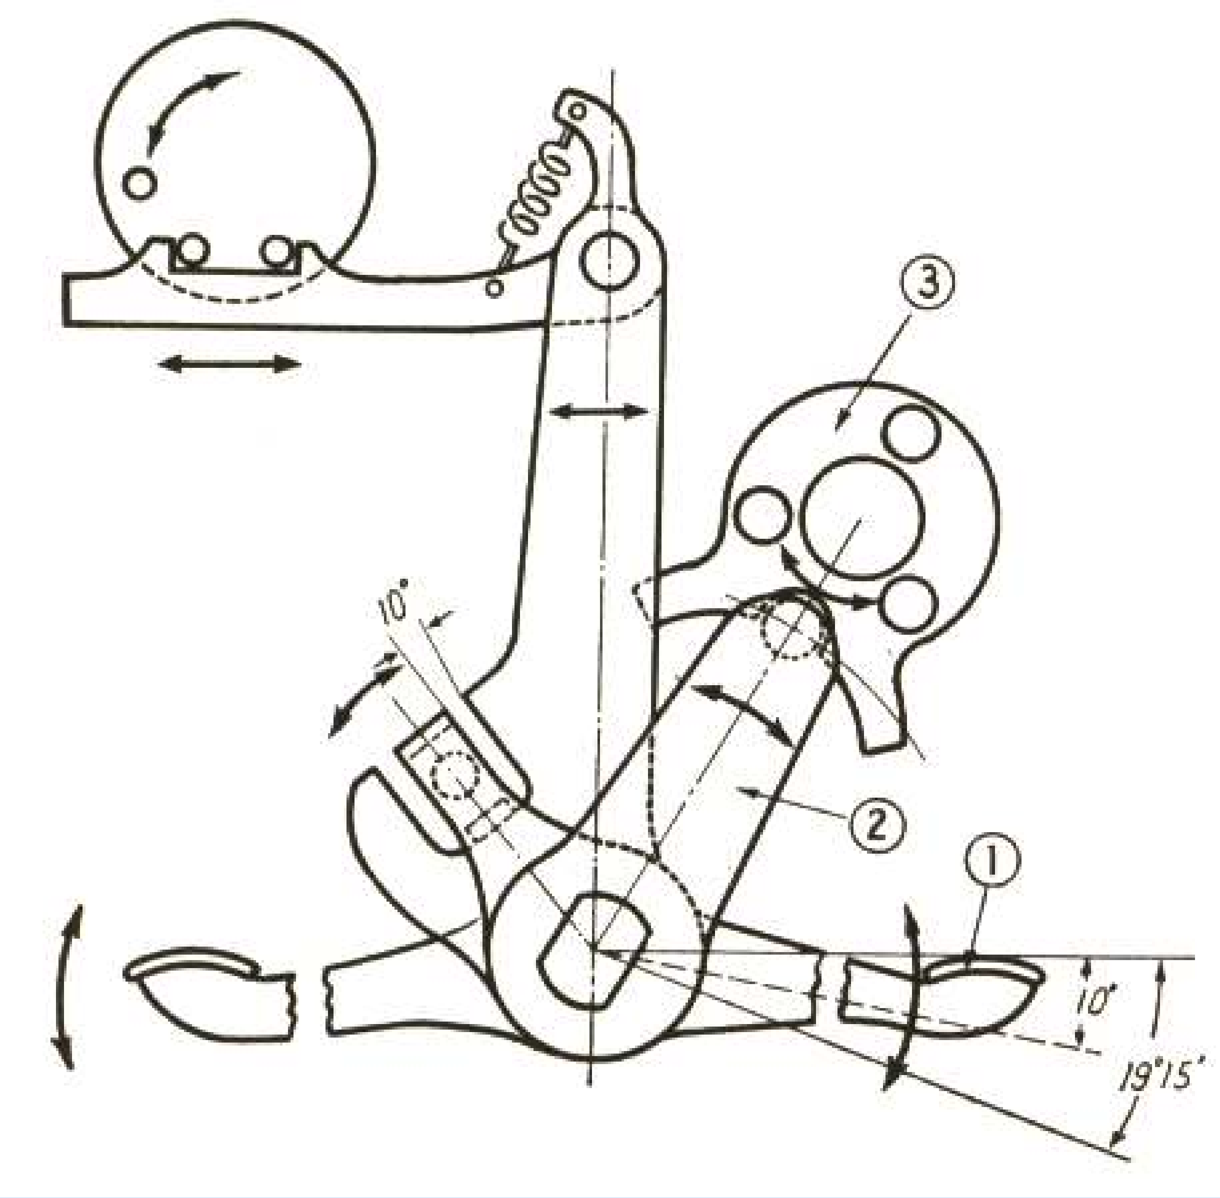
THE RUDGE MULTI-SPEED GEAR (Pat. Nos. 14663/11-22400/11) gives a gear ratio of from 3½ to 1 to 7½ to 1 by a series of indefinitely small gradations.

It has the following advantages over all other variable gears :—

(1.) It is provided with the RUDGE patent plate clutch, which is available at all gears, and obviates the slipping of the belt as a clutch,



The Multi-speed Gear (Pat. No. 22400/11) Lever Celluloid Covered.



Back Wheel Pulley and Brake Drum (Pat. No. 14336/11).

SERVICE INFORMATION

GENERAL

- A hoist or equivalent is required to support the motorcycle when removing and installing the engine.
- A floor jack or other adjustable support is required to support and maneuver the engine.
- Do not use the oil filter and oil cooler as a jacking point.
- When using the lock nut wrench for the engine hanger lock nut, use a deflecting beam type torque wrench 20 inches long. The lock nut wrench increases the torque wrench's leverage, so the torque wrench reading will be less than the torque actually applied to the lock nut. The specification given is the actual torque applied to the lock nut, not the reading on the torque wrench. Do not overtighten the lock nut. The specification later in the text gives both actual and indicated.
- The following components can be serviced with the engine installed in the frame.
  - Alternator (page 11-4)
  - Clutch (page 10-7)
  - Camshaft (page 9-9)
  - Gearshift linkage (page 10-27)
  - Oil cooler (page 5-13)
  - Oil pump (page 5-5)
  - Water pump (page 7-21)
- The following components require engine removal for service.
  - Cylinder head (page 9-14)
  - Crankshaft (page 13-5)
  - Piston/cylinder (page 13-14)
  - Shift fork/shift drum/transmission (page 12-6)
  - Balancer (page 12-16)
- When installing the engine, be sure to tighten the engine mounting fasteners to the specified torque in the specified sequence. If you make a mistake with the torque or sequence, loosen all mounting fasteners, then tighten them again to the specified torque in the correct sequence.

Helpful Hints For Better Cables

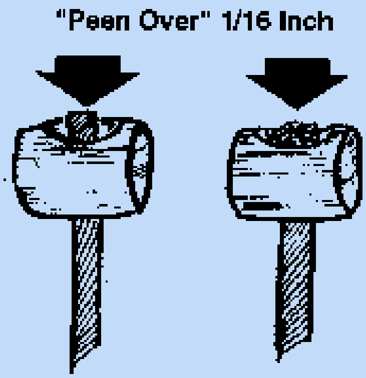
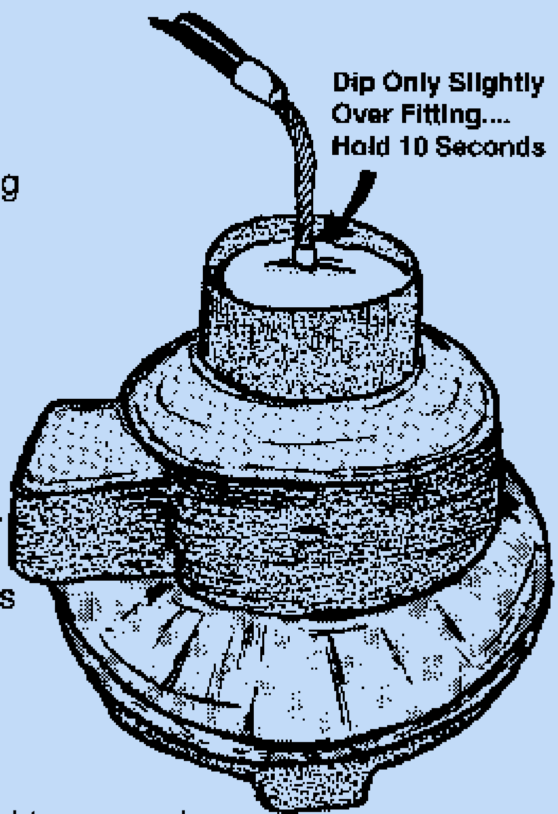
1. Plug in solder pot first, allowing it to heat properly. Determine the proper universal cable to be used refering to earlier pages.



2. Compare visually the old cable and the universal. Examine the end fittings to be sure of interchange.

3. Select proper end fitting from assortment box to complete the assembly.

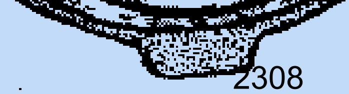
4. Measure the exposed wire on the old cable and write it down on the back of the package (for reference). The exposed wire is the distance between the end of the conduit and the end of the fitting.



5. Cut the old cable and remove any reuseable adjusters or special fittings. Use these on the new cable if applicable.

6. Now cut conduit on new cable to desired length. Be certain to allow extra if installing higher or wider bars.

7. After measuring exposed wire on new cable, cut off excess allowing 1/16" extra to be peened over end fitting before soldering. This peening action is a key to cable strength.



8. Dip fitting in clean Flanders flux until complete fitting is covered.

9. Dip in solder pot, holding for approximately 10 seconds, this allows heat to penetrate evenly. Do not dip fitting more than 1/8" below full coverage. If dipped deeper this allows solder to penetrate the wire and makes it too brittle where it should flex.

10. Recheck your work for possible errors. Unplug the solder pot and pat yourself on the back you are a cablemaker.

How it Works
From a KZ550 Kawasaki Factory Shop Manual

BRAKE

A hydraulic disc brake is used on each wheel for superior braking performance and high reliability. The major components of each disc brake are the brake lever (front) or the brake pedal (rear), master cylinder, brake line, caliper assembly, and disc. The brake lever is pulled or the brake pedal is pushed to move a piston in the master cylinder and pressurize the brake fluid. Fluid pressure is transmitted through the brake line to operate the caliper. The caliper grips the disc attached to the wheel, slowing wheel rotation. Front brake lever pushes the front brake light switch, and the rear brake pedal pulls the rear brake light switch. Each switch turns on the brake light.

Unlike a drum-type brake, the components of the disc brake which perform the actual braking action, i.e., the disc and pads, are open to direct contact with the air flow past the motorcycle. This provides for excellent dissipation of the heat from brake friction, and minimizes the possibility of brake fade common to drum brakes.

The automatic wear adjustment mechanism of the rear caliper is the same as that of the front caliper, and caliper operation is the same as for the front caliper

The automatic wear adjustment mechanism of the rear caliper is the same as that of the front caliper, and caliper operation is the same as for the front caliper except that the rear caliper is held stationary and has two pistons. So a separate explanation of the braking and release strokes of the rear caliper will be omitted.

Automatic Wear Adjustment

When fluid pressure develops in the cylinder, the piston is pushed exerting pressure against the brake pad, which in turn presses against the brake disc. The pressurized fluid is prevented from leaking by a fluid seal fitted into the cylinder wall. The seal is pressed against the piston and, instead of sliding when the piston moves, the seal is only distorted, allowing no fluid leakage at all (See Fig. J14). When the brake lever or pedal is released and fluid pressure lowers, the elasticity of the seal returns the piston to its original position.

After the brakes are used for a while and the pads wear slightly, the rubber seal will no longer be able to distort the additional amount that the piston travels. Instead, when piston travel forces the seal past its limit, the seal slips on the piston. The seal then returns the piston to a new rest position that is closer to the disc.

A small amount of fluid from the reservoir supplements the fluid in the brake line to compensate for the difference in piston position. Consequently, the length of the brake lever or pedal stroke remains unchanged, and the brake never needs adjustment.

The seal and the cup at the head of the master cylinder piston are made of special heat resistant rubber for best performance and to prevent deterioration. For this reason, only standard parts should be used.

Braking Stroke

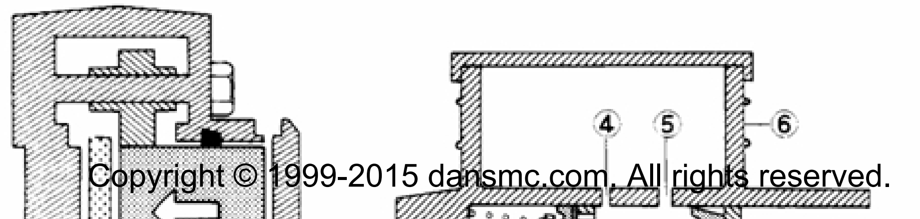
When the brake lever is pulled, the piston ⑪ in the master cylinder is pushed and moves forward against the force of the return spring ⑧. At this time, the primary cup ⑨ at the head of the piston closes the small relief port ④, which connects the pressure chamber and the reservoir ⑥. Until this port is fully closed, the brake fluid does not start being pressurized, in spite of the forward movement of the piston.



The pressure stroke starts as soon as the relief port is closed. The piston compresses the brake fluid, which is being used as the pressure medium, forcing it out into the brake line. The pressure is transmitted through the line to the cylinder portion of the caliper assembly, where it forces the piston ① towards the disc. The piston presses pad A against the disc, but since the disc is immovable, further pressure cannot move the pad any farther. Instead, the entire caliper assembly moves in the opposite direction such that pad B is also forced against the disc. In this manner, the disc is gripped between the two pads, and the resulting friction slows wheel rotation.

Braking Release Stroke

When the brake lever is released, the piston in the master cylinder is quickly returned toward its rest position by the spring ⑧, and brake fluid pressure drops in the line and in the caliper cylinder. The elasticity of the fluid seal ② in the cylinder then returns the piston. This leaves no pressure against either pad A or B so that slight friction against the disc pushes them both slightly away from the disc.

As the master cylinder piston moves back further, the brake fluid in the line rushes to fill the low pressure area in front of the primary cup at the piston head. At this time, fluid from the reservoir flows through the large supply port ⑤ into the space between the primary and secondary cups, through the non-return valve ⑩, and passes around the edges of the primary cup to fill the vacuum. When the piston has returned to its rest position against the stop, the small relief port is uncovered. As the brake fluid returns from the line, excess fluid passes through the relief port into the reservoir until the brake line pressure returns to zero.

Master Cylinder

The master cylinder assembly includes the reservoir ⑤, piston ⑩, primary and secondary cups ⑧, ⑩, non-return valve ⑨, and spring ⑦. The reservoir has two holes at the bottom: a relatively large supply port ③ to supply fluid to the lines and a small relief port ② to admit excess fluid from the line. The primary and secondary cups stop the fluid from leaking back around the piston while the piston is moving forward to pressurize the line. The non-return valve is in the head of the piston; it stops backward fluid flow when the brake is applied. When the brake lever is released, the valve allows flow around the cup to fill the vacuum in front of the piston so that the piston can return easily.

Master cylinder part wear

When master cylinder parts are worn or damaged, proper brake fluid pressure cannot be obtained in the line, and the brake will not hold.

If the small relief port becomes plugged, especially with a swollen or damaged primary cup, the brake pads will drag on the disc.

- Check that there are no scratches, rust or pitting on the inside of the master cylinder, and that it is not worn past the service limit.
- Check the piston for these same faults.
- Measure the cylinder inside diameter, and measure the piston, primary cup, and secondary cup outside diameter.

Caliper

The front wheel has a floating-type caliper. The front caliper assembly includes pad A ⑥, pad B ⑦, and the piston ⑭, which is inside the caliper cylinder. Through the caliper run two shafts ③, which also pass through the caliper holder ① to mount the assembly to the fork leg. When the piston forces pad A against the disc, the shaft portion of the caliper assembly slides through the holder such that pad B is also forced against the disc, both brake pads being kept parallel to the disc.

The rear wheel has a fixed caliper. The rear caliper assembly consists of two caliper halves 7, 10, bolted together, with each half containing a cylinder; a set of opposed pistons 6; and two pads 5. The pad anti-rattle springs 3 hold the pads in position apart from the disc when the rear brake is not applied. When the brake is applied, the pressurized fluid is delivered to the piston areas on both sides of the caliper at the same time. Each piston goes forward until it is pressed against the disc, so no lateral movement of the disc and caliper is needed. There is a drilled internal fluid passage which is sealed by O ring where the two caliper halves join.

Inspect the pads for wear. For the front disc brakes, check the thickness of the pad linings, and replace both pads as a set if the thickness of either pad is less than 1 mm.

Rear Brake Pad

If any grease or oil spills on the pads, wash it off with trichloroethylene or a high flash-point solvent. Do not use one which will leave an oily residue. If the oil cannot be thoroughly clean off, replace the pads.

Fluid seal damage

The fluid seal around the piston maintains the proper pad/disc clearance. If this seal is not satisfactory, pad wear will increase, and constant pad drag on the disc will raise brake and brake fluid temperature.

Replace the fluid seals under any of the following conditions: (a) fluid leakage around the pad; (b) brakes overheat; (c) there is a large difference in left and right pad wear; (d) the seal is stuck to the piston. If the fluid seal is replaced, replace the dust seal as well. Also, replace all seals every other time the pads are changed.

A. Fluid Seal B. Dust Seal C. "O" Ring

Dust seal, cover, O ring damage

Check the dust seals, covers, O ring, and replace any that are cracked, worn, swollen, or otherwise damaged.

Piston, cylinder wear

Measure the cylinder inside diameter and piston outside diameter.

Replace the cylinder and piston if they are worn out

A. Caliper Holder Shafts
B. "O" Rings
C. Caliper Holder

Brake Disc

Besides wearing down, the disc may warp. A warped disc will cause the brake pads to drag on the disc and will wear down both the pads and disc quickly. Dragging will also cause overheating and poor braking efficiency.

Piston, cylinder wear

Measure the cylinder inside diameter and piston outside diameter.

Replace the cylinder and piston if they are worn out of tolerance, badly scored, or rusty.

A. Piston B. Cylinder

Table J11 Caliper Parts

| | Measurement | Service Limit |
|---|---|---|
| Front | Cylinder Inside Diameter | 38.25 mm, Ⓢ 42.92 mm |
| | Piston Outside Diameter | 38.08 mm, Ⓢ 42.75 mm |
| Rear | Cylinder Inside Diameter | 42.92 mm |
| | Piston Outside Diameter | 42.75 mm |

Ⓢ : Single disc brake model

Caliper holder shaft wear

Caliper holder shafts must slide smoothly in the caliper holder. If the shafts do not slide smoothly, one pad will wear more than the other, pad wear will increase, and constant drag on the disc will raise brake and brake fluid temperature. Check to see if the caliper holder shafts are nor badly worn or stepped, or O rings are not damaged. If the shafts or O ring are damaged, replace the shafts, O rings, and the caliper holder.

Brake Disc

Besides wearing down, the disc may warp. A warped disc will cause the brake pads to drag on the disc and will wear down both the pads and disc quickly. Dragging will also cause overheating and poor braking efficiency.

Disc warp

Jack up the motorcycle so that the front wheel is off the ground, and turn the handlebar fully to one side. Set up a dial gauge against the front disc as illustrated, and measure disc runout. Remove the jack, set the motorcycle up on its center stand, and then measure the rear disc runout. If runout exceeds the service limit, replace the disc.

A. Disc B. Dial Gauge C. Turn.

Brake Fluid

The brake fluid is an extra heavy duty type with a high boiling point to withstand the heat produced by friction of the caliper pads on the disc. Since the boiling point and thus the performance of the fluid would be reduced by contamination with water vapor or dirt from the air, the reservoir is sealed with a rubber diaphragm under the cap. This cap seal also prevents fluid evaporation and spillage should the motorcycle fall over. The fluid is further protected by rubber seals in the caliper assembly and at the master cylinder brake line fitting.

When the brake is applied, heat is generated by the friction between the disc and the brake pads. While much of this heat is immediately dissipated, some of it is transmitted to the brake fluid and may raise fluid temperature to as high as 150°C (300°F) during brake operation. This temperature could boil the brake fluid and cause a vapor lock in the lines unless fluid with a high boiling point is used and has been kept from being contaminated with dirt, moisture, or a different type of fluid. Poor quality or contaminated fluid can also deteriorate from contact with the recommended brake

Disc cleaning

Poor braking can also be caused by oil on the disc. Oil on the disc must be cleaned off with trichloroethylene or a high flash-point solvent. Do not use one which will leave an oily residue.

and cause a vapor lock in the lines unless fluid with a high boiling point is used and has been kept from being contaminated with dirt, moisture, or a different type of fluid. Poor quality or contaminated fluid can also deteriorate from contact with the recommended brake fluids. 2348

The graph of Fig. J29 shows how brake fluid contamination with moisture lowers the fluid boiling point. Although not shown in the graph, the boiling point also lowers as the fluid gets old, is contaminated with dirt, or if two different types of brake fluid are mixed.

WARNING

When working with the disc brake, observe the precautions listed below.

1. Never reuse old brake fluid.
2. Do not use fluid from a container that has been left unsealed or that has been open a long time.
3. Do not mix two types of fluid for use in the brake. This lowers the brake fluid boiling point and could cause the brake to be ineffective. It may also cause the rubber brake parts to deteriorate. Recommended fluids are given in the table.

   NOTE: The type of fluid originally used in the disc brake is not available in most areas, but it should be necessary to add very little fluid before the first brake fluid change. After changing the fluid, use only the same type thereafter.

   Table J14 Recommended Disc Brake Fluid

   |---|
   | Atlas Extra Heavy Duty |
   | Shell Super Heavy Duty |
   | Texaco Super Heavy Duty |
   | Wagner Lockheed Heavy Duty |
   | Castrol Girling-Green |
   | Castrol GT (LMA) |
   | Castrol Disc Brake Fluid |

   The correct fluid will come in a can labeled D.O.T.3. Do not use fluid that does not have this marking.
4. Don't leave the reservoir cap off for any length of time to avoid moisture contamination of the fluid.
5. Don't change the fluid in the rain or when a strong wind is blowing.
6. Except for the disc pads and discs, use only disc brake fluid, isopropyl alcohol, or ethyl alcohol for cleaning brake parts. Do not use any other fluid for cleaning these parts. Gasoline, motor oil, or any other petroleum distillate will cause deterioration of the rubber parts. Oil spilled on any part will be difficult to wash off completely and will eventually reach and break down the rubber used in the disc brake.
7. When handling the disc pads or disc, be careful that no disc brake fluid or any oil gets on them. Clean off any fluid or oil that inadvertently gets on the pads or disc with a high flash-point solvent. Do not use one which will leave an oily residue. Replace the pads with new ones if they cannot be cleaned satisfactorily.
8. Brake fluid quickly ruins painted surfaces; any spilled fluid should be completely wiped up immediately.
9. If any of the brake line fittings or the bleed valve is opened at any time, the AIR MUST BE BLED FROM THE BRAKE.
10. When installing or assembling the disc brake, tighten the disc brake fittings to the values given in Table G1. Improper torque may cause the brake to malfunction.

Brake Fluid Boiling Point (J29)

- If a dual disc brake is used, repeat the previous step one more time for the other side.
- Close the bleed valve(s), and fill the reservoir with fresh brake fluid.
- Open the bleed valve, apply the brake by the brake lever or pedal, close the valve with the brake held applied, and then quickly release the lever or pedal. Repeat this operation until the brake line is filled and fluid starts coming out of the plastic hose. Replenish the fluid in the reservoir as often as necessary to keep it from running completely out.
- Bleed the air from the lines.

Bleeding the brake

The brake fluid has a very low compression coefficient so that almost all the movement of the brake lever or pedal is transmitted directly to the caliper for braking action. Air, however, is easily compressed. When air enters the brake lines, brake lever or pedal

Changing the brake fluid

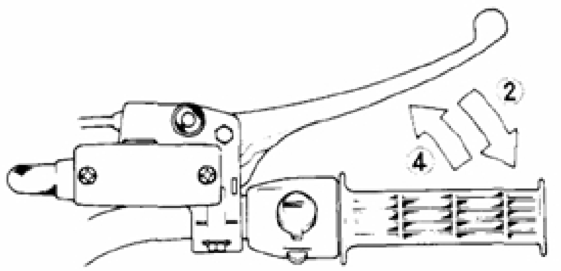
The brake fluid should be changed in accordance with the Periodic Maintenance Chart (Pg. 10) and whenever it becomes contaminated with dirt or water.



- Attach a clear plastic hose to the bleed valve on the caliper, and run the other end of the hose into a container.
- Remove the reservoir cap, and remove the rubber cap on the bleed valve.
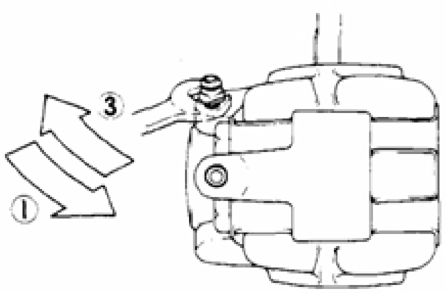
- Open the bleed valve (counterclockwise to open), and pump the brake lever or pedal until all the fluid is drained from the line.

The brake fluid has a very low compression coefficient so that almost all the movement of the brake lever or pedal is transmitted directly to the caliper for braking action. Air, however, is easily compressed. When air enters the brake lines, brake lever or pedal movement will be partially used in compressing the air. This will make the lever or pedal feel spongy, and there will be a loss in braking power.



Bleed the air from the brake whenever brake lever or pedal action feels soft or spongy, after the brake fluid is changed, or whenever a brake line fitting has been loosened for any reason.

- Remove the reservoir cap, and check that there is plenty of fluid in the reservoir. The fluid level must be checked several times during the bleeding operation and replenished as necessary. If the fluid in the reservoir runs completely out any time during bleeding, the bleeding operation must be done over again from the beginning since air will have entered the line.

Filling up the Brake Line J30

1. Open the bleed valve.
2. Apply the brake, keeping the brake applied.
3. Close the bleed valve.
4. Then quickly release the brake.

Bleeding the Brake Line J31

1. Hold the brake applied.
2. Quickly open and close the valve.
3. Release the brake.

BALANCE MARKS

Many manufacturers will indicate a "balance point" or the lightest spot on the tire. The markings are there to give mechanics a running start at using the least amount of weight to balance the tire. The following is a list of manufacturers markings:

Avon – They don't use a spot because there is no industry standard for this type of marking. Also, the valve stem area may not always be the heaviest spot on a wheel assembly.
Bridgestone – Yellow ring to identify the light spot.
Continental – Does not use any spots.
Dunlop – Yellow circle to indicate the light spot.
Metzeler – Red dot to identify the light spot.
Michelin – No markings.
Pirelli – Red dot to identify the light spot or no marking.
Shinko – Bright yellow painted ring to identify the light spot. Stay away from silver stamps, these are quality control marks.

Certain touring bike tires, like the 15" & 16" variety tires with heavy treads, are liable to be a bit of out of balance and you might need the dot, but you can't generalize where there is a problem.

THE GREAT IGNITION COIL TEST

by Gordon Jennings

● We've just discovered handwriting on a wall most of us have been beating our heads against for years, and don't know whether to feel elated, mortified or incensed. A touch of elation is in order because what we found points the way toward extended spark plug life, smoother running, easier starting and generally improved behavior for whole classes of motorcycles. The mortification comes from having been told what to look for a long time ago and knowing that, like simpletons, we ignored an expert's very good advice. And we're incensed because it is now clear that the entire motorcycle industry has been penny-pinching all of us for decades.

Final enlightenment was cast by the blue-white glare of an electric arc in a scene strongly suggestive of the old Frankenstein movies, as we tested coil after coil for spark output on a jury-rigged apparatus in Cycle's shop. But the matter never would have been taken that far except for sundry items of information we either tripped over or was shoved under our collective nose.

Item: Arnold Frank, who represents the Champion Spark Plug Company in our area, mentioned that his associates had conducted a series of performance tests and depressingly limp. "Oh, you're absolutely right, Arnold," we chorused, nodding our empty heads in agreement, but events proved that only Jess Thomas fully appreciated what we had been told; the rest of us sat there like dummies, figuring a few hundred volts one way or the other couldn't make much difference if you were willing to give your bike fresh plugs at regular intervals.

Item: Among the various staff-owned bikes under our roof were a couple that almost caricatured the classic symptoms of internal combustion temperament. The two bikes in question would always start, albeit with some coaxing, because they got the kind of treatment usually reserved for rich, elderly relatives; pampered and made comfy and receiving care every time they showed the least sign of displeasure.

oughly warmed (sometimes not even then) and of course they devoured spark plugs like a hungry elephant going after fresh roasted peanuts.

Item: Hot on the trail of some hard information about the latest, greatest, transistorized, capacitored, pointless, God's-Own-Lightning kind of ignition system, we obtained some of the printed reports issued after the "Ignition and Engine Performance Conference" sponsored by Champion each year. These conferences are international affairs, attended by people from oil companies, engine and ignition component manufacturers, and other interested, expert parties. Questions are asked, and answered, and the gist of all that gets said amounts to nothing less than an annual state of the art report. The edited record is full

COILS II

By Gordon Jennings

● A couple of months ago, in our July issue, we presented results from a two-level investigation into the matter of ignition voltage requirements versus actual spark coil performance. The article, titled "The Great Ignition Coil Test," made the point that motorcycle engines have plenty of voltage requirement but don't get much spark; outlined the consequences of ignition voltage insufficiencies; showed the wide-margin superiority of automotive ignition coils; and mentioned that most bikes would benefit from having a coil transplant.

The sheer volume of written and telephoned communications in response to our "Coils" piece says it was well received by the readership; the content of these communications tells us we erred in concentrating on why automotive coils may be expected to improve motorcycles' behavior while giving short shrift to the details of how such transplanting should be done. What follows is intended to re-establish a balance.

Those who missed our July shot at bike coils have to be acquainted with the substance of the information presented. It all concerned the importance of sheer voltage in such seemingly unrelated matters as spark plug service life and engines' sensitivity to mixture strength. Spark plugs will fire satisfactorily on a mere [illegible] ly when new, but their voltage require- part-throttle operation and ability to squeeze so many thousands of miles of running out of a set of spark plugs.

Does any of the above transfer to a motorcycle when it is fitted with automotive coils? Our experience says it does. Car coils have been installed in three staff-owned motorcycles, and there was a marked improvement in cold-start characteristics, etc., in every case. But we already told you about that in the first "Coils" article; here we will focus on the problems of those who have been convinced that the car/bike coil transplant is a good thing, and are wondering how to go about it.

Many people seem troubled by the car coil's electrical current draw, which is (like its output) about double that of the typical motorcycle coil. Somewhere there undoubtedly is a motorcycle that lacks the generating capacity to handle the added amperage, but the vast majority of bikes' systems won't even notice the difference. The added current draw, for a twin-coil ignition, is about the same thing the electrical system handles when a bike's stoplight flashes on; it just isn't enough to worry about.

Another point much misunderstood is the nature and function of the ballast resistors almost universally employed in automotive ignition systems. Ordinarily re[illegible] sistors are simple electric restrictors, with varies a lot. Or, to put it another way, ballast resistors will vary the voltage at an ignition coil's primary windings and thus hold the current at a constant level. We've checked the primary voltage in a ballast-resistor-equipped ignition system, and got readings ranging from a high of nine volts down to a five-volt low, depending on engine speed. It was the ballast resistor doing its job, which is to maintain the coil's primary current (and thus its output) at a very nearly constant level. It just isn't possible to get the same kind of even performance out of an inductive-type ignition system that applies line voltage directly to its coil primaries.

In any case, ignition coils made for American cars are intended to be used in combination with ballast resistors, and you should not try to side-step the makers' intentions in this matter. Neither should you fret yourself about getting a particular kind of ballast resistor, as all those made for American automotive coils seem to have very nearly the same current limiting properties. Simply step right up to the man at your local auto parts store and ask for an ignition system ballast resistor. If he's the worrisome type, and wants to know what kind, tell him you want one to use with a 12-volt Delco coil (even if you really plan to fit up a set of K-Mart or Sears [illegible]

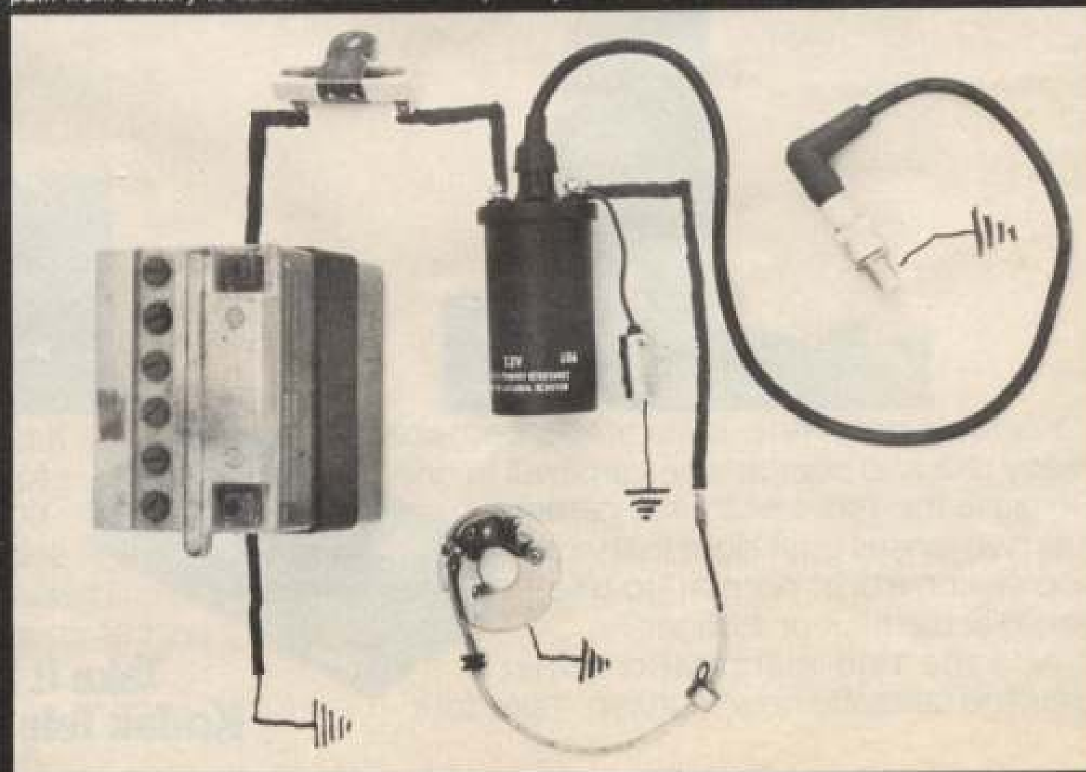
You probably won't need more than one plugs will fire satisfactorily on a mere 8–9 kv when new, but their voltage requirement rises with time in service. If an ignition coil's output is weak, then the spark plug will quickly demand more voltage than it can deliver. Weak coils also accentuate any shortcomings in carburetion, because mixture tolerance increases with the width of the gap between spark plug electrodes. And of course the voltage requirement rises as the between-electrodes gap is widened.

You can get a pretty good feel for the relative merits of automotive and motorcycle coils just by looking at the plug gap recommendations for cars and for bikes. Chevrolets old enough to vote run plugs gapped at .035-inch; the average for motorcycles is about .024-inch, and bikes have all the cold-starting and idling problems theory predicts for too-close electrode gaps.



We went beyond the reading of spark plug charts and actually tested a sampling of ignition coils. And we found exactly what the various gap recommendations had suggested: that car coils really are much stronger than those we get with bikes. The big surprise was the enormity of the difference. An ordinary Delco coil, of the kind used in millions of older Chevrolets, has roughly twice the output of the average motorcycle ignition coil. That fact accounts, in no small part, for the American car's steady idle, smooth automotive ignition systems. Ordinary resistors are simple electric restrictors, with substantially fixed voltage/current reducing properties. Ballast resistors are electrical flow regulators, and will pass the current for which they are rated even though voltage (electrical pressure) car coils).

You probably won't need more than one ballast resistor, even if—as usually is the case—your bike has two or more coils. The little cam that opens and closes a bike's ignition contact points usually is shaped so that it holds the points open

Here is the hardware for a car/bike coil-transplant ignition system, with lines to show the current path from battery to ballast resistor, to coil primary, to contact points and back to ground.

PART III

How motorcycle ignition systems actually perform,

● IT WAS ONCE WIDELY BELIEVED THAT ANY spark strong enough to light an engine's fire was all the spark that mattered. We were inclined toward that belief ourselves, perhaps because we suspected that the ignition systems on our motorcycles performed at a level near the minimum and didn't want to think about having to make them better. Anyway, our time was needed for work on more pressing matters—like the search for perfect carburetion, and for spark plugs of a type/make/heat range that wouldn't foul after a few hundred miles in service. What we have since learned is that nearly all motorcycle engine fussiness originates in ignition systems. We'd been right in suspecting motorcycles of having fairly weak ignitions, but our assumption that it didn't matter much was entirely wrong: it matters a lot. And, it turns out, bikes' ignition systems are even worse than we had suspected.

The weakness of motorcycle ignition systems, and its implications, was revealed to us almost two years ago, and reported in a story titled "The Great Ignition Coil Test" (Cycle, July, 1975). The letters and phone calls that began to arrive soon after our subscribers received relates directly to the influence of spark plug electrode-gap width on the actual igniting of the air/fuel mixture in an engine's combustion chambers. We like to think of the mixture as having all its vaporized fuel molecules evenly distributed throughout the volume of air. If that even distribution could be provided, then full-throttle mixture strength would be about 14.7:1 (air/fuel, by weight) for all engines, and the gap between spark plugs' electrodes could be so narrow that only a few hundred volts would be required to force a spark across. In reality the mixture is highly heterogeneous: at some points within the charge it may actually be at the 14.7:1 ratio that ignites most easily; at most points it will vary in some degree, richer or leaner, from the optimum and may at times fall outside the range for combustion. That's where spark plug gap width comes into the picture, for it happens that the combustible mixture range broadens and narrows with the plug gap itself. One may see this phenomenon expressed in the plug gaps specified for today's emissions-controlled automobile engines, which must cope with extremely lean mixtures and which commonly use plug gaps of around .080-inch for that arrive soon after our subscribers received their copies continue, in a volume only slightly diminished, as this is being written. The original story focused, as its title suggests, on ignition coils; it made much of motorcycle coils' shortcomings as compared with the automotive variety but only mentioned the possibility of a switch from the former to the latter. That was an oversight, as reader response made clear, and we followed the original story with "Coils II," in the September, 1975, issue.

Coils II was intended to provide the information necessary for the average reader to perform a coil transplant on his motorcycle. Most of those who attempted the modification got through the ordeal successfully and were quite satisfied with the results—at first. But, as some discovered, motorcycles' ignition weakness often proved to be mirrored by their entire electrical systems. Coils II said, of replacing bikes' standard coils with the automotive kind, "Somewhere there undoubtedly is a motorcycle that lacks the generating capacity to handle the added amperage, but the vast majority of bikes' systems won't even notice the difference." Experience has shown that we were wrong. Many more motorcycle electrical systems are operating close to deficit than we had imagined; further, we underestimated the current drain some motorcycles would feel when fitted with automotive coils. For these reasons, and because a substantial group of readers either missed or have systems actually perform, why their performance isn't nearly good enough, and a comprehensive plan to help you make your bike start and run better than ever.

By Gordon Jennings

lost the issues containing the first two stories, we present here all the important information from the earlier reports and add to it what we've learned about the coil transplant's implications in terms of electrical loading.

Before embarking on our initial investigation of motorcycle ignition systems we were prepared to delve deeply into electromagnetic esoterica. That wasn't necessary, because it soon became clear that the most meaningful yardstick was nothing more mysterious than sheer coil output voltage. Ignition systems that pump out voltages strong enough to dazzle Thor, the god of lightning and thunder, are best; those that strain to produce a Zippo-esque flicker are bad. Things like voltage rise-time and spark energy are important, but only secondarily—and these things are, in significant measure, automatically supplied in a system capable of delivering a lot of voltage to an engine's spark plugs.

The overriding importance of sheer voltage in ignition system performance plug gaps of around .080-inch for that purpose.

Motorcycles presently are exempted from federal exhaust emissions standards but not from the effects of the relationship between plug gap width and mixture tolerance. Check through a sampling of motorcycle owners manuals and you'll find that the plug gaps commonly recommended are in the .022- to .028-inch bracket; check with a sampling of motorcycle owners and you'll hear plenty of complaints about bikes being cold-blooded, and/or having a hesitation at certain throttle settings. Can there be some tie between the gap recommendations and the complaints? You bet there is: motorcycle carburetors are arranged, with respect to throat size and general characteristics, with flat-out performance in mind. Their mixture delivery at low engine speeds is at best an approximation, which introduces a great need for mixture tolerance in the engines they feed. Automotive engineers established, long before the advent of emissions control, that a neat balance between mixture tolerance, coil current draw and effective plug life existed when plug gap was established at .035-inch, and that balance presumed better air/fuel mixing than most motorcycle engines can expect. Small wonder, then, that motorcyclists notice in their bikes such symptoms of distress as cold-start reluctance and part-throttle surging.

COILS CONVERSION

Cycle has run an excellent set of articles telling us about the benefits of an automotive coil transplant. These articles have been very complete—up to the point of describing the procedure for installation on individual machines. I would like to partially fill this void with pertinent information on a coil switch for the GT185 Suzuki.

The Suzuki owner will have to buy the following materials: two each of coils, resistors, condensors, rubber spark plug lead boots, spark plug connector clips, and also two feet of 12-20 gauge wire, electrical tape, two

Remember those wire pairs I had you tape to the right and left side of the frame? Untape the right side orange wire and connect it to the resistor you mounted on the frame crossmember. Cut six inches from the wire you bought and attach this to the terminal opposite the orange wire on the resistor. Shift to the left side and do the se, except you will only need about four inches of wire.

Place the new coils in the frame in roughly the same place the stock coils were. The lips on the coil tops should be behind the throttle cable junction box and overlapping. For convenience sake, turn the positioned coils so that the negative electrical tape, two very large hose clamps, two medium sized hose clamps and two L-81 champion plugs. I bought all these supplies at our friendly neighborhood Coast to Coast store, which is significant only in the case of the coils. Mastercraft coils (12V) are small enough to fit under the tank, yet they work very well.

Procedure: Detach the tank and carefully observe the wiring to the coils. On one side you will see a black wire leading from a coil's front (i.e., the end that has the spark plug lead). This wire leads to the contacts; detach it and the orange wire leading to the other end of the coil. Temporarily tape these wires together on the frame side so you can tell which wires belong together and on which side later on. Shift to the other coil and do the same.

Dismount the coil bracket (coils and all) now that you have it disconnected. You are going to have to cut the spark leads off, as they are not detachable. Put the coils to one side and turn your attention to the spark leads. From the ends that you cut off remove ⅜- to ¾-inch of insulation and solder the spark plug clips on. Lubricate these clips and slip the rubber spark plug boots up over them until the bottom of the boot is level with the end of the clip. Test fit this assembly into the coil (automotive from now on) towers and be sure of a tight connection between the tower clips and your plug clips.

the positioned coils so that the negative (—) terminal is on the top. Hose-clamp the coils to frame using the two large clamps. Connect the wires from the resistors to their respective coils positive (+) terminals, and double check for a tight fit. This done, untape the two remaining wires (one white, one black) and connect them to their respective coils negative terminal.

Scrape the paint away from the main frame tube above the coils and hose-clamp a condenser bracket below the frame tube. Before tightening down the clamp, slip your condensers in the bracket so that they are tail to tail, one condenser facing to the right, one to the left. Now tighten the hose clamp and connect the condenser wires to their respective coils' negative terminal. If you are the nervous type, run what's left of your wire from the hose clamp to the engine cylinder head. Those phillips head screws on the top make great connections and this wire will ensure that your condensers are grounded.

Remove your NGK's (or whatever) and install the L-81's gapped to .040. Install the spark plug leads between the spark plugs and their respective coils.

After carefully going back over your work, cover each connection with liquid rubber to insulate it. Take the left engine cover off and remove the stock condensers, making sure the points are in good shape while you are down there. Slip the clips and your plug clips.

Next turn your attention to the resistors. Mount one of them eight inches behind the steering head bracket on the left small frame tube. Use one of the medium hose clamps and mount it on top of the tube. The second resistor should be heavily taped to the middle of the frame crossmember that the stock coil bracket mounted to. Mount this resistor so that its terminals are positioned vertically (up, that is) and the body is parallel to the frame tubes.

shape while you are down there. Slip the tank and engine cover back on, making 2669 sure to reconnect the fuel line.

Starting: Depress the choke and kick-start it. If it immediately revs to 8500 rpm, shut down and check the throttle cables down by the carbs; they are probably stretched tight. Maneuver them around your coils so they lay normally. Kick it over again. This time it should idle normally, though about 200 rpm faster. After about 10 seconds, lift the choke and watch it

● WE FIND OURSELVES IN THE ODD POSITION of having been right, and wrong, all at the same time. Here's how it happened: In the story "Coils III" we dismissed the idea of fitting four-cylinder Kawasakis and Hondas with automotive ignition coils by say-to two twin-lead spark coils, in an arrangement that would be fine if the coils were capable of delivering higher voltage. Stronger coils would let us use wider plug electrode gaps, which improve an engine's tolerance for less-than-perfect the real difficulty comes when you try to switch four coils with only two sets of ignition contacts. As we see it, this problem can be resolved (not necessarily with good results) by choosing from the following alternatives:

You could wire the paired coils to-das with automotive ignition coils by saying it wouldn't work. According to our understanding of the word "work" we were right; it turns out that a great many people give it a different interpretation. No sooner had Cycle's April issue been shipped than reader backlash began: "I've got four car coils on my Honda (or Z-1) and the setup works fine; you guys are wrong again, you never get anything right, and besides that your grandmothers wear army shoes."

Obviously, our brief comment on this subject was, if not as wrong as charged, then certainly too brief. It was inevitable that after we'd explained the benefits of really strong ignition systems, and demonstrated that ordinary car coils are a world better than the best found on motorcycles, everyone was going to start at least thinking about coil transplanting. It was especially inevitable that all the owners of big fours, who've demonstrated a commitment to performance with the bikes they ride, would be most interested. We should have explored this aspect of the whole coil-transplant subject in more detail; we didn't, and to that extent we unquestionably were wrong.

The basic difficulty facing everyone who's trying to replace a Honda, Suzuki or Kawasaki four's stock coils with automotive ignition coils is that these bikes have just two sets of ignition contact points. These contacts are used to switch current gine's tolerance for less-than-perfect carburetion, help to ease cold-start problems, and sometimes give peak power a boost. But none of the automotive coils has the required dual high-tension leads, and that means you have to be a bit inventive to even attempt the kind of one-coil-per-cylinder transplant that works so well on singles and twins.

At least one reader tried to splice a "Y" connection on each of two car coils' spark leads, hoping that they'd work like his bike's dual-lead coils. He found that his bike would only run on two cylinders: one per coil. Each coil's entire output was simply flowing to ground through the plug offering the least resistance.

Another reader wanted to know if it would be possible to connect a second spark lead to the coil case, insulate the case from the frame, and get two plugs to fire from a single coil in that fashion. That won't work either: coils' high-voltage windings have a common connection with the primary winding inside the case; conventional coils' cases are not even connected with anything inside.

If you want to use automotive coils on your big four-cylinder bike, you'll have to use four of them. That's inconvenient, because it isn't easy to find room to mount them, but the job doesn't have to be expensive: we haven't found anything better than K-Mart coils, which retail at our local store for $6.66 each. However, ing alternatives:

You could wire the paired coils together in a parallel circuit, with both negative primary terminals connected to a single set of points. This definitely won't work, as car coils will pull about seven amps unless the current is controlled with a ballast resister. The two coils, in a parallel circuit, would therefore draw no less than 14 amps, which would produce an almost immediate points-assembly failure. Most motorcycle ignition points are intended to carry an electrical current no greater than 2.5 amps.

So let's suppose you've tried that, bought a new set of points, and are ready to try again with some ballast-resister protection for your new contacts. If you leave the coils connected in a parallel circuit and insert a single ballast resister between coils and battery, you'll get a total current of about 3.5 to 4.0 amps across the points. They'll survive that for a while but it hardly matters because the coils will have to share that current, cutting each primary winding's supply to something less than two amps—and halving their output voltage. Thus, the full 30-kv (30,000-volt) zap you should get from any good American-made automotive ignition coil will have been reduced to a 15-kv fizzle, which is about what you get from the typical motorcycle coil.

You can add another ballast resister, using one per coil to get full-strength

MADE MAGNETO

BY GORDON JENNINGS

• One of these years I'm going to tire of playing Don Quixote to Jess Thomas' Sancho Panza. Jess very sensibly prefers to spend his time maintaining and fine-tuning factory-built racing bikes; I am always tilting windmills by creating my own racing equipment from a touring-motorcycle base. Predictably, Jess gets a good ride at nearly every race while I struggle with a seemingly endless sorting-out process. Still, all the problems and aggravations notwithstanding, I will probably continue battling the windmills simply because there is so much to be learned in do-it-yourself.

At this time last year, I began work on a new bike for the 1969 season: a Honda CB450-based road racer. My reasons for selecting this particular bike were one: it offered considerable potential, with double overhead camshafts and a five-speed transmission, and two; it was known for having a high degree of reliability. It was available (we had obtained one for a road test) and I thought it was about time for another try with a four-stroke engine after so many months with the window-valve wonders.

When embarking on a project of this sort, a lot of fundamental decisions must be made as to the shape things will take. But in this instance, most decisions had been made for me by others. The AMA rules require that near-standard frame and forks be used—unless you can get approval from those who manufactured your motorcycle to substitute. Honda has never approved anything but Honda equipment except for brakes, and I knew that the frame and forks that came with the bike would have to suffice, for better or for worse. Honda did, however, approve installation of a Fontana four-shoe front brake. I found that the tank, seat and fairing made for Harley-Davidson's KR would fit the Honda—although it was necessary to make a new bottom for the tank to fit down over the Honda frame. All the rest would be Honda, slightly modified.

This gave me all the basic hardware. It was still necessary to work out the details for the various systems, like carburetion and ignition. This last was most bothersome, because while I did not want to carry a battery on the bike, there was no magneto available that would fit without a lot of machining. The lads at Precision Machining had faced the same problem when building their very successful 450, and had ultimately used a Yamaha magneto—which required the fitting of special seals and cutting a new taper on the end of the Honda crankshaft.

One of the primary reasons PM had for going to that crankshaft-mounted magneto was to dispense with the stock Honda points and breaker-cam setup. They had used a standard battery/coil system, and found a serious misfire up in the 10,000 rpm range that would not go away. Changes in coils, and condensers, and points had no effect; the misfire was still with them. It was eliminated when they switched to the magneto.

But for all the machining required, I might very well have done the same. Unfortunately, I didn't have that much time to devote to an ignition system; an alternative would have to be found. The question was: what alternative? It was obvious that I could not expect good results with the standard ignition system. PM had tried that without success, and I knew that my CB 450 would misfire like mad if taken past the 9700 rpm red line. And there was my clue: it seemed just a little too pat that the misfire would occur so near the red line; perhaps Honda had built in the misfire

IT REALLY

A pumper carb is really the hot setup for any four stroke. We know 'cause we've tried it.

This is the letter that started the whole thing:

"I was quite interested in the article in the May issue of your magazine on the installation of a diaphragm type carburetor on a 360 Maico. It seems to me that a lot of four cycle machines would benefit from a similar setup.

"My 441 Victor BSA has always been a hard starter due mainly to the Amal concentric, which the local mechanics just can't seem to get tuned properly.

"Would it be possible for me to adapt the pumper unit you used to my 441? If so, would there be any special problems involved other than the ones you've mentioned in regards to the Maico? For instance, what happens to the line you ran from the manifold to the crankcase when the carb is adapted to the 441?

"If the McCulloch unit won't work, can you name one that will?" (Michael D. Staberg)

The McCulloch carburetor we were using, Mike, depended on a pressure pulse from the crankcase on a two-stroke to inject the fuel into the throat of the carburetor. With a four-cycle engine, it's a different ball game altogether.

The problem with a four-stroke installation was where to pick up this pressure pulse. We no longer had a crankcase with the necessary two-stroke characteristics to provide the puffing that was needed to operate our carburetor.

After a lot of head scratching, it was discovered there was a considerable pulse action in the exhaust system. The natural thing, therefore, would be to get the pulse off this portion of the engine and thereby utilize the exhaust system to actuate the diaphragm inside the carburetor. We're proud to announce it worked like a charm.

The only problem with the whole setup (and it really wasn't a problem) came about the first time fuel was poured into the tank: There is no real pulse in the exhaust system until the engine is running. This plus the fact that our carburetor was bone dry made it necessary to push the motorcycle about 10 or 15 feet to prime the carburetor.

Once the carburetor had filled with fuel, it was never necessary to push again. We might also mention that since there is no pulse in the exhaust system until the engine is running, it is necessary to keep fuel in the carburetor at all times.

The installation was ridiculously simple. The whole job took about an hour.

38mm DIAPHRAGM CARBURETOR

This carburetor thing is really getting out of hand. It seems like we're testing something new in this field each month. This time Kendick Engineering, 9520 DeSoto Ave., Chatsworth, CA. has hit the jackpot.

Their new 38mm diaphragm pumper pumps so much gas that the engine can't use it all, and any excess is pumped back into the tank. It might help to have a bit of background knowledge about the pumper carburetors before you can appreciate this new behemoth.

This new carburetor, if it can be called that, is named the Pressure Pulse Carburetor. As the name implies, it receives a pulse from the lower end of the engine telling it exactly how much fuel to deliver on the next stroke. Basically, this carburetor was designed for Go Kart engines, although it is now finding its way into the Snowmobile trade and other fields with rapid acceptance. We're sure that this doesn't sound like the motorcycle carburetor of tomorrow design, and possibly this is one reason it has been so overlooked by so many people in the motorcycle field.

By going into a little detail on the way this carburetor does its job, and how it differs from all other units, you will see that it is really a modern device. Most of us know that the carburetor's job is to meter and deliver the proper ratio of air-gas mix to the engine at each rpm level, from idle to maximum speed and back down again with an air-gas mixture of about 13-1 at all times. This is a tremendous job for a unit so small and it does it well. In reality the mix is changing up and down as the throttle is opened and closed and will vary from 10-1 to 100-1, although most of the time it is within a reasonable area of the 13-1 ratio that is optimum. It's rather hard for us to detect these differences due to the fact that they happen so fast and pass so quickly; but the engine reacts to them, both in response and power. So the key is to deliver the exact amount at all times with the unit that we can attach to the engine that will pass the necessary air. Most motorcycles today could use a larger carburetor for pure top speed, and to make it breathe better. However, in going to a large carburetor bore, the low end response suffers greatly. Therefore, the manufacturer has to settle for a bore diameter that will create enough venturi action to pull the liquid fuel from the float bowl well below the main discharge nozzle at low engine rpm when the air flow is rather slow in speed.

The diaphragm carburetor is now available in a larger size to work on any large displacement two-stroke single.

In the Pressure Pulse Carburetor we have a straight bore unit with no venturi at all. This helps air flow for better breathing, because the gas is actually

Greater fuel delivery from your pumper carburetor is easy — Here's how

By Bob Braverman

The series we have run in the past few months regarding the diaphragm carburetors has proved to be an overwhelming success. What started out to be a possible cure for a hard-starting 360 Maico has mushroomed into a boon for quite a number of the dirt riders hereabouts.

Inasmuch as a diaphragm carburetor is a completely new unit to most motorcyclists, they are rather reluctant to get in there and modify anything because they don't really know what they are doing. In a way, though, this is a good thing. This prevents them from possibly damaging something inadvertently. We have found, on some of the larger displacement two-strokes, there is a problem with fuel delivery in sufficient quantities. This sort of thing can prove to be disastrous on a hot summer day while pounding along at high speeds in the rough stuff.

When reports began to filter in about some of the larger displacement machines running out of gas at the top end, we immediately began to look into the possible causes and cures for this malady. It was then we discovered it was quite a simple matter to increase the pumper section output. As a matter of fact, another 20 or 25% is not hard to come by. This is more than enough to supply even the thirstiest 360.

Upon disassembly of the carburetor, we found that the McCulloch Corporation is rather casual in their manufac-

Days of Yore § Pumper Carb 3 # 2

Last month, we published a story on diaphragm carburetor theory. Little did we realize what we were starting. Since that time, we have been deluged with requests from people who would like to know how to install this particular type carburetor on their own piece of transportation or sporting equipment.

The installation is quite simple. However, there are certain things that must be done, and in an effort to clarify these points, we thought it best to show a typical installation — in this case, my own 360 Maico. The truth of the matter is, the Maico is the reason this whole carburetor thing came about in the first place. While the machine has got to be one of the best things going it is hard to start when hot, and should you drop it on the right side, disaster is sure to follow. The float bowl being mounted on the left side of the carburetor allows fuel to pour into the engine and instantly floods it. This, however, is not unusual, as a number of other machines, similar in design, are prone to do the same thing, should the rider err and fall.

In an effort to circumvent this frustrating problem, I cast about looking for a carburetor that wouldn't have these hard starting tendencies. Then I remembered the old go kart days, when we used the diaphragm or pressure pulse carburetor. It was at this point that I decided to give it a try, for a number of reasons. First of all, it made no difference in what attitude the motorcycle was; upside down or right side up, the engine ran just as well.

to be wonderful stuff, a magic elixir. All of Washington's talking heads—yea, even the Great Oz himself—hinted that we might banish energy crisis worries with alcohol; not in martinis, but mixed with gasoline. The mixture, gasohol, was to be made available everywhere in 20-proof form, and we were told of headier blends awaiting us in a brighter future.

In time, the talk implied, we would be wringing alcohol out of sunflower stalks and substituting it for imported petroleum. Gasohol, or perhaps straight alcohol, would end our often-humiliating bondage to those imports. Gasohol (the voices said) would balance our international trade accounts, employ the jobless, raise the American heartland's sturdy yeomen to a higher prosperity and return to us the service station attendant who wiped windshields and checked oil. Gasohol would do all this and . . . and make our vehicles' engines run more efficiently, powerfully, reliably, etc.

There was room for everyone on the big gasohol bandwagon. Politicians of every stripe hastened to get aboard because in the summer of '79 the vox populi was heard to call for Action, and one had only to say the magic word "gasohol" to be taken as a Man of it.

Nobody of any consequence in Washington had a clear understanding of whether the gasohol scheme would town in which the blue-smoke-and-mirrors construction of nebulae routinely passes for serious activity and a future beyond the next election does not exist. In Washington they often operate on the Nixon Principle, which presumes that the average American has the intellect and attention-span of a chicken. Whether gasohol was promising was beside the point; it was promisable, thus golden.

Ecologists went for gasohol in a surprisingly large way for people nursing a phobia about internal combustion. Maybe it was the organically grown aura surrounding alcohol, and buzz-phrases like "renewable resource." Maybe they envisioned an America lush with carefully tended, fermentable bio-mass; all its days ending in unpolluted sunsets watched over by the ghost of John Muir. Perhaps they really thought that gasohol, like bicycle racks, had the power to neutralize ratty old VW buses' exhaust emissions. Anything is possible in people who honestly believe that nature values the whale above smallpox virus or treponema pallida.

And the rest of us? We were favorably disposed toward the gasohol concept, though naturally wary of anything being offered up as a panacea by the folks in Oz on the Potomac. Gasohol's prospects did seem less dim than the chances that our new Department of Energy (born—program straightened out. But the clincher was that gasohol offered the perfectly entrancing hope that we might one day soon be able to tell certain burnoosed despots in the Middle East to take their oil and give themselves a cosmic enema with it.

Relative calm has been restored to the international petro-market, and getting a vehicle's tank filled is once again only a matter of money. Still, sure as moonbeams, one of these days the Arabs are going to suffer another of their major politico-religious fits and Oil Crisis III (or is it IV?) will be upon us. That's when the presently moribund gasohol scheme will be resuscitated, because we are no better prepared for oil supply interruptions than we were in '73 and '79. Long gas lines are sure to form, and demands for action again heard, and in due course another trickle of gasohol will be established. You could end up buying some of that trickle for your motorcycle, so you should know something about mixed gasoline and alcohol as a motor fuel.

During the first great gasohol craze, a few voices, largely drowned in the uproar, asked what kind of alcohol would be used for the magical 10-percent stretching of our fuel supplies. Would it be plain old methanol, commonly known as wood alcohol and to chemists as $CH_3OH$? Was it the potable ethanol, grain

GENESIS

001:001 In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

001:002 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

001:003 And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

001:004 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

001:005 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.

001:006 And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

001:007 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.

001:008 And God called the firmament Heaven. And the evening and the morning were the second day.

001:009 And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

001:010 And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

001:011 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

001:012 And the earth brought forth grass, and herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

001:013 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

001:014 And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years:

001:015 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

001:016 And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

001:017 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth, 001:018 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

001:019 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

001:020 And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.

001:021 And God created great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

001:022 And God blessed them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

001:023 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

001:024 And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

001:025 And God made the beast of the earth after his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

001:026 And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.

001:027 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.

001:028 And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.

001:029 And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat.

001:030 And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat: and it was so.

001:031 And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

002:001 Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them.

002:002 And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.
002:003 And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made.
002:004 These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,
002:005 And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground.
002:006 But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground.
002:007 And the LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.
002:008 And the LORD God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed.
002:009 And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.
002:010 And a river went out of Eden to water the garden; and from thence it was parted, and became into four heads.
002:011 The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold;
002:012 And the gold of that land is good: there is bdellium and the onyx stone.
002:013 And the name of the second river is Gihon: the same is it that compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia.

002:014 And the name of the third river is Hiddekel: that is it which goeth toward the east of Assyria. And the fourth river is Euphrates.

002:015 And the LORD God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it.

002:016 And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat:

002:017 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

002:018 And the LORD God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him.

002:019 And out of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

002:020 And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

002:021 And the LORD God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof;

002:022 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

002:023 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man.

002:024 Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

002:025 And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not ashamed.

003:001 Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

003:002 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

003:003 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

003:004 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

003:005 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

003:006 And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat.

003:007 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.

003:008 And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

003:009 And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

003:010 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

003:011 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

003:012 And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

003:013 And the LORD God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

003:014 And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

003:015 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel.

003:016 Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.

003:017 And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;

003:018 Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field;

003:019 In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

003:020 And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living.

003:021 Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God make coats of skins, and clothed them.

003:022 And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever:

003:023 Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken.

003:024 So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

004:001 And Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

004:002 And she again bare his brother Abel. And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.

004:003 And in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

004:004 And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect unto Abel and to his offering:

004:005 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

004:006 And the LORD said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

004:007 If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door. And unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

004:008 And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.

004:009 And the LORD said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

004:010 And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground.

004:011 And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand;
004:012 When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.
004:013 And Cain said unto the LORD, My punishment is greater than I can bear.
004:014 Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, that every one that findeth me shall slay me.
004:015 And the LORD said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the LORD set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.
004:016 And Cain went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.
004:017 And Cain knew his wife; and she conceived, and bare Enoch: and he builded a city, and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch.
004:018 And unto Enoch was born Irad: and Irad begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat Lamech.
004:019 And Lamech took unto him two wives: the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.
004:020 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.
004:021 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ.
004:022 And Zillah, she also bare Tubalcain, an instructer of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubalcain was Naamah.

004:023 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, Hear my voice; ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt.

004:024 If Cain shall be avenged sevenfold, truly Lamech seventy and sevenfold.

004:025 And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name Seth: For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

004:026 And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enos: then began men to call upon the name of the LORD.

005:001 This is the book of the generations of Adam. In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him;

005:002 Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created.

005:003 And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, and after his image; and called his name Seth:

005:004 And the days of Adam after he had begotten Seth were eight hundred years: and he begat sons and daughters:

005:005 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died.

005:006 And Seth lived an hundred and five years, and begat Enos:

005:007 And Seth lived after he begat Enos eight hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:008 And all the days of Seth were nine hundred and twelve years: and he died.

005:009 And Enos lived ninety years, and begat Cainan:

005:010 And Enos lived after he begat Cainan eight hundred and fifteen years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:011 And all the days of Enos were nine hundred and five years: and he died.

005:012 And Cainan lived seventy years and begat Mahalaleel:

005:013 And Cainan lived after he begat Mahalaleel eight hundred and forty years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:014 And all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years: and he died.

005:015 And Mahalaleel lived sixty and five years, and begat Jared:

005:016 And Mahalaleel lived after he begat Jared eight hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:017 And all the days of Mahalaleel were eight hundred ninety and five years: and he died.

005:018 And Jared lived an hundred sixty and two years, and he begat Enoch:

005:019 And Jared lived after he begat Enoch eight hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:020 And all the days of Jared were nine hundred sixty and two years: and he died.

005:021 And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat Methuselah:

005:022 And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:023 And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years:

005:024 And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.

005:025 And Methuselah lived an hundred eighty and seven years, and begat Lamech.

005:026 And Methuselah lived after he begat Lamech seven hundred eighty and two years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:027 And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years: and he died.

005:028 And Lamech lived an hundred eighty and two years, and begat a son:

005:029 And he called his name Noah, saying, This same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground which the LORD hath cursed.

005:030 And Lamech lived after he begat Noah five hundred ninety and five years, and begat sons and daughters:

005:031 And all the days of Lamech were seven hundred seventy and seven years: and he died.

005:032 And Noah was five hundred years old: and Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

006:001 And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

006:002 That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.

006:003 And the LORD said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years.

006:004 There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

006:005 And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.

006:006 And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.

006:007 And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; both man, and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them.

006:008 But Noah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

006:009 These are the generations of Noah: Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God.

006:010 And Noah begat three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

006:011 The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence.

006:012 And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

006:013 And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.

006:014 Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

006:015 And this is the fashion which thou shalt make it of: The length of the ark shall be three hundred cubits, the breadth of it fifty cubits, and the height of it thirty cubits.

006:016 A window shalt thou make to the ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it above; and the door of the ark shalt thou set in the side thereof; with lower, second, and third stories shalt thou make it.

006:017 And, behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; and every thing that is in the earth shall die.

006:018 But with thee will I establish my covenant; and thou shalt come into the ark, thou, and thy sons, and thy wife, and thy sons' wives with thee.

006:019 And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark, to keep them alive with thee; they shall be male and female.

006:020 Of fowls after their kind, and of cattle after their kind, of every creeping thing of the earth after his kind, two of every sort shall come unto thee, to keep them alive.

006:021 And take thou unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather it to thee; and it shall be for food for thee, and for them.

006:022 Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

007:001 And the LORD said unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.

007:002 Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female: and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female.

007:003 Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

007:004 For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the earth.

007:005 And Noah did according unto all that the LORD commanded him.

007:006 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

007:007 And Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

007:008 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth,

007:009 There went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

007:010 And it came to pass after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

007:011 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.

007:012 And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

007:013 In the selfsame day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark;

007:014 They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.

007:015 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

007:016 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the LORD shut him in.

007:017 And the flood was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

007:018 And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

007:019 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

007:020 Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

007:021 And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

007:022 All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

007:023 And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

007:024 And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

008:001 And God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters asswaged;

008:002 The fountains also of the deep and the windows of heaven were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained;

008:003 And the waters returned from off the earth continually: and after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

008:004 And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat.

008:005 And the waters decreased continually until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

008:006 And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened the window of the ark which he had made:

008:007 And he sent forth a raven, which went forth to and fro, until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

008:008 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground;

008:009 But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned unto him into the ark, for the waters were on the face of the whole earth: then he put forth his hand, and took her, and pulled her in unto him into the ark.

008:010 And he stayed yet other seven days; and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark;

008:011 And the dove came in to him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was an olive leaf pluckt off: so Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

008:012 And he stayed yet other seven days; and sent forth the dove; which returned not again unto him any more.

008:013 And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year, in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth: and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

008:014 And in the second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

008:015 And God spake unto Noah, saying,

008:016 Go forth of the ark, thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

008:017 Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that they may breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

008:018 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

008:019 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their kinds, went forth out of the ark.

008:020 And Noah builded an altar unto the LORD; and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar.

008:021 And the LORD smelled a sweet savour; and the LORD said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done.

008:022 While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

009:001 And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

009:002 And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered.

009:003 Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green herb have I given you all things.

009:004 But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

009:005 And surely your blood of your lives will I require; at the hand of every beast will I require it, and at the hand of man; at the hand of every man's brother will I require the life of man.

009:006 Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man.

009:007 And you, be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

009:008 And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

009:009 And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

009:010 And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth.

009:011 And I will establish my covenant with you, neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

009:012 And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

009:013 I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

009:014 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

009:015 And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

009:016 And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth.

009:017 And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.

009:018 And the sons of Noah, that went forth of the ark, were Shem, and Ham, and Japheth: and Ham is the father of Canaan.

009:019 These are the three sons of Noah: and of them was the whole earth overspread.

009:020 And Noah began to be an husbandman, and he planted a vineyard:

009:021 And he drank of the wine, and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent.

009:022 And Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren without.

009:023 And Shem and Japheth took a garment, and laid it upon both their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the nakedness of their father; and their faces were backward, and they saw not their father's nakedness.

009:024 And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him.

009:025 And he said, Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

009:026 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

009:027 God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant.

009:028 And Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years.

009:029 And all the days of Noah were nine hundred and fifty years: and he died.

---

010:001 Now these are the generations of the sons of Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth: and unto them were sons born after the flood.

010:002 The sons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

010:003 And the sons of Gomer; Ashkenaz, and Riphath, and Togarmah.

010:004 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim.

010:005 By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations.

010:006 And the sons of Ham; Cush, and Mizraim, and Phut, and Canaan.
010:007 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabtah, and Raamah, and Sabtechah: and the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.
010:008 And Cush begat Nimrod: he began to be a mighty one in the earth.
010:009 He was a mighty hunter before the LORD: wherefore it is said, Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the LORD.
010:010 And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel, and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar.
010:011 Out of that land went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh, and the city Rehoboth, and Calah, 010:012 And Resen between Nineveh and Calah: the same is a great city.
010:013 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, 010:014 And Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (out of whom came Philistim,) and Caphtorim.
010:015 And Canaan begat Sidon his first born, and Heth,
010:016 And the Jebusite, and the Amorite, and the Girgasite,
010:017 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,
010:018 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite: and afterward were the families of the Canaanites spread abroad.
010:019 And the border of the Canaanites was from Sidon, as thou comest to Gerar, unto Gaza; as thou goest, unto Sodom, and Gomorrah, and Admah, and Zeboim, even unto Lasha.
010:020 These are the sons of Ham, after their families, after their tongues, in their countries, and in their nations.
010:021 Unto Shem also, the father of all the children of Eber, the brother of Japheth the elder, even to him were children born.

010:022 The children of Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram.

010:023 And the children of Aram; Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and Mash.

010:024 And Arphaxad begat Salah; and Salah begat Eber.

010:025 And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of one was Peleg; for in his days was the earth divided; and his brother's name was Joktan.

010:026 And Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah,

010:027 And Hadoram, and Uzal, and Diklah,

010:028 And Obal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

010:029 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab: all these were the sons of Joktan.

010:030 And their dwelling was from Mesha, as thou goest unto Sephar a mount of the east.

010:031 These are the sons of Shem, after their families, after their tongues, in their lands, after their nations.

010:032 These are the families of the sons of Noah, after their generations, in their nations: and by these were the nations divided in the earth after the flood.

---

011:001 And the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech.

011:002 And it came to pass, as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there.

011:003 And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for morter.

011:004 And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

011:005 And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

011:006 And the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.

011:007 Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.

011:008 So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

011:009 Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

011:010 These are the generations of Shem: Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood:

011:011 And Shem lived after he begat Arphaxad five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:012 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty years, and begat Salah:

011:013 And Arphaxad lived after he begat Salah four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:014 And Salah lived thirty years, and begat Eber:

011:015 And Salah lived after he begat Eber four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:016 And Eber lived four and thirty years, and begat Peleg:

011:017 And Eber lived after he begat Peleg four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:018 And Peleg lived thirty years, and begat Reu:

011:019 And Peleg lived after he begat Reu two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:020 And Reu lived two and thirty years, and begat Serug:

011:021 And Reu lived after he begat Serug two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:022 And Serug lived thirty years, and begat Nahor:

011:023 And Serug lived after he begat Nahor two hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:024 And Nahor lived nine and twenty years, and begat Terah:

011:025 And Nahor lived after he begat Terah an hundred and nineteen years, and begat sons and daughters.

011:026 And Terah lived seventy years, and begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran.

011:027 Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot.

011:028 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Chaldees.

011:029 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: the name of Abram's wife was Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife, Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah.

011:030 But Sarai was barren; she had no child.

011:031 And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there.

011:032 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

012:001 Now the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

012:002 And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

012:003 And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

012:004 So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

012:005 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

012:006 And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land.

012:007 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.

012:008 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Bethel, and pitched his tent, having Bethel on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

012:009 And Abram journeyed, going on still toward the south.

012:010 And there was a famine in the land: and Abram went down into Egypt to sojourn there; for the famine was grievous in the land.

012:011 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art a fair woman to look upon:

012:012 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife: and they will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

012:013 Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee.

012:014 And it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians beheld the woman that she was very fair.

012:015 The princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house.

012:016 And he entreated Abram well for her sake: and he had sheep, and oxen, and he asses, and menservants, and maidservants, and she asses, and camels.

012:017 And the LORD plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai Abram's wife.

012:018 And Pharaoh called Abram and said, What is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

012:019 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

012:020 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

---

013:001 And Abram went up out of Egypt, he, and his wife, and all that he had, and Lot with him, into the south.

013:002 And Abram was very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

013:003 And he went on his journeys from the south even to Bethel, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Hai;

013:004 Unto the place of the altar, which he had make there at the first: and there Abram called on the name of the LORD.

013:005 And Lot also, which went with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and tents.

013:006 And the land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

013:007 And there was a strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle: and the Canaanite and the Perizzite dwelled then in the land.

013:008 And Abram said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.

013:009 Is not the whole land before thee? separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

013:010 And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, as thou comest unto Zoar.

013:011 Then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

013:012 Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

013:013 But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

013:014 And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

013:015 For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.

013:016 And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

013:017 Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

013:018 Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.

014:001 And it came to pass in the days of Amraphel king of Shinar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Chedorlaomer king of Elam, and Tidal king of nations;

014:002 That these made war with Bera king of Sodom, and with Birsha king of Gomorrah, Shinab king of Admah, and Shemeber king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela, which is Zoar.

014:003 All these were joined together in the vale of Siddim, which is the salt sea.

014:004 Twelve years they served Chedorlaomer, and in the thirteenth year they rebelled.

014:005 And in the fourteenth year came Chedorlaomer, and the kings that were with him, and smote the Rephaims in Ashteroth Karnaim, and the Zuzims in Ham, and the Emins in Shaveh Kiriathaim, 014:006 And the Horites in their mount Seir, unto Elparan, which is by the wilderness.

014:007 And they returned, and came to Enmishpat, which is Kadesh, and smote all the country of the Amalekites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in Hazezontamar.

014:008 And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorrah, and the king of Admah, and the king of Zeboiim, and the king of Bela (the same is Zoar;) and they joined battle with them in the vale of Siddim;

014:009 With Chedorlaomer the king of Elam, and with Tidal king of nations, and Amraphel king of Shinar, and Arioch king of Ellasar; four kings with five.

014:010 And the vale of Siddim was full of slimepits; and the kings of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there; and they that remained fled to the mountain.

014:011 And they took all the goods of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals, and went their way.

014:012 And they took Lot, Abram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed.

014:013 And there came one that had escaped, and told Abram the Hebrew; for he dwelt in the plain of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Eshcol, and brother of Aner: and these were confederate with Abram.

014:014 And when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed his trained servants, born in his own house, three hundred and eighteen, and pursued them unto Dan.

014:015 And he divided himself against them, he and his servants, by night, and smote them, and pursued them unto Hobah, which is on the left hand of Damascus.

014:016 And he brought back all the goods, and also brought again his brother Lot, and his goods, and the women also, and the people.

014:017 And the king of Sodom went out to meet him after his return from the slaughter of Chedorlaomer, and of the kings that were with him, at the valley of Shaveh, which is the king's dale.

014:018 And Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he was the priest of the most high God.

014:019 And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth:

014:020 And blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes of all.

014:021 And the king of Sodom said unto Abram, Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself.

014:022 And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth,

014:023 That I will not take from a thread even to a shoelatchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldest say, I have made Abram rich:

014:024 Save only that which the young men have eaten, and the portion of the men which went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre; let them take their portion.

015:001 After these things the word of the LORD came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward.

015:002 And Abram said, LORD God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

015:003 And Abram said, Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, one born in my house is mine heir.

015:004 And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

015:005 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and he said unto him, So shall thy seed be.

015:006 And he believed in the LORD; and he counted it to him for righteousness.

015:007 And he said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

015:008 And he said, LORD God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

015:009 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove, and a young pigeon.

015:010 And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but the birds divided he not.

015:011 And when the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.

015:012 And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.

015:013 And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not their's, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years;

015:014 And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance.

015:015 And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age.

015:016 But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.

015:017 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp that passed between those pieces.

015:018 In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates:

015:019 The Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites,

015:020 And the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims,

015:021 And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.

016:001 Now Sarai Abram's wife bare him no children: and she had an handmaid, an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar.

016:002 And Sarai said unto Abram, Behold now, the LORD hath restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her. And Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

016:003 And Sarai Abram's wife took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife.

016:004 And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was despised in her eyes.

016:005 And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee: I have given my maid into thy bosom; and when she saw that she had conceived, I was despised in her eyes: the LORD judge between me and thee.

016:006 But Abram said unto Sarai, Behold, thy maid is in thine hand; do to her as it pleaseth thee. And when Sarai dealt hardly with her, she fled from her face.

016:007 And the angel of the LORD found her by a fountain of water in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way to Shur.

016:008 And he said, Hagar, Sarai's maid, whence camest thou? and whither wilt thou go? And she said, I flee from the face of my mistress Sarai.

016:009 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands.

016:010 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude.

016:011 And the angel of the LORD said unto her, Behold, thou art with child and shalt bear a son, and shalt call his name Ishmael; because the LORD hath heard thy affliction.

016:012 And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him; and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

016:013 And she called the name of the LORD that spake unto her, Thou God seest me: for she said, Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?

016:014 Wherefore the well was called Beerlahairoi; behold, it is between Kadesh and Bered.

016:015 And Hagar bare Abram a son: and Abram called his son's name, which Hagar bare, Ishmael.

016:016 And Abram was fourscore and six years old, when Hagar bare Ishmael to Abram.

017:001 And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect.

017:002 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

017:003 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying, 017:004 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.

017:005 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

017:006 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee.

017:007 And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

017:008 And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

017:009 And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

017:010 This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised.

017:011 And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt me and you.

017:012 And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed.

017:013 He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.

017:014 And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken my covenant.

017:015 And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be.

017:016 And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her.

017:017 Then Abraham fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

017:018 And Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee!

017:019 And God said, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

017:020 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation.

017:021 But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

017:022 And he left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.

017:023 And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house; and circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the selfsame day, as God had said unto him.

017:024 And Abraham was ninety years old and nine, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

017:025 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old, when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

017:026 In the selfsame day was Abraham circumcised, and Ishmael his son.

017:027 And all the men of his house, born in the house, and bought with money of the stranger, were circumcised with him.

018:001 And the LORD appeared unto him in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day;

018:002 And he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

018:003 And said, My LORD, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant:

018:004 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree:

018:005 And I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: for therefore are ye come to your servant. And they said, So do, as thou hast said.

018:006 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make ready quickly three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

018:007 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetcht a calf tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

018:008 And he took butter, and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and they did eat.

018:009 And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, in the tent.

018:010 And he said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life; and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent door, which was behind him.

018:011 Now Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women.

018:012 Therefore Sarah laughed within herself, saying, After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also?

018:013 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

018:014 Is any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son.

018:015 Then Sarah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

018:016 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way.

018:017 And the LORD said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

018:018 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

018:019 For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

018:020 And the LORD said, Because the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous;

018:021 I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, I will know.

018:022 And the men turned their faces from thence, and went toward Sodom: but Abraham stood yet before the LORD.

018:023 And Abraham drew near, and said, Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

018:024 Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

018:025 That be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked: and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

018:026 And the LORD said, If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

018:027 And Abraham answered and said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am but dust and ashes:

018:028 Peradventure there shall lack five of the fifty righteous: wilt thou destroy all the city for lack of five? And he said, If I find there forty and five, I will not destroy it.

018:029 And he spake unto him yet again, and said, Peradventure there shall be forty found there. And he said, I will not do it for forty's sake.

018:030 And he said unto him, Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak: Peradventure there shall thirty be found there. And he said, I will not do it, if I find thirty there.

018:031 And he said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD: Peradventure there shall be twenty found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for twenty's sake.

018:032 And he said, Oh let not the LORD be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: Peradventure ten shall be found there. And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake.

018:033 And the LORD went his way, as soon as he had left communing with Abraham: and Abraham returned unto his place.

019:001 And there came two angels to Sodom at even; and Lot sat in the gate of Sodom: and Lot seeing them rose up to meet them; and he bowed himself with his face toward the ground;

019:002 And he said, Behold now, my lords, turn in, I pray you, into your servant's house, and tarry all night, and wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early, and go on your ways. And they said, Nay; but we will abide in the street all night.

019:003 And he pressed upon them greatly; and they turned in unto him, and entered into his house; and he made them a feast, and did bake unleavened bread, and they did eat.

019:004 But before they lay down, the men of the city, even the men of Sodom, compassed the house round, both old and young, all the people from every quarter:

019:005 And they called unto Lot, and said unto him, Where are the men which came in to thee this night? bring them out unto us, that we may know them.

019:006 And Lot went out at the door unto them, and shut the door after him, 019:007 And said, I pray you, brethren, do not so wickedly.

019:008 Behold now, I have two daughters which have not known man; let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof.

019:009 And they said, Stand back. And they said again, This one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee, than with them. And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.

019:010 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

019:011 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness, both small and great: so that they wearied themselves to find the door.

019:012 And the men said unto Lot, Hast thou here any besides? son in law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place:

019:013 For we will destroy this place, because the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; and the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

019:014 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons in law, which married his daughters, and said, Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons in law.

019:015 And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city.

019:016 And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the LORD being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city.

019:017 And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed.

019:018 And Lot said unto them, Oh, not so, my LORD:

019:019 Behold now, thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast shewed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die:

019:020 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh, let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

019:021 And he said unto him, See, I have accepted thee concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

019:022 Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do anything till thou be come thither. Therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.

019:023 The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

019:024 Then the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven;

019:025 And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

019:026 But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

019:027 And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where he stood before the LORD:

019:028 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

019:029 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

019:030 And Lot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

019:031 And the firstborn said unto the younger, Our father is old, and there is not a man in the earth to come in unto us after the manner of all the earth:

019:032 Come, let us make our father drink wine, and we will lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

019:033 And they made their father drink wine that night: and the firstborn went in, and lay with her father; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

019:034 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the firstborn said unto the younger, Behold, I lay yesternight with my father: let us make him drink wine this night also; and go thou in, and lie with him, that we may preserve seed of our father.

019:035 And they made their father drink wine that night also: and the younger arose, and lay with him; and he perceived not when she lay down, nor when she arose.

019:036 Thus were both the daughters of Lot with child by their father.

019:037 And the first born bare a son, and called his name Moab: the same is the father of the Moabites unto this day.

019:038 And the younger, she also bare a son, and called his name Benammi: the same is the father of the children of Ammon unto this day.

---

020:001 And Abraham journeyed from thence toward the south country, and dwelled between Kadesh and Shur, and sojourned in Gerar.

020:002 And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah.

020:003 But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife.

020:004 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

020:005 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart and innocency of my hands have I done this.
020:006 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.
020:007 Now therefore restore the man his wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.
020:008 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.
020:009 Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? and what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me and on my kingdom a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought not to be done.
020:010 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?
020:011 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake.
020:012 And yet indeed she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.
020:013 And it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt shew unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother.
020:014 And Abimelech took sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and womenservants, and gave them unto Abraham, and restored him Sarah his wife.

020:015 And Abimelech said, Behold, my land is before thee: dwell where it pleaseth thee.

020:016 And unto Sarah he said, Behold, I have given thy brother a thousand pieces of silver: behold, he is to thee a covering of the eyes, unto all that are with thee, and with all other: thus she was reproved.

020:017 So Abraham prayed unto God: and God healed Abimelech, and his wife, and his maidservants; and they bare children.

020:018 For the LORD had fast closed up all the wombs of the house of Abimelech, because of Sarah Abraham's wife.

---

021:001 And the LORD visited Sarah as he had said, and the LORD did unto Sarah as he had spoken.

021:002 For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him.

021:003 And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bare to him, Isaac.

021:004 And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac being eight days old, as God had commanded him.

021:005 And Abraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him.

021:006 And Sarah said, God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear will laugh with me.

021:007 And she said, Who would have said unto Abraham, that Sarah should have given children suck? for I have born him a son in his old age.

021:008 And the child grew, and was weaned: and Abraham made a great feast the same day that Isaac was weaned.

021:009 And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had born unto Abraham, mocking.

021:010 Wherefore she said unto Abraham, Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac.

021:011 And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's sight because of his son.

021:012 And God said unto Abraham, Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

021:013 And also of the son of the bondwoman will I make a nation, because he is thy seed.

021:014 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and took bread, and a bottle of water, and gave it unto Hagar, putting it on her shoulder, and the child, and sent her away: and she departed, and wandered in the wilderness of Beersheba.

021:015 And the water was spent in the bottle, and she cast the child under one of the shrubs.

021:016 And she went, and sat her down over against him a good way off, as it were a bow shot: for she said, Let me not see the death of the child. And she sat over against him, and lift up her voice, and wept.

021:017 And God heard the voice of the lad; and the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, What aileth thee, Hagar? fear not; for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

021:018 Arise, lift up the lad, and hold him in thine hand; for I will make him a great nation.

021:019 And God opened her eyes, and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink.

021:020 And God was with the lad; and he grew, and dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer.

021:021 And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran: and his mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt.

021:022 And it came to pass at that time, that Abimelech and Phichol the chief captain of his host spake unto Abraham, saying, God is with thee in all that thou doest:

021:023 Now therefore swear unto me here by God that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

021:024 And Abraham said, I will swear.

021:025 And Abraham reproved Abimelech because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.

021:026 And Abimelech said, I wot not who hath done this thing; neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to day.

021:027 And Abraham took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.

021:028 And Abraham set seven ewe lambs of the flock by themselves.

021:029 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

021:030 And he said, For these seven ewe lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they may be a witness unto me, that I have digged this well.

021:031 Wherefore he called that place Beersheba; because there they sware both of them.

021:032 Thus they made a covenant at Beersheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.

021:033 And Abraham planted a grove in Beersheba, and called there on the name of the LORD, the everlasting God.

021:034 And Abraham sojourned in the Philistines' land many days.

022:001 And it came to pass after these things, that God did tempt Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham: and he said, Behold, here I am.

022:002 And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

022:003 And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him.

022:004 Then on the third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

022:005 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.

022:006 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife; and they went both of them together.

022:007 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood: but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?

022:008 And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering: so they went both of them together.

022:009 And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and laid him on the altar upon the wood.

022:010 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

022:011 And the angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham: and he said, Here am I.

022:012 And he said, Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him: for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me.

022:013 And Abraham lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold behind him a ram caught in a thicket by his horns: and Abraham went and took the ram, and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son.

022:014 And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovahjireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

022:015 And the angel of the LORD called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time,

022:016 And said, By myself have I sworn, saith the LORD, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son:

022:017 That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies;

022:018 And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.

022:019 So Abraham returned unto his young men, and they rose up and went together to Beersheba; and Abraham dwelt at Beersheba.

022:020 And it came to pass after these things, that it was told Abraham, saying, Behold, Milcah, she hath also born children unto thy brother Nahor;

022:021 Huz his firstborn, and Buz his brother, and Kemuel the father of Aram, 022:022 And Chesed, and Hazo, and Pildash, and Jidlaph, and Bethuel.

022:023 And Bethuel begat Rebekah: these eight Milcah did bear to Nahor, Abraham's brother.

022:024 And his concubine, whose name was Reumah, she bare also Tebah, and Gaham, and Thahash, and Maachah.

---

023:001 And Sarah was an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

023:002 And Sarah died in Kirjatharba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

023:003 And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying, 023:004 I am a stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a buryingplace with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight.

023:005 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him, 023:006 Hear us, my lord: thou art a mighty prince among us: in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead; none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

023:007 And Abraham stood up, and bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

023:008 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight; hear me, and intreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar, 023:009 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah, which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for as much money as it is worth he shall give it me for a possession of a buryingplace amongst you.

023:010 And Ephron dwelt among the children of Heth: and Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate of his city, saying, 023:011 Nay, my lord, hear me: the field give I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

023:012 And Abraham bowed down himself before the people of the land.

023:013 And he spake unto Ephron in the audience of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

023:014 And Ephron answered Abraham, saying unto him,

023:015 My lord, hearken unto me: the land is worth four hundred shekels of silver; what is that betwixt me and thee? bury therefore thy dead.

023:016 And Abraham hearkened unto Ephron; and Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver, which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant.

023:017 And the field of Ephron which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure 023:018 Unto Abraham for a possession in the presence of the children of Heth, before all that went in at the gate of his city.

023:019 And after this, Abraham buried Sarah his wife in the cave of the field of Machpelah before Mamre: the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan.

023:020 And the field, and the cave that is therein, were made sure unto Abraham for a possession of a buryingplace by the sons of Heth.

---

024:001 And Abraham was old, and well stricken in age: and the LORD had blessed Abraham in all things.

024:002 And Abraham said unto his eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all that he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh:

024:003 And I will make thee swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell:

024:004 But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

024:005 And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

024:006 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

024:007 The LORD God of heaven, which took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

024:008 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

024:009 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

024:010 And the servant took ten camels of the camels of his master, and departed; for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor.

024:011 And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.

024:012 And he said O LORD God of my master Abraham, I pray thee, send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham.
024:013 Behold, I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water:
024:014 And let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master.
024:015 And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.
024:016 And the damsel was very fair to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.
024:017 And the servant ran to meet her, and said, Let me, I pray thee, drink a little water of thy pitcher.
024:018 And she said, Drink, my lord: and she hasted, and let down her pitcher upon her hand, and gave him drink.
024:019 And when she had done giving him drink, she said, I will draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking.
024:020 And she hasted, and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again unto the well to draw water, and drew for all his camels.
024:021 And the man wondering at her held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

024:022 And it came to pass, as the camels had done drinking, that the man took a golden earring of half a shekel weight, and two bracelets for her hands of ten shekels weight of gold;

024:023 And said, Whose daughter art thou? tell me, I pray thee: is there room in thy father's house for us to lodge in?

024:024 And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel the son of Milcah, which she bare unto Nahor.

024:025 She said moreover unto him, We have both straw and provender enough, and room to lodge in.

024:026 And the man bowed down his head, and worshipped the LORD.

024:027 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's brethren.

024:028 And the damsel ran, and told them of her mother's house these things.

024:029 And Rebekah had a brother, and his name was Laban: and Laban ran out unto the man, unto the well.

024:030 And it came to pass, when he saw the earring and bracelets upon his sister's hands, and when he heard the words of Rebekah his sister, saying, Thus spake the man unto me; that he came unto the man; and, behold, he stood by the camels at the well.

024:031 And he said, Come in, thou blessed of the LORD; wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels.

024:032 And the man came into the house: and he ungirded his camels, and gave straw and provender for the camels, and water to wash his feet, and the men's feet that were with him.

024:033 And there was set meat before him to eat: but he said, I will not eat, until I have told mine errand. And he said, Speak on.
024:034 And he said, I am Abraham's servant.
024:035 And the LORD hath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maidservants, and camels, and asses.
024:036 And Sarah my master's wife bare a son to my master when she was old: and unto him hath he given all that he hath.
024:037 And my master made me swear, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife to my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose land I dwell: 024:038 But thou shalt go unto my father's house, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son.
024:039 And I said unto my master, Peradventure the woman will not follow me.
024:040 And he said unto me, The LORD, before whom I walk, will send his angel with thee, and prosper thy way; and thou shalt take a wife for my son of my kindred, and of my father's house:
024:041 Then shalt thou be clear from this my oath, when thou comest to my kindred; and if they give not thee one, thou shalt be clear from my oath.
024:042 And I came this day unto the well, and said, O LORD God of my master Abraham, if now thou do prosper my way which I go:
024:043 Behold, I stand by the well of water; and it shall come to pass, that when the virgin cometh forth to draw water, and I say to her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water of thy pitcher to drink; 024:044 And she say to me, Both drink thou, and I will also draw for thy camels: let the same be the woman whom the LORD hath appointed out for my master's son.

024:045 And before I had done speaking in mine heart, behold, Rebekah came forth with her pitcher on her shoulder; and she went down unto the well, and drew water: and I said unto her, Let me drink, I pray thee.

024:046 And she made haste, and let down her pitcher from her shoulder, and said, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: so I drank, and she made the camels drink also.

024:047 And I asked her, and said, Whose daughter art thou? And she said, the daughter of Bethuel, Nahor's son, whom Milcah bare unto him: and I put the earring upon her face, and the bracelets upon her hands.

024:048 And I bowed down my head, and worshipped the LORD, and blessed the LORD God of my master Abraham, which had led me in the right way to take my master's brother's daughter unto his son.

024:049 And now if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me: and if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left.

024:050 Then Laban and Bethuel answered and said, The thing proceedeth from the LORD: we cannot speak unto thee bad or good.

024:051 Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the LORD hath spoken.

024:052 And it came to pass, that, when Abraham's servant heard their words, he worshipped the LORD, bowing himself to the earth.

024:053 And the servant brought forth jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment, and gave them to Rebekah: he gave also to her brother and to her mother precious things.

024:054 And they did eat and drink, he and the men that were with him, and tarried all night; and they rose up in the morning, and he said, Send me away unto my master.

024:055 And her brother and her mother said, Let the damsel abide with us a few days, at the least ten; after that she shall go.

024:056 And he said unto them, Hinder me not, seeing the LORD hath prospered my way; send me away that I may go to my master.

024:057 And they said, We will call the damsel, and enquire at her mouth.

024:058 And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said, I will go.

024:059 And they sent away Rebekah their sister, and her nurse, and Abraham's servant, and his men.

024:060 And they blessed Rebekah, and said unto her, Thou art our sister, be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.

024:061 And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant took Rebekah, and went his way.

024:062 And Isaac came from the way of the well Lahairoi; for he dwelt in the south country.

024:063 And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide: and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

024:064 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, she lighted off the camel.

024:065 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a vail, and covered herself.

024:066 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

024:067 And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.

025:001 Then again Abraham took a wife, and her name was Keturah.
025:002 And she bare him Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah.
025:003 And Jokshan begat Sheba, and Dedan. And the sons of Dedan were Asshurim, and Letushim, and Leummim.
025:004 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Epher, and Hanoch, and Abidah, and Eldaah. All these were the children of Keturah.
025:005 And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.
025:006 But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son, while he yet lived, eastward, unto the east country.
025:007 And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.
025:008 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people.
025:009 And his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;
025:010 The field which Abraham purchased of the sons of Heth: there was Abraham buried, and Sarah his wife.
025:011 And it came to pass after the death of Abraham, that God blessed his son Isaac; and Isaac dwelt by the well Lahairoi.
025:012 Now these are the generations of Ishmael, Abraham's son, whom Hagar the Egyptian, Sarah's handmaid, bare unto Abraham:
025:013 And these are the names of the sons of Ishmael, by their names, according to their generations: the firstborn of Ishmael, Nebajoth; and Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam,
025:014 And Mishma, and Dumah, and Massa,

025:015 Hadar, and Tema, Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah:
025:016 These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; twelve princes according to their nations.
025:017 And these are the years of the life of Ishmael, an hundred and thirty and seven years: and he gave up the ghost and died; and was gathered unto his people.
025:018 And they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest toward Assyria: and he died in the presence of all his brethren.
025:019 And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son: Abraham begat Isaac:
025:020 And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padanaram, the sister to Laban the Syrian.
025:021 And Isaac intreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: and the LORD was intreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived.
025:022 And the children struggled together within her; and she said, If it be so, why am I thus? And she went to enquire of the LORD.
025:023 And the LORD said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger.
025:024 And when her days to be delivered were fulfilled, behold, there were twins in her womb.
025:025 And the first came out red, all over like an hairy garment; and they called his name Esau.

025:026 And after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob: and Isaac was threescore years old when she bare them.

025:027 And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents.

025:028 And Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison: but Rebekah loved Jacob.

025:029 And Jacob sod pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint:

025:030 And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called Edom.

025:031 And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright.

025:032 And Esau said, Behold, I am at the point to die: and what profit shall this birthright do to me?

025:033 And Jacob said, Swear to me this day; and he sware unto him: and he sold his birthright unto Jacob.

025:034 Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright.

---

026:001 And there was a famine in the land, beside the first famine that was in the days of Abraham. And Isaac went unto Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar.

026:002 And the LORD appeared unto him, and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of:

026:003 Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father;

026:004 And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed;

026:005 Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws.

026:006 And Isaac dwelt in Gerar:

026:007 And the men of the place asked him of his wife; and he said, She is my sister: for he feared to say, She is my wife; lest, said he, the men of the place should kill me for Rebekah; because she was fair to look upon.

026:008 And it came to pass, when he had been there a long time, that Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.

026:009 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife; and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

026:010 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldest have brought guiltiness upon us.

026:011 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.

026:012 Then Isaac sowed in that land, and received in the same year an hundredfold: and the LORD blessed him.

026:013 And the man waxed great, and went forward, and grew until he became very great:

026:014 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of servants: and the Philistines envied him.

026:015 For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

026:016 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we.

026:017 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

026:018 And Isaac digged again the wells of water, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

026:019 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water.

026:020 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Esek; because they strove with him.

026:021 And they digged another well, and strove for that also: and he called the name of it Sitnah.

026:022 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it Rehoboth; and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

026:023 And he went up from thence to Beersheba.

026:024 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake.

026:025 And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

026:026 Then Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath one of his friends, and Phichol the chief captain of his army.

026:027 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

026:028 And they said, We saw certainly that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

026:029 That thou wilt do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now the blessed of the LORD.

026:030 And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

026:031 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

026:032 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came, and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

026:033 And he called it Shebah: therefore the name of the city is Beersheba unto this day.

026:034 And Esau was forty years old when he took to wife Judith the daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Bashemath the daughter of Elon the Hittite:

026:035 Which were a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.

027:001 And it came to pass, that when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son: and he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

027:002 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my death:

027:003 Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and take me some venison;

027:004 And make me savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die.

027:005 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

027:006 And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying, 027:007 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee before the LORD before my death.

027:008 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice according to that which I command thee.

027:009 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

027:010 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

027:011 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

027:012 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a deceiver; and I shall bring a curse upon me, and not a blessing.

027:013 And his mother said unto him, Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

027:014 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

027:015 And Rebekah took goodly raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son:

027:016 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck:

027:017 And she gave the savoury meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

027:018 And he came unto his father, and said, My father: and he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

027:019 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy first born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

027:020 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.

027:021 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

027:022 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

027:023 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands: so he blessed him.

027:024 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, I am.

027:025 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat: and he brought him wine and he drank.

027:026 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

027:027 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

027:028 Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine:

027:029 Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

027:030 And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

027:031 And he also had made savoury meat, and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

027:032 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy firstborn Esau.

027:033 And Isaac trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath taken venison, and brought it me, and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, and he shall be blessed.

027:034 And when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father.

027:035 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

027:036 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birthright; and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

027:037 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

027:038 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father. And Esau lifted up his voice, and wept.

027:039 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;

027:040 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

027:041 And Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand; then will I slay my brother Jacob.

027:042 And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

027:043 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; arise, flee thou to Laban my brother to Haran;

027:044 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

027:045 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send, and fetch thee from thence: why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

027:046 And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth: if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

028:001 And Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

028:002 Arise, go to Padanaram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father; and take thee a wife from thence of the daughers of Laban thy mother's brother.
028:003 And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;
028:004 And give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.
028:005 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to Padanaram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.
028:006 When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padanaram, to take him a wife from thence; and that as he blessed him he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughers of Canaan;
028:007 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padanaram;
028:008 And Esau seeing that the daughters of Canaan pleased not Isaac his father;
028:009 Then went Esau unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had Mahalath the daughter of Ishmael Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.
028:010 And Jacob went out from Beersheba, and went toward Haran.
028:011 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.
028:012 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

028:013 And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

028:014 And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

028:015 And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

028:016 And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not.

028:017 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

028:018 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

028:019 And he called the name of that place Bethel: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first.

028:020 And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

028:021 So that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the LORD be my God:

028:022 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.

029:001 Then Jacob went on his journey, and came into the land of the people of the east.

029:002 And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.

029:003 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

029:004 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we.

029:005 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

029:006 And he said unto them, Is he well? And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

029:007 And he said, Lo, it is yet high day, neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

029:008 And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

029:009 And while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept them.

029:010 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

029:011 And Jacob kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

029:012 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

029:013 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.

029:014 And Laban said to him, Surely thou art my bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month.

029:015 And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

029:016 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

029:017 Leah was tender eyed; but Rachel was beautiful and well favoured.

029:018 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.

029:019 And Laban said, It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

029:020 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

029:021 And Jacob said unto Laban, Give me my wife, for my days are fulfilled, that I may go in unto her.

029:022 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made a feast.

029:023 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

029:024 And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah Zilpah his maid for an handmaid.

029:025 And it came to pass, that in the morning, behold, it was Leah: and he said to Laban, What is this thou hast done unto me? did not I serve with thee for Rachel? wherefore then hast thou beguiled me?

029:026 And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, to give the younger before the firstborn.

029:027 Fulfil her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years.

029:028 And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.

029:029 And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his handmaid to be her maid.

029:030 And he went in also unto Rachel, and he loved also Rachel more than Leah, and served with him yet seven other years.

029:031 And when the LORD saw that Leah was hated, he opened her womb: but Rachel was barren.

029:032 And Leah conceived, and bare a son, and she called his name Reuben: for she said, Surely the LORD hath looked upon my affliction; now therefore my husband will love me.

029:033 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Because the LORD hath heard I was hated, he hath therefore given me this son also: and she called his name Simeon.

029:034 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and said, Now this time will my husband be joined unto me, because I have born him three sons: therefore was his name called Levi.

029:035 And she conceived again, and bare a son: and she said, Now will I praise the LORD: therefore she called his name Judah; and left bearing.

---

030:001 And when Rachel saw that she bare Jacob no children, Rachel envied her sister; and said unto Jacob, Give me children, or else I die.

030:002 And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel: and he said, Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb?

030:003 And she said, Behold my maid Bilhah, go in unto her; and she shall bear upon my knees, that I may also have children by her.

030:004 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid to wife: and Jacob went in unto her.

030:005 And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

030:006 And Rachel said, God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name Dan.

030:007 And Bilhah Rachel's maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

030:008 And Rachel said, With great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name Naphtali.

030:009 When Leah saw that she had left bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and gave her Jacob to wife.

030:010 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a son.

030:011 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name Gad.

030:012 And Zilpah Leah's maid bare Jacob a second son.

030:013 And Leah said, Happy am I, for the daughters will call me blessed: and she called his name Asher.

030:014 And Reuben went in the days of wheat harvest, and found mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.

030:015 And she said unto her, Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to night for thy son's mandrakes.

030:016 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

030:017 And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.

030:018 And Leah said, God hath given me my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name Issachar.

030:019 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

030:020 And Leah said, God hath endued me with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name Zebulun.

030:021 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name Dinah.

030:022 And God remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

030:023 And she conceived, and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away my reproach:

030:024 And she called his name Joseph; and said, The LORD shall add to me another son.

030:025 And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country.

030:026 Give me my wives and my children, for whom I have served thee, and let me go: for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

030:027 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake.

030:028 And he said, Appoint me thy wages, and I will give it.

030:029 And he said unto him, Thou knowest how I have served thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

030:030 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee since my coming: and now when shall I provide for mine own house also?

030:031 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me any thing: if thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed and keep thy flock.

030:032 I will pass through all thy flock to day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats: and of such shall be my hire.

030:033 So shall my righteousness answer for me in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

030:034 And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.

030:035 And he removed that day the he goats that were ringstraked and spotted, and all the she goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave them into the hand of his sons.

030:036 And he set three days' journey betwixt himself and Jacob: and Jacob fed the rest of Laban's flocks.

030:037 And Jacob took him rods of green poplar, and of the hazel and chesnut tree; and pilled white strakes in them, and made the white appear which was in the rods.

030:038 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive when they came to drink.

030:039 And the flocks conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ringstraked, speckled, and spotted.

030:040 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ringstraked, and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.

030:041 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

030:042 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feebler were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

030:043 And the man increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maidservants, and menservants, and camels, and asses.

031:001 And he heard the words of Laban's sons, saying, Jacob hath taken away all that was our father's; and of that which was our father's hath he gotten all this glory.

031:002 And Jacob beheld the countenance of Laban, and, behold, it was not toward him as before.

031:003 And the LORD said unto Jacob, Return unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred; and I will be with thee.

031:004 And Jacob sent and called Rachel and Leah to the field unto his flock, 031:005 And said unto them, I see your father's countenance, that it is not toward me as before; but the God of my father hath been with me.

031:006 And ye know that with all my power I have served your father.

031:007 And your father hath deceived me, and changed my wages ten times; but God suffered him not to hurt me.

031:008 If he said thus, The speckled shall be thy wages; then all the cattle bare speckled: and if he said thus, The ringstraked shall be thy hire; then bare all the cattle ringstraked.

031:009 Thus God hath taken away the cattle of your father, and given them to me.

031:010 And it came to pass at the time that the cattle conceived, that I lifted up mine eyes, and saw in a dream, and, behold, the rams which leaped upon the cattle were ringstraked, speckled, and grisled.

031:011 And the angel of God spake unto me in a dream, saying, Jacob: And I said, Here am I.

031:012 And he said, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, all the rams which leap upon the cattle are ringstraked, speckled, and grisled: for I have seen all that Laban doeth unto thee.

031:013 I am the God of Bethel, where thou anointedst the pillar, and where thou vowedst a vow unto me: now arise, get thee out from this land, and return unto the land of thy kindred.

031:014 And Rachel and Leah answered and said unto him, Is there yet any portion or inheritance for us in our father's house?

031:015 Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath sold us, and hath quite devoured also our money.

031:016 For all the riches which God hath taken from our father, that is ours, and our children's: now then, whatsoever God hath said unto thee, do.

031:017 Then Jacob rose up, and set his sons and his wives upon camels;

031:018 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padanaram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

031:019 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the images that were her father's.

031:020 And Jacob stole away unawares to Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

031:021 So he fled with all that he had; and he rose up, and passed over the river, and set his face toward the mount Gilead.

031:022 And it was told Laban on the third day that Jacob was fled.

031:023 And he took his brethren with him, and pursued after him seven days' journey; and they overtook him in the mount Gilead.

031:024 And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream by night, and said unto him, Take heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

031:025 Then Laban overtook Jacob. Now Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

031:026 And Laban said to Jacob, What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters, as captives taken with the sword?

031:027 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me; and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, and with harp?

031:028 And hast not suffered me to kiss my sons and my daughters? thou hast now done foolishly in so doing.

031:029 It is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

031:030 And now, though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, yet wherefore hast thou stolen my gods?

031:031 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

031:032 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: before our brethren discern thou what is thine with me, and take it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

031:033 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into Leah's tent, and into the two maidservants' tents; but he found them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

031:034 Now Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. And Laban searched all the tent, but found them not.

031:035 And she said to her father, Let it not displease my lord that I cannot rise up before thee; for the custom of women is upon me. And he searched but found not the images.

031:036 And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What is my trespass? what is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

031:037 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household stuff? set it here before my brethren and thy brethren, that they may judge betwixt us both.

031:038 This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy she goats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

031:039 That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

031:040 Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

031:041 Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle: and thou hast changed my wages ten times.

031:042 Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the fear of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty. God hath seen mine affliction and the labour of my hands, and rebuked thee yesternight.

031:043 And Laban answered and said unto Jacob, These daughters are my daughters, and these children are my children, and these cattle are my cattle, and all that thou seest is mine: and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have born?

031:044 Now therefore come thou, let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

031:045 And Jacob took a stone, and set it up for a pillar.

031:046 And Jacob said unto his brethren, Gather stones; and they took stones, and made an heap: and they did eat there upon the heap.

031:047 And Laban called it Jegarsahadutha: but Jacob called it Galeed.

031:048 And Laban said, This heap is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called Galeed;

031:049 And Mizpah; for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

031:050 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, or if thou shalt take other wives beside my daughters, no man is with us; see, God is witness betwixt me and thee.

031:051 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee:

031:052 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar unto me, for harm.

031:053 The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, the God of their father, judge betwixt us. And Jacob sware by the fear of his father Isaac.

031:054 Then Jacob offered sacrifice upon the mount, and called his brethren to eat bread: and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

031:055 And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, and blessed them: and Laban departed, and returned unto his place.

032:001 And Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him.

032:002 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's host: and he called the name of that place Mahanaim.

032:003 And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother unto the land of Seir, the country of Edom.

032:004 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto my lord Esau; Thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

032:005 And I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and menservants, and womenservants: and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight.

032:006 And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.

032:007 Then Jacob was greatly afraid and distressed: and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;
032:008 And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.
032:009 And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:
032:010 I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jordan; and now I am become two bands.
032:011 Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children.
032:012 And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.
032:013 And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand a present for Esau his brother;
032:014 Two hundred she goats, and twenty he goats, two hundred ewes, and twenty rams,
032:015 Thirty milch camels with their colts, forty kine, and ten bulls, twenty she asses, and ten foals.
032:016 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a space betwixt drove and drove.
032:017 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

032:018 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

032:019 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

032:020 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept of me.

032:021 So went the present over before him: and himself lodged that night in the company.

032:022 And he rose up that night, and took his two wives, and his two womenservants, and his eleven sons, and passed over the ford Jabbok.

032:023 And he took them, and sent them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

032:024 And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day.

032:025 And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

032:026 And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

032:027 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

032:028 And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed.

032:029 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

032:030 And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

032:031 And as he passed over Penuel the sun rose upon him, and he halted upon his thigh.

032:032 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day: because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

---

033:001 And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

033:002 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindermost.

033:003 And he passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.

033:004 And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

033:005 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children; and said, Who are those with thee? And he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

033:006 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

033:007 And Leah also with her children came near, and bowed themselves: and after came Joseph near and Rachel, and they bowed themselves.

033:008 And he said, What meanest thou by all this drove which I met? And he said, These are to find grace in the sight of my lord.

033:009 And Esau said, I have enough, my brother; keep that thou hast unto thyself.

033:010 And Jacob said, Nay, I pray thee, if now I have found grace in thy sight, then receive my present at my hand: for therefore I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me.

033:011 Take, I pray thee, my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

033:012 And he said, Let us take our journey, and let us go, and I will go before thee.

033:013 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me: and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

033:014 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant: and I will lead on softly, according as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be able to endure, until I come unto my lord unto Seir.

033:015 And Esau said, Let me now leave with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, What needeth it? let me find grace in the sight of my lord.

033:016 So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

033:017 And Jacob journeyed to Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth.

033:018 And Jacob came to Shalem, a city of Shechem, which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padanaram; and pitched his tent before the city.

033:019 And he bought a parcel of a field, where he had spread his tent, at the hand of the children of Hamor, Shechem's father, for an hundred pieces of money.

033:020 And he erected there an altar, and called it EleloheIsrael.

034:001 And Dinah the daughter of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob, went out to see the daughters of the land.

034:002 And when Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, prince of the country, saw her, he took her, and lay with her, and defiled her.

034:003 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob, and he loved the damsel, and spake kindly unto the damsel.

034:004 And Shechem spake unto his father Hamor, saying, Get me this damsel to wife.

034:005 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: now his sons were with his cattle in the field: and Jacob held his peace until they were come.

034:006 And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob to commune with him.

034:007 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard it: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought folly in Israel in lying with Jacob's daughter: which thing ought not to be done.

034:008 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

034:009 And make ye marriages with us, and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you.

034:010 And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be before you; dwell and trade ye therein, and get you possessions therein.

034:011 And Shechem said unto her father and unto her brethren, Let me find grace in your eyes, and what ye shall say unto me I will give.

034:012 Ask me never so much dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me: but give me the damsel to wife.

034:013 And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father deceitfully, and said, because he had defiled Dinah their sister:

034:014 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is uncircumcised; for that were a reproach unto us:

034:015 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we be, that every male of you be circumcised;

034:016 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

034:017 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised; then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

034:018 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

034:019 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he was more honourable than all the house of his father.

034:020 And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 034:021 These men are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, it is large enough for them; let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

034:022 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they are circumcised.

034:023 Shall not their cattle and their substance and every beast of their's be our's? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us.

034:024 And unto Hamor and unto Shechem his son hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city; and every male was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

034:025 And it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore, that two of the sons of Jacob, Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

034:026 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

034:027 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.

034:028 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field,

034:029 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

034:030 And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

034:031 And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

035:001 And God said unto Jacob, Arise, go up to Bethel, and dwell there: and make there an altar unto God, that appeared unto thee when thou fleddest from the face of Esau thy brother.

035:002 Then Jacob said unto his household, and to all that were with him, Put away the strange gods that are among you, and be clean, and change your garments:

035:003 And let us arise, and go up to Bethel; and I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went.

035:004 And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand, and all their earrings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem.

035:005 And they journeyed: and the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them, and they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob.

035:006 So Jacob came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Bethel, he and all the people that were with him.

035:007 And he built there an altar, and called the place Elbethel: because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

035:008 But Deborah Rebekah's nurse died, and she was buried beneath Bethel under an oak: and the name of it was called Allonbachuth.

035:009 And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padanaram, and blessed him.

035:010 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

035:011 And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins;

035:012 And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

035:013 And God went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

035:014 And Jacob set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone: and he poured a drink offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

035:015 And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him, Bethel.

035:016 And they journeyed from Bethel; and there was but a little way to come to Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had hard labour.

035:017 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; thou shalt have this son also.

035:018 And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died) that she called his name Benoni: but his father called him Benjamin.

035:019 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem.

035:020 And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.

035:021 And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond the tower of Edar.

035:022 And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and lay with Bilhah his father's concubine: and Israel heard it. Now the sons of Jacob were twelve:

035:023 The sons of Leah; Reuben, Jacob's firstborn, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun:

035:024 The sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin:

035:025 And the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan, and Naphtali:

035:026 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid: Gad, and Asher: these are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padanaram.

035:027 And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto Mamre, unto the city of Arbah, which is Hebron, where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

035:028 And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.

035:029 And Isaac gave up the ghost, and died, and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days: and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

---

036:001 Now these are the generations of Esau, who is Edom.

036:002 Esau took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

036:003 And Bashemath Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

036:004 And Adah bare to Esau Eliphaz; and Bashemath bare Reuel;

036:005 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah: these are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him in the land of Canaan.

036:006 And Esau took his wives, and his sons, and his daughters, and all the persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Canaan; and went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob.

036:007 For their riches were more than that they might dwell together; and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle.

036:008 Thus dwelt Esau in mount Seir: Esau is Edom.

036:009 And these are the generations of Esau the father of the Edomites in mount Seir:

036:010 These are the names of Esau's sons; Eliphaz the son of Adah the wife of Esau, Reuel the son of Bashemath the wife of Esau.

036:011 And the sons of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, Zepho, and Gatam, and Kenaz.

036:012 And Timna was concubine to Eliphaz Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz Amalek: these were the sons of Adah Esau's wife.

036:013 And these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

036:014 And these were the sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah the daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife: and she bare to Esau Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

036:015 These were dukes of the sons of Esau: the sons of Eliphaz the firstborn son of Esau; duke Teman, duke Omar, duke Zepho, duke Kenaz, 036:016 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek: these are the dukes that came of Eliphaz in the land of Edom; these were the sons of Adah.

036:017 And these are the sons of Reuel Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke Mizzah: these are the dukes that came of Reuel in the land of Edom; these are the sons of Bashemath Esau's wife.

036:018 And these are the sons of Aholibamah Esau's wife; duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.

036:019 These are the sons of Esau, who is Edom, and these are their dukes.

036:020 These are the sons of Seir the Horite, who inhabited the land; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, 036:021 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan: these are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

036:022 And the children of Lotan were Hori and Hemam; and Lotan's sister was Timna.

036:023 And the children of Shobal were these; Alvan, and Manahath, and Ebal, Shepho, and Onam.

036:024 And these are the children of Zibeon; both Ajah, and Anah: this was that Anah that found the mules in the wilderness, as he fed the asses of Zibeon his father.

036:025 And the children of Anah were these; Dishon, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah.

036:026 And these are the children of Dishon; Hemdan, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

036:027 The children of Ezer are these; Bilhan, and Zaavan, and Akan.

036:028 The children of Dishan are these; Uz, and Aran.

036:029 These are the dukes that came of the Horites; duke Lotan, duke Shobal, duke Zibeon, duke Anah, 036:030 Duke Dishon, duke Ezer, duke Dishan: these are the dukes that came of Hori, among their dukes in the land of Seir.

036:031 And these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before there reigned any king over the children of Israel.

036:032 And Bela the son of Beor reigned in Edom: and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

036:033 And Bela died, and Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead.

036:034 And Jobab died, and Husham of the land of Temani reigned in his stead.

036:035 And Husham died, and Hadad the son of Bedad, who smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

036:036 And Hadad died, and Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

036:037 And Samlah died, and Saul of Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead.

036:038 And Saul died, and Baalhanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

036:039 And Baalhanan the son of Achbor died, and Hadar reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Pau; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

036:040 And these are the names of the dukes that came of Esau, according to their families, after their places, by their names; duke Timnah, duke Alvah, duke Jetheth,

036:041 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

036:042 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

036:043 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram: these be the dukes of Edom, according to their habitations in the land of their possession: he is Esau the father of the Edomites.

---

037:001 And Jacob dwelt in the land wherein his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan.

037:002 These are the generations of Jacob. Joseph, being seventeen years old, was feeding the flock with his brethren; and the lad was with the sons of Bilhah, and with the sons of Zilpah, his father's wives: and Joseph brought unto his father their evil report.

037:003 Now Israel loved Joseph more than all his children, because he was the son of his old age: and he made him a coat of many colours.

037:004 And when his brethren saw that their father loved him more than all his brethren, they hated him, and could not speak peaceably unto him.

037:005 And Joseph dreamed a dream, and he told it his brethren: and they hated him yet the more.

037:006 And he said unto them, Hear, I pray you, this dream which I have dreamed:

037:007 For, behold, we were binding sheaves in the field, and, lo, my sheaf arose, and also stood upright; and, behold, your sheaves stood round about, and made obeisance to my sheaf.

037:008 And his brethren said to him, Shalt thou indeed reign over us? or shalt thou indeed have dominion over us? And they hated him yet the more for his dreams, and for his words.

037:009 And he dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more; and, behold, the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.

037:010 And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?

037:011 And his brethren envied him; but his father observed the saying.

037:012 And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem.

037:013 And Israel said unto Joseph, Do not thy brethren feed the flock in Shechem? come, and I will send thee unto them. And he said to him, Here am I.

037:014 And he said to him, Go, I pray thee, see whether it be well with thy brethren, and well with the flocks; and bring me word again. So he sent him out of the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem.

037:015 And a certain man found him, and, behold, he was wandering in the field: and the man asked him, saying, What seekest thou?

037:016 And he said, I seek my brethren: tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks.

037:017 And the man said, They are departed hence; for I heard them say, Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan.

037:018 And when they saw him afar off, even before he came near unto them, they conspired against him to slay him.

037:019 And they said one to another, Behold, this dreamer cometh.

037:020 Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams.

037:021 And Reuben heard it, and he delivered him out of their hands; and said, Let us not kill him.

037:022 And Reuben said unto them, Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again.

037:023 And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethren, that they stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours that was on him;

037:024 And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it.

037:025 And they sat down to eat bread: and they lifted up their eyes and looked, and, behold, a company of Ishmeelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt.

037:026 And Judah said unto his brethren, What profit is it if we slay our brother, and conceal his blood?

037:027 Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother and our flesh. And his brethren were content.

037:028 Then there passed by Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.

037:029 And Reuben returned unto the pit; and, behold, Joseph was not in the pit; and he rent his clothes.

037:030 And he returned unto his brethren, and said, The child is not; and I, whither shall I go?

037:031 And they took Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood;

037:032 And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no.

037:033 And he knew it, and said, It is my son's coat; an evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces.

037:034 And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his loins, and mourned for his son many days.

037:035 And all his sons and all his daughters rose up to comfort him; but he refused to be comforted; and he said, For I will go down into the grave unto my son mourning. Thus his father wept for him.

037:036 And the Midianites sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's, and captain of the guard.

---

038:001 And it came to pass at that time, that Judah went down from his brethren, and turned in to a certain Adullamite, whose name was Hirah.

038:002 And Judah saw there a daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose name was Shuah; and he took her, and went in unto her.

038:003 And she conceived, and bare a son; and he called his name Er.

038:004 And she conceived again, and bare a son; and she called his name Onan.

038:005 And she yet again conceived, and bare a son; and called his name Shelah: and he was at Chezib, when she bare him.

038:006 And Judah took a wife for Er his firstborn, whose name was Tamar.

038:007 And Er, Judah's firstborn, was wicked in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

038:008 And Judah said unto Onan, Go in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

038:009 And Onan knew that the seed should not be his; and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.

038:010 And the thing which he did displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew him also.

038:011 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter in law, Remain a widow at thy father's house, till Shelah my son be grown: for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did. And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

038:012 And in process of time the daughter of Shuah Judah's wife died; and Judah was comforted, and went up unto his sheepshearers to Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

038:013 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold thy father in law goeth up to Timnath to shear his sheep.

038:014 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a vail, and wrapped herself, and sat in an open place, which is by the way to Timnath; for she saw that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

038:015 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

038:016 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter in law.) And she said, What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

038:017 And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it?

038:018 And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand. And he gave it her, and came in unto her, and she conceived by him.

038:019 And she arose, and went away, and laid by her vail from her, and put on the garments of her widowhood.

038:020 And Judah sent the kid by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, to receive his pledge from the woman's hand: but he found her not.

038:021 Then he asked the men of that place, saying, Where is the harlot, that was openly by the way side? And they said, There was no harlot in this place.

038:022 And he returned to Judah, and said, I cannot find her; and also the men of the place said, that there was no harlot in this place.

038:023 And Judah said, Let her take it to her, lest we be shamed: behold, I sent this kid, and thou hast not found her.

038:024 And it came to pass about three months after, that it was told Judah, saying, Tamar thy daughter in law hath played the harlot; and also, behold, she is with child by whoredom. And Judah said, Bring her forth, and let her be burnt.

038:025 When she was brought forth, she sent to her father in law, saying, By the man, whose these are, am I with child: and she said, Discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, and bracelets, and staff.

038:026 And Judah acknowledged them, and said, She hath been more righteous than I; because that I gave her not to Shelah my son. And he knew her again no more.

038:027 And it came to pass in the time of her travail, that, behold, twins were in her womb.

038:028 And it came to pass, when she travailed, that the one put out his hand: and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thread, saying, This came out first.

038:029 And it came to pass, as he drew back his hand, that, behold, his brother came out: and she said, How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called Pharez.

038:030 And afterward came out his brother, that had the scarlet thread upon his hand: and his name was called Zarah.

039:001 And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites, which had brought him down thither.

039:002 And the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

039:003 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

039:004 And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he served him: and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

039:005 And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

039:006 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat. And Joseph was a goodly person, and well favoured.

039:007 And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie with me.

039:008 But he refused, and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand;

039:009 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

039:010 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

039:011 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was none of the men of the house there within.

039:012 And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

039:013 And it came to pass, when she saw that he had left his garment in her hand, and was fled forth,

039:014 That she called unto the men of her house, and spake unto them, saying, See, he hath brought in an Hebrew unto us to mock us; he came in unto me to lie with me, and I cried with a loud voice:

039:015 And it came to pass, when he heard that I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled, and got him out.

039:016 And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home.

039:017 And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me:

039:018 And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.

039:019 And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his wrath was kindled.

039:020 And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

039:021 But the LORD was with Joseph, and shewed him mercy, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

039:022 And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

039:023 The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; because the LORD was with him, and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

040:001 And it came to pass after these things, that the butler of the king of Egypt and his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt.

040:002 And Pharaoh was wroth against two of his officers, against the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers.

040:003 And he put them in ward in the house of the captain of the guard, into the prison, the place where Joseph was bound.

040:004 And the captain of the guard charged Joseph with them, and he served them: and they continued a season in ward.

040:005 And they dreamed a dream both of them, each man his dream in one night, each man according to the interpretation of his dream, the butler and the baker of the king of Egypt, which were bound in the prison.

040:006 And Joseph came in unto them in the morning, and looked upon them, and, behold, they were sad.

040:007 And he asked Pharaoh's officers that were with him in the ward of his lord's house, saying, Wherefore look ye so sadly to day?

040:008 And they said unto him, We have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. And Joseph said unto them, Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you.

040:009 And the chief butler told his dream to Joseph, and said to him, In my dream, behold, a vine was before me;

040:010 And in the vine were three branches: and it was as though it budded, and her blossoms shot forth; and the clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes:

040:011 And Pharaoh's cup was in my hand: and I took the grapes, and pressed them into Pharaoh's cup, and I gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand.

040:012 And Joseph said unto him, This is the interpretation of it: The three branches are three days:

040:013 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thine head, and restore thee unto thy place: and thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's cup into his hand, after the former manner when thou wast his butler.

040:014 But think on me when it shall be well with thee, and shew kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and make mention of me unto Pharaoh, and bring me out of this house:

040:015 For indeed I was stolen away out of the land of the Hebrews: and here also have I done nothing that they should put me into the dungeon.

040:016 When the chief baker saw that the interpretation was good, he said unto Joseph, I also was in my dream, and, behold, I had three white baskets on my head:

040:017 And in the uppermost basket there was of all manner of bakemeats for Pharaoh; and the birds did eat them out of the basket upon my head.

040:018 And Joseph answered and said, This is the interpretation thereof: The three baskets are three days:

040:019 Yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thy head from off thee, and shall hang thee on a tree; and the birds shall eat thy flesh from off thee.

040:020 And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's birthday, that he made a feast unto all his servants: and he lifted up the head of the chief butler and of the chief baker among his servants.

040:021 And he restored the chief butler unto his butlership again; and he gave the cup into Pharaoh's hand:

040:022 But he hanged the chief baker: as Joseph had interpreted to them.

040:023 Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgat him.

041:001 And it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed: and, behold, he stood by the river.

041:002 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven well favoured kine and fatfleshed; and they fed in a meadow.

041:003 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them out of the river, ill favoured and leanfleshed; and stood by the other kine upon the brink of the river.

041:004 And the ill favoured and leanfleshed kine did eat up the seven well favoured and fat kine. So Pharaoh awoke.

041:005 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good.

041:006 And, behold, seven thin ears and blasted with the east wind sprung up after them.

041:007 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

041:008 And it came to pass in the morning that his spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dream; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

041:009 Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

041:010 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

041:011 And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

041:012 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and he interpreted to us our dreams; to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

041:013 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.

041:014 Then Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him hastily out of the dungeon: and he shaved himself, and changed his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

041:015 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.

041:016 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, It is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace.

041:017 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

041:018 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fatfleshed and well favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

041:019 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor and very ill favoured and leanfleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness:

041:020 And the lean and the ill favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine:

041:021 And when they had eaten them up, it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

041:022 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

041:023 And, behold, seven ears, withered, thin, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them:

041:024 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears: and I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

041:025 And Joseph said unto Pharaoh, The dream of Pharaoh is one: God hath shewed Pharaoh what he is about to do.

041:026 The seven good kine are seven years; and the seven good ears are seven years: the dream is one.

041:027 And the seven thin and ill favoured kine that came up after them are seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine.

041:028 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: What God is about to do he sheweth unto Pharaoh.

041:029 Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

041:030 And there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land;

041:031 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.

041:032 And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

041:033 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

041:034 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint officers over the land, and take up the fifth part of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

041:035 And let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

041:036 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine.

041:037 And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

041:038 And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is?

041:039 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath shewed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

041:040 Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

041:041 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

041:042 And Pharaoh took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen, and put a gold chain about his neck;

041:043 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

041:044 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

041:045 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnathpaaneah; and he gave him to wife Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On. And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

041:046 And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt. And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

041:047 And in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

041:048 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

041:049 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

041:050 And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On bare unto him.

041:051 And Joseph called the name of the firstborn Manasseh: For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

041:052 And the name of the second called he Ephraim: For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

041:053 And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

041:054 And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

041:055 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

041:056 And the famine was over all the face of the earth: and Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

041:057 And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

---

042:001 Now when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

042:002 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die.

042:003 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

042:004 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren; for he said, Lest peradventure mischief befall him.

042:005 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

042:006 And Joseph was the governor over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

042:007 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

042:008 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

042:009 And Joseph remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

042:010 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord, but to buy food are thy servants come.

042:011 We are all one man's sons; we are true men, thy servants are no spies.

042:012 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

042:013 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one is not.

042:014 And Joseph said unto them, That is it that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

042:015 Hereby ye shall be proved: By the life of Pharaoh ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

042:016 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else by the life of Pharaoh surely ye are spies.

042:017 And he put them all together into ward three days.

042:018 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for I fear God:

042:019 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

042:020 But bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.

042:021 And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us.

042:022 And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is required.

042:023 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake unto them by an interpreter.

042:024 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon, and bound him before their eyes.

042:025 Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's money into his sack, and to give them provision for the way: and thus did he unto them.

042:026 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.

042:027 And as one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

042:028 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their heart failed them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

042:029 And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them; saying, 042:030 The man, who is the lord of the land, spake roughly to us, and took us for spies of the country.

042:031 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies:

042:032 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father; one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

042:033 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men; leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone:

042:034 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall traffick in the land.

042:035 And it came to pass as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

042:036 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me.

042:037 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

042:038 And he said, My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he is left alone: if mischief befall him by the way in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

043:001 And the famine was sore in the land.

043:002 And it came to pass, when they had eaten up the corn which they had brought out of Egypt, their father said unto them, Go again, buy us a little food.

043:003 And Judah spake unto him, saying, The man did solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

043:004 If thou wilt send our brother with us, we will go down and buy thee food:

043:005 But if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down: for the man said unto us, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you.

043:006 And Israel said, Wherefore dealt ye so ill with me, as to tell the man whether ye had yet a brother?

043:007 And they said, The man asked us straitly of our state, and of our kindred, saying, Is your father yet alive? have ye another brother? and we told him according to the tenor of these words: could we certainly know that he would say, Bring your brother down?

043:008 And Judah said unto Israel his father, Send the lad with me, and we will arise and go; that we may live, and not die, both we, and thou, and also our little ones.

043:009 I will be surety for him; of my hand shalt thou require him: if I bring him not unto thee, and set him before thee, then let me bear the blame for ever:

043:010 For except we had lingered, surely now we had returned this second time.

043:011 And their father Israel said unto them, If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balm, and a little honey, spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds:

043:012 And take double money in your hand; and the money that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight:

043:013 Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man:

043:014 And God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved.

043:015 And the men took that present, and they took double money in their hand and Benjamin; and rose up, and went down to Egypt, and stood before Joseph.

043:016 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the ruler of his house, Bring these men home, and slay, and make ready; for these men shall dine with me at noon.

043:017 And the man did as Joseph bade; and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

043:018 And the men were afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house; and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

043:019 And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house, and they communed with him at the door of the house,

043:020 And said, O sir, we came indeed down at the first time to buy food:

043:021 And it came to pass, when we came to the inn, that we opened our sacks, and, behold, every man's money was in the mouth of his sack, our money in full weight: and we have brought it again in our hand.

043:022 And other money have we brought down in our hands to buy food: we cannot tell who put our money in our sacks.

043:023 And he said, Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: I had your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them.

043:024 And the man brought the men into Joseph's house, and gave them water, and they washed their feet; and he gave their asses provender.

043:025 And they made ready the present against Joseph came at noon: for they heard that they should eat bread there.

043:026 And when Joseph came home, they brought him the present which was in their hand into the house, and bowed themselves to him to the earth.

043:027 And he asked them of their welfare, and said, Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake? Is he yet alive?

043:028 And they answered, Thy servant our father is in good health, he is yet alive. And they bowed down their heads, and made obeisance.

043:029 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw his brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

043:030 And Joseph made haste; for his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there.

043:031 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.

043:032 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians, which did eat with him, by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

043:033 And they sat before him, the firstborn according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

043:034 And he took and sent messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of their's. And they drank, and were merry with him.

044:001 And he commanded the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food, as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth.

044:002 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

044:003 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

044:004 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

044:005 Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth? ye have done evil in so doing.

044:006 And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

044:007 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing:

044:008 Behold, the money, which we found in our sacks' mouths, we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

044:009 With whomsoever of thy servants it be found, both let him die, and we also will be my lord's bondmen.

044:010 And he said, Now also let it be according unto your words: he with whom it is found shall be my servant; and ye shall be blameless.

044:011 Then they speedily took down every man his sack to the ground, and opened every man his sack.

044:012 And he searched, and began at the eldest, and left at the youngest: and the cup was found in Benjamin's sack.

044:013 Then they rent their clothes, and laded every man his ass, and returned to the city.

044:014 And Judah and his brethren came to Joseph's house; for he was yet there: and they fell before him on the ground.

044:015 And Joseph said unto them, What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly divine?

044:016 And Judah said, What shall we say unto my lord? what shall we speak? or how shall we clear ourselves? God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants: behold, we are my lord's servants, both we, and he also with whom the cup is found.

044:017 And he said, God forbid that I should do so: but the man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant; and as for you, get you up in peace unto your father.

044:018 Then Judah came near unto him, and said, Oh my lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in my lord's ears, and let not thine anger burn against thy servant: for thou art even as Pharaoh.

044:019 My lord asked his servants, saying, Have ye a father, or a brother?

044:020 And we said unto my lord, We have a father, an old man, and a child of his old age, a little one; and his brother is dead, and he alone is left of his mother, and his father loveth him.

044:021 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Bring him down unto me, that I may set mine eyes upon him.

044:022 And we said unto my lord, The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.

044:023 And thou saidst unto thy servants, Except your youngest brother come down with you, ye shall see my face no more.

044:024 And it came to pass when we came up unto thy servant my father, we told him the words of my lord.

044:025 And our father said, Go again, and buy us a little food.

044:026 And we said, We cannot go down: if our youngest brother be with us, then will we go down: for we may not see the man's face, except our youngest brother be with us.

044:027 And thy servant my father said unto us, Ye know that my wife bare me two sons:

044:028 And the one went out from me, and I said, Surely he is torn in pieces; and I saw him not since:

044:029 And if ye take this also from me, and mischief befall him, ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

044:030 Now therefore when I come to thy servant my father, and the lad be not with us; seeing that his life is bound up in the lad's life;

044:031 It shall come to pass, when he seeth that the lad is not with us, that he will die: and thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow to the grave.

044:032 For thy servant became surety for the lad unto my father, saying, If I bring him not unto thee, then I shall bear the blame to my father for ever.

044:033 Now therefore, I pray thee, let thy servant abide instead of the lad a bondman to my lord; and let the lad go up with his brethren.

044:034 For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall come on my father.

045:001 Then Joseph could not refrain himself before all them that stood by him; and he cried, Cause every man to go out from me. And there stood no man with him, while Joseph made himself known unto his brethren.

045:002 And he wept aloud: and the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard.

045:003 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I am Joseph; doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; for they were troubled at his presence.

045:004 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt.

045:005 Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life.

045:006 For these two years hath the famine been in the land: and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earing nor harvest.

045:007 And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

045:008 So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

045:009 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not:

045:010 And thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast:

045:011 And there will I nourish thee; for yet there are five years of famine; lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

045:012 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.

045:013 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and bring down my father hither.

045:014 And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

045:015 Moreover he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that his brethren talked with him.

045:016 And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it pleased Pharaoh well, and his servants.

045:017 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan;

045:018 And take your father and your households, and come unto me: and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land.

045:019 Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come.

045:020 Also regard not your stuff; for the good of all the land of Egypt is your's.

045:021 And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them wagons, according to the commandment of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

045:022 To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment; but to Benjamin he gave three hundred pieces of silver, and five changes of raiment.

045:023 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with the good things of Egypt, and ten she asses laden with corn and bread and meat for his father by the way.

045:024 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall not out by the way.

045:025 And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father, 045:026 And told him, saying, Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt. And Jacob's heart fainted, for he believed them not.

045:027 And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him, the spirit of Jacob their father revived:

045:028 And Israel said, It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die.

---

046:001 And Israel took his journey with all that he had, and came to Beersheba, and offered sacrifices unto the God of his father Isaac.

046:002 And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob. And he said, Here am I.

046:003 And he said, I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation:

046:004 I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes.

046:005 And Jacob rose up from Beersheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

046:006 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

046:007 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed brought he with him into Egypt.

046:008 And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: Reuben, Jacob's firstborn.

046:009 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

046:010 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

046:011 And the sons of Levi; Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

046:012 And the sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

046:013 And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.

046:014 And the sons of Zebulun; Sered, and Elon, and Jahleel.

046:015 These be the sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padanaram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

046:016 And the sons of Gad; Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and Ezbon, Eri, and Arodi, and Areli.

046:017 And the sons of Asher; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister: and the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

046:018 These are the sons of Zilpah, whom Laban gave to Leah his daughter, and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

046:019 The sons of Rachel Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

046:020 And unto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath the daughter of Potipherah priest of On bare unto him.

046:021 And the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi, and Rosh, Muppim, and Huppim, and Ard.

046:022 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

046:023 And the sons of Dan; Hushim.

046:024 And the sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

046:025 These are the sons of Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

046:026 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

046:027 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.

046:028 And he sent Judah before him unto Joseph, to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

046:029 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

046:030 And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

046:031 And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and shew Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me;

046:032 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

046:033 And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation?

046:034 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.

---

047:001 Then Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in the land of Goshen.

047:002 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh.

047:003 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers.

047:004 They said morever unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come; for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

047:005 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

047:006 The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them dwell: and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

047:007 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

047:008 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?

047:009 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

047:010 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

047:011 And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

047:012 And Joseph nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, according to their families.

047:013 And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine.

047:014 And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

047:015 And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

047:016 And Joseph said, Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

047:017 And they brought their cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses: and he fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

047:018 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second year, and said unto him, We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle; there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies, and our lands:

047:019 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

047:020 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

047:021 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.

047:022 Only the land of the priests bought he not; for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them: wherefore they sold not their lands.

047:023 Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day and your land for Pharaoh: lo, here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

047:024 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give the fifth part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them of your households, and for food for your little ones.

047:025 And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: let us find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.

047:026 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part, except the land of the priests only, which became not Pharaoh's.

047:027 And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and grew, and multiplied exceedingly.

047:028 And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years: so the whole age of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.

047:029 And the time drew nigh that Israel must die: and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and deal kindly and truly with me; bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt:

047:030 But I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their buryingplace. And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

047:031 And he said, Swear unto me. And he sware unto him. And Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

048:001 And it came to pass after these things, that one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.

048:002 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

048:003 And Jacob said unto Joseph, God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me, 048:004 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make of thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession.

048:005 And now thy two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

048:006 And thy issue, which thou begettest after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

048:007 And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Bethlehem.

048:008 And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

048:009 And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them.

048:010 Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see. And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them.

048:011 And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face: and, lo, God hath shewed me also thy seed.

048:012 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

048:013 And Joseph took them both, Ephraim in his right hand toward Israel's left hand, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israel's right hand, and brought them near unto him.

048:014 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the firstborn.

048:015 And he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, 048:016 The Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth.

048:017 And when Joseph saw that his father laid his right hand upon the head of Ephraim, it displeased him: and he held up his father's hand, to remove it from Ephraim's head unto Manasseh's head.

048:018 And Joseph said unto his father, Not so, my father: for this is the firstborn; put thy right hand upon his head.

048:019 And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great: but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.

048:020 And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.

048:021 And Israel said unto Joseph, Behold, I die: but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

048:022 Moreover I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite with my sword and with my bow.

---

049:001 And Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.

049:002 Gather yourselves together, and hear, ye sons of Jacob; and hearken unto Israel your father.

049:003 Reuben, thou art my firstborn, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power:

049:004 Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel; because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: he went up to my couch.

049:005 Simeon and Levi are brethren; instruments of cruelty are in their habitations.

049:006 O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united: for in their anger they slew a man, and in their selfwill they digged down a wall.

049:007 Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

049:008 Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise: thy hand shall be in the neck of thine enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee.

049:009 Judah is a lion's whelp: from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up?

049:010 The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.

049:011 Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes:

049:012 His eyes shall be red with wine, and his teeth white with milk.

049:013 Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea; and he shall be for an haven of ships; and his border shall be unto Zidon.

049:014 Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens:

049:015 And he saw that rest was good, and the land that it was pleasant; and bowed his shoulder to bear, and became a servant unto tribute.

049:016 Dan shall judge his people, as one of the tribes of Israel.

049:017 Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.

049:018 I have waited for thy salvation, O LORD.

049:019 Gad, a troop shall overcome him: but he shall overcome at the last.

049:020 Out of Asher his bread shall be fat, and he shall yield royal dainties.

049:021 Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words.

049:022 Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall:

049:023 The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him:

049:024 But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel:)

049:025 Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb:

049:026 The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

049:027 Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

049:028 All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.

049:029 And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite, 049:030 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a buryingplace.

049:031 There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.

049:032 The purchase of the field and of the cave that is therein was from the children of Heth.

049:033 And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people.

050:001 And Joseph fell upon his father's face, and wept upon him, and kissed him.

050:002 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.

050:003 And forty days were fulfilled for him; for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed: and the Egyptians mourned for him threescore and ten days.
050:004 And when the days of his mourning were past, Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,
050:005 My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave which I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.
050:006 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.
050:007 And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,
050:008 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.
050:009 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.
050:010 And they came to the threshingfloor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan, and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father seven days.
050:011 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abelmizraim, which is beyond Jordan.
050:012 And his sons did unto him according as he commanded them:

050:013 For his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a buryingplace of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

050:014 And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

050:015 And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead, they said, Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

050:016 And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying, 050:017 So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

050:018 And his brethren also went and fell down before his face; and they said, Behold, we be thy servants.

050:019 And Joseph said unto them, Fear not: for am I in the place of God?

050:020 But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

050:021 Now therefore fear ye not: I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

050:022 And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years.

050:023 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation: the children also of Machir the son of Manasseh were brought up upon Joseph's knees.

050:024 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die: and God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land unto the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

050:025 And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

050:026 So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

EXODUS

---

001:001 Now these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

001:002 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

001:003 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

001:004 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

001:005 And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.

001:006 And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all that generation.

001:007 And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

001:008 Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

001:009 And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we:

001:010 Come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land.

001:011 Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses.

001:012 But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel.

001:013 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigour:

001:014 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in morter, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

001:015 And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives, of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah:

001:016 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him: but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

001:017 But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive.

001:018 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive?

001:019 And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

001:020 Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

001:021 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses.

001:022 And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

002:001 And there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

002:002 And the woman conceived, and bare a son: and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months.

002:003 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

002:004 And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

002:005 And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side; and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

002:006 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

002:007 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

002:008 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.

002:009 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages. And the women took the child, and nursed it.

002:010 And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

002:011 And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

002:012 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

002:013 And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

002:014 And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

002:015 Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well.

002:016 Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

002:017 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

002:018 And when they came to Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to day?

002:019 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

002:020 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread.

002:021 And Moses was content to dwell with the man: and he gave Moses Zipporah his daughter.

002:022 And she bare him a son, and he called his name Gershom: for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

002:023 And it came to pass in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

002:024 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.
002:025 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect unto them.

---

003:001 Now Moses kept the flock of Jethro his father in law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the backside of the desert, and came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb.
003:002 And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.
003:003 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt.
003:004 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I.
003:005 And he said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.
003:006 Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.
003:007 And the LORD said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows;
003:008 And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

003:009 Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel is come unto me: and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

003:010 Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

003:011 And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?

003:012 And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

003:013 And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them?

003:014 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

003:015 And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, the LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations.

003:016 Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

003:017 And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

003:018 And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath met with us: and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.

003:019 And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, no, not by a mighty hand.

003:020 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go.

003:021 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty.

003:022 But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

---

004:001 And Moses answered and said, But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The LORD hath not appeared unto thee.

004:002 And the LORD said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod.

004:003 And he said, Cast it on the ground. And he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent; and Moses fled from before it.

004:004 And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand:

004:005 That they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

004:006 And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous as snow.

004:007 And he said, Put thine hand into thy bosom again. And he put his hand into his bosom again; and plucked it out of his bosom, and, behold, it was turned again as his other flesh.

004:008 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe thee, neither hearken to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign.

004:009 And it shall come to pass, if they will not believe also these two signs, neither hearken unto thy voice, that thou shalt take of the water of the river, and pour it upon the dry land: and the water which thou takest out of the river shall become blood upon the dry land.

004:010 And Moses said unto the LORD, O my LORD, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

004:011 And the LORD said unto him, Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? have not I the LORD?

004:012 Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say.

004:013 And he said, O my LORD, send, I pray thee, by the hand of him whom thou wilt send.

004:014 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well. And also, behold, he cometh forth to meet thee: and when he seeth thee, he will be glad in his heart.

004:015 And thou shalt speak unto him, and put words in his mouth: and I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do.

004:016 And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God.

004:017 And thou shalt take this rod in thine hand, wherewith thou shalt do signs.

004:018 And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father in law, and said unto him, Let me go, I pray thee, and return unto my brethren which are in Egypt, and see whether they be yet alive. And Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace.

004:019 And the LORD said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life.

004:020 And Moses took his wife and his sons, and set them upon an ass, and he returned to the land of Egypt: and Moses took the rod of God in his hand.

004:021 And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine hand: but I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go.

004:022 And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD, Israel is my son, even my firstborn:

004:023 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will slay thy son, even thy firstborn.

004:024 And it came to pass by the way in the inn, that the LORD met him, and sought to kill him.

004:025 Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it at his feet, and said, Surely a bloody husband art thou to me.

004:026 So he let him go: then she said, A bloody husband thou art, because of the circumcision.

004:027 And the LORD said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went, and met him in the mount of God, and kissed him.

004:028 And Moses told Aaron all the words of the LORD who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him.

004:029 And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel:

004:030 And Aaron spake all the words which the LORD had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people.

004:031 And the people believed: and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped.

---

005:001 And afterward Moses and Aaron went in, and told Pharaoh, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness.

005:002 And Pharaoh said, Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the LORD, neither will I let Israel go.

005:003 And they said, The God of the Hebrews hath met with us: let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the desert, and sacrifice unto the LORD our God; lest he fall upon us with pestilence, or with the sword.

005:004 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your burdens.

005:005 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

005:006 And Pharaoh commanded the same day the taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying, 005:007 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

005:008 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

005:009 Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.

005:010 And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

005:011 Go ye, get you straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

005:012 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

005:013 And the taskmasters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

005:014 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to day, as heretofore?

005:015 Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

005:016 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

005:017 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle: therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

005:018 Go therefore now, and work; for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

005:019 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not minish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

005:020 And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

005:021 And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our savour to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

005:022 And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, LORD, wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

005:023 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

006:001 Then the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand shall he drive them out of his land.

006:002 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the LORD:

006:003 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

006:004 And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

006:005 And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant.

006:006 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am the LORD, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments:

006:007 And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

006:008 And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage: I am the LORD.

006:009 And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel: but they hearkened not unto Moses for anguish of spirit, and for cruel bondage.

006:010 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

006:011 Go in, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, that he let the children of Israel go out of his land.

006:012 And Moses spake before the LORD, saying, Behold, the children of Israel have not hearkened unto me; how then shall Pharaoh hear me, who am of uncircumcised lips?

006:013 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

006:014 These be the heads of their fathers' houses: The sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel; Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi: these be the families of Reuben.

006:015 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman: these are the families of Simeon.

006:016 And these are the names of the sons of Levi according to their generations; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari: and the years of the life of Levi were an hundred thirty and seven years.

006:017 The sons of Gershon; Libni, and Shimi, according to their families.

006:018 And the sons of Kohath; Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel: and the years of the life of Kohath were an hundred thirty and three years.

006:019 And the sons of Merari; Mahali and Mushi: these are the families of Levi according to their generations.

006:020 And Amram took him Jochebed his father's sister to wife; and she bare him Aaron and Moses: and the years of the life of Amram were an hundred and thirty and seven years.

006:021 And the sons of Izhar; Korah, and Nepheg, and Zichri.

006:022 And the sons of Uzziel; Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Zithri.

006:023 And Aaron took him Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab, sister of Naashon, to wife; and she bare him Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

006:024 And the sons of Korah; Assir, and Elkanah, and Abiasaph: these are the families of the Korhites.

006:025 And Eleazar Aaron's son took him one of the daughters of Putiel to wife; and she bare him Phinehas: these are the heads of the fathers of the Levites according to their families.

006:026 These are that Aaron and Moses, to whom the LORD said, Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their armies.

006:027 These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt: these are that Moses and Aaron.

006:028 And it came to pass on the day when the LORD spake unto Moses in the land of Egypt, 006:029 That the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, I am the LORD: speak thou unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say unto thee.

006:030 And Moses said before the LORD, Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me?

007:001 And the LORD said unto Moses, See, I have made thee a god to Pharaoh: and Aaron thy brother shall be thy prophet.

007:002 Thou shalt speak all that I command thee: and Aaron thy brother shall speak unto Pharaoh, that he send the children of Israel out of his land.

007:003 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt.

007:004 But Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you, that I may lay my hand upon Egypt, and bring forth mine armies, and my people the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments.

007:005 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I stretch forth mine hand upon Egypt, and bring out the children of Israel from among them.

007:006 And Moses and Aaron did as the LORD commanded them, so did they.

007:007 And Moses was fourscore years old, and Aaron fourscore and three years old, when they spake unto Pharaoh.

007:008 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

007:009 When Pharaoh shall speak unto you, saying, Shew a miracle for you: then thou shalt say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and cast it before Pharaoh, and it shall become a serpent.

007:010 And Moses and Aaron went in unto Pharaoh, and they did so as the LORD had commanded: and Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh, and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

007:011 Then Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers: now the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

007:012 For they cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents: but Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

007:013 And he hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

007:014 And the LORD said unto Moses, Pharaoh's heart is hardened, he refuseth to let the people go.

007:015 Get thee unto Pharaoh in the morning; lo, he goeth out unto the water; and thou shalt stand by the river's brink against he come; and the rod which was turned to a serpent shalt thou take in thine hand.

007:016 And thou shalt say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve me in the wilderness: and, behold, hitherto thou wouldest not hear.

007:017 Thus saith the LORD, In this thou shalt know that I am the LORD:
behold, I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river, and they shall be turned to blood.

007:018 And the fish that is in the river shall die, and the river shall stink; and the Egyptians shall lothe to drink of the water of the river.

007:019 And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Take thy rod, and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all their pools of water, that they may become blood; and that there may be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood, and in vessels of stone.

007:020 And Moses and Aaron did so, as the LORD commanded; and he lifted up the rod, and smote the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh, and in the sight of his servants; and all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

007:021 And the fish that was in the river died; and the river stank, and the Egyptians could not drink of the water of the river; and there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

007:022 And the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, neither did he hearken unto them; as the LORD had said.

007:023 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house, neither did he set his heart to this also.

007:024 And all the Egyptians digged round about the river for water to drink; for they could not drink of the water of the river.

007:025 And seven days were fulfilled, after that the LORD had smitten the river.

008:001 And the LORD spake unto Moses, Go unto Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

008:002 And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs:

008:003 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up and come into thine house, and into thy bedchamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneadingtroughs:

008:004 And the frogs shall come up both on thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.

008:005 And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

008:006 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

008:007 And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

008:008 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, Intreat the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

008:009 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Glory over me: when shall I intreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

008:010 And he said, To morrow. And he said, Be it according to thy word: that thou mayest know that there is none like unto the LORD our God.

008:011 And the frogs shall depart from thee, and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people; they shall remain in the river only.

008:012 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses cried unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

008:013 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

008:014 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land stank.

008:015 But when Pharaoh saw that there was respite, he hardened his heart, and hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

008:016 And the LORD said unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch out thy rod, and smite the dust of the land, that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

008:017 And they did so; for Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the earth, and it became lice in man, and in beast; all the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

008:018 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they could not: so there were lice upon man, and upon beast.

008:019 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the finger of God: and Pharaoh's heart was hardened, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

008:020 And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh; lo, he cometh forth to the water; and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

008:021 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses: and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

008:022 And I will sever in that day the land of Goshen, in which my people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there; to the end thou mayest know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth.

008:023 And I will put a division between my people and thy people: to morrow shall this sign be.

008:024 And the LORD did so; and there came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt: the land was corrupted by reason of the swarm of flies.

008:025 And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

008:026 And Moses said, It is not meet so to do; for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

008:027 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness, and sacrifice to the LORD our God, as he shall command us.

008:028 And Pharaoh said, I will let you go, that ye may sacrifice to the LORD your God in the wilderness; only ye shall not go very far away: intreat for me.

008:029 And Moses said, Behold, I go out from thee, and I will intreat the LORD that the swarms of flies may depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people, to morrow: but let not Pharaoh deal deceitfully any more in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the LORD.

008:030 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

008:031 And the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people; there remained not one.

008:032 And Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.

---

009:001 Then the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

009:002 For if thou refuse to let them go, and wilt hold them still,

009:003 Behold, the hand of the LORD is upon thy cattle which is in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the camels, upon the oxen, and upon the sheep: there shall be a very grievous murrain.

009:004 And the LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

009:005 And the LORD appointed a set time, saying, To morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

009:006 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and all the cattle of Egypt died: but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

009:007 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, and he did not let the people go.

009:008 And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, Take to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven in the sight of Pharaoh.

009:009 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

009:010 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a boil breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast.

009:011 And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils; for the boil was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians.

009:012 And the LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

009:013 And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

009:014 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou mayest know that there is none like me in all the earth.

009:015 For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth.

009:016 And in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

009:017 As yet exaltest thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

009:018 Behold, to morrow about this time I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail, such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

009:019 Send therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field; for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

009:020 He that feared the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

009:021 And he that regarded not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

009:022 And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth thine hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

009:023 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent thunder and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

009:024 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

009:025 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.

009:026 Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

009:027 And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

009:028 Intreat the LORD (for it is enough) that there be no more mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

009:029 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the earth is the LORD's.

009:030 But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

009:031 And the flax and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was bolled.

009:032 But the wheat and the rie were not smitten: for they were not grown up.

009:033 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

009:034 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

009:035 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken by Moses.

---

010:001 And the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might shew these my signs before him:

010:002 And that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

010:003 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? let my people go, that they may serve me.

010:004 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to morrow will I bring the locusts into thy coast:

010:005 And they shall cover the face of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field:

010:006 And they shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; which neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

010:007 And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a snare unto us? let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God: knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?

010:008 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God: but who are they that shall go?

010:009 And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go; for we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

010:010 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you, as I will let you go, and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

010:011 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

010:012 And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

010:013 And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and when it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

010:014 And the locust went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

010:015 For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

010:016 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron in haste; and he said, I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

010:017 Now therefore forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and intreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death only.

010:018 And he went out from Pharaoh, and intreated the LORD.

010:019 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

010:020 But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

010:021 And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.

010:022 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

010:023 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place for three days: but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

010:024 And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you.

010:025 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

010:026 Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not an hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

010:027 But the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.
